43 Sealed Indictments Found in Bunco Probe

ACCUSED OFFICERS WILL HAVE INQUIRY
BEFORE PROBES

Legal Representatives Have Not Yet Given Any Indication as to Their Line of Defense.

PAYNE DENIES CHARGES MADE BY M'WHORTER

Claims "Diabolical Conspiracy" — Attorney for Joe Ewing Assails the Henry Rehard Affidavit.

Interest in the council committee's investigation of Atlanta's police and detective departments next week centers on what line of defense will be established by the heads of the departments to counteract the cumulative proof of connivance or incompetency on the part of the same operators, organized gambling houses, and notorious blind tigers as introduced by Eugene R. Black, counsel for the citizens' committee.
Forty-three sealed indictments returned by the grand jury in its bunco inquiry during the latter part of the week and kept closely guarded by the solicitor-general, formed further fuel for speculation.

So far, Judge J. K. Hines, Robert Jones and Herbert Clay, counsel for the officers of the detective department under fire, have given no indication as to what tactics they would pursue. They have hinted at startling revelations, regarding sinister forces that were at work which prohibited the detectives from dealing efficiently with the bunco band.

It is also known that they will make efforts to prove that in dealing with several phases of Atlanta criminology they were handicapped by the failure of Solicitor-General Boykin to co-operate with the police when the cases reached the higher courts.

In addition to this line of evidence it is certain that a great number of prominent Atlanta citizens will be called on to testify that they have found the police and detectives efficient and that the officers, who are under fire, have good characters.

Then too, every witness put up by Mr. Black, whose credibility can be assailed, will be assailed. Ever since the investigation started, detectives have carefully noted who has appeared against the officers and the records of the witnesses have received the closest sort of scrutiny.

However, though, Mr. Black has formally completed his evidence, he has left himself opportunity to introduce more evidence in sur-rebuttal and there are ample indications that the solicitor-general's office is holding back trump cards to play in the final stages of the inquiry.

The fact that twenty-five sealed indictments were returned by the Fulton county grand jury Thursday and that eighteen more were returned Saturday, and that all of them are in connection with the bunco probe, is taken to mean that there may be dramatic developments during the coming week.

Two Thousand Tech
Students to Preach
Campaign Sermons

Every Man and Woman in City Will Hear Heart-to-Heart Appeal for a Greater Georgia Tech.

CITY TO BE DIVIDED INTO VARIOUS ZONES

Work Will Be Conducted Under Military Regulations and Every Square Foot Will Be Covered.

Every man and woman in the city of Atlanta will hear during Monday, Tuesday or Wednesday, a heart-to-heart appeal for a greater Georgia Tech. They will hear reasons why every Atlanta should contribute to the $5,000,000 share of the $50,000,000 expansion fund, and will hear it from a student of Georgia Tech.

Two thousand students of the institution have offered their services to the campaign. The consent of the faculty obtained, the local executive committee, has accepted the offer, glad of the opportunity to be aided by the splendid young men they know the Tech student body to be. The campaign, systematized to the very detail, will be under military supervision, commanded by Major A. L. Pendleton, commandant of the Tech R. O. T. C.

Atlanta, every square foot of it, has been divided into zones. Each zone has been subdivided and the students will go to work with every man and woman in their assigned territory and preach to them the gospel of a greater Georgia Tech. No man is better acquainted with Georgia's needs and Tech's chances of supplying it than are these men at the north side institution.

An evidence of their faith: Saturday it was announced that just 50 per cent of the student body had reached in the drive there for funds, among the students themselves. This does not include the contributions of the faculty, every member of which has subscribed generously.

Twelve Companies.
There are twelve companies in the R. O. T. C. The twelve companies will be divided into squadrons of four each, each headed by a commissioned officer, a non-com or an upper classman. A particular sector will be assigned to each party for each of the three days' work. The men volunteered to the work of the drive at the white heat of enthusiasm over the opportunity to do something big for their alma mater and their state. They are shooting at a worthy goal—$500,000—and are confident of its attainment.

China Shop Bull
Yields the Palm
To Motor Truck

Three Women Injured When Vehicle Invades Soda Water Stand.

The old story of the bull in the china shop was moderated Saturday afternoon, the revised version being entitled the motor truck in the soda water shop. Three women were painfully injured in the accident, and the negro driver was arrested.

The motor truck, owned by the George Moore Ice Cream company, and driven by Will Bolton, 27 years old, of 31 Griffin street, became unmanageable as it was proceeding down the grade from Hunter street toward Pryor and Whitehall streets, about 6 o'clock Saturday afternoon. Swerving onto the sidewalk, it knocked down a fire alarm post on the corner of Pryor and Hunter.

Pushing the fire alarm post through the door of the Courthouse Soda company's store on the corner, the motor truck plunged into the shop. At the counter, sitting soda were Mrs. C. B. Meadows, of 317 East Georgia avenue, the daughter of Police Commissioner Johnson; Miss Ruth Craven, an employee of the Beck & Greig Hardware company, and Miss Olivia Osborn, of Ingleside. When the fire alarm post entered the store, the patrons scattered in terror, but the three women were caught and struck by the post and the truck, which followed it, the radiator was pressing against the soda counter. Both the store and the truck were damaged.

Miss Craven received a fracture of the leg, and the other two women were cut and painfully bruised.
All were taken to Grady hospital for treatment. Deputy Sheriff Leaner, who, with Detectives Lee Whatley and Fred Smith, had seen the accident, arrested Bolton and booked him at the police station on charges of reckless driving and drunk and disorderly behavior.

OF MISTREATMENT TO NEGROES HERE

Booklet Prepared by Governor Hugh Dorsey Given Out for Publication
Saturday Afternoon.

CASES WERE REPORTED WITHOUT SOLICITATION

Peonage, Lynching, Organized Lawlessness and Individual Cases of Cruelty Are Mentioned.

Basing his material on reliable information furnished him during the past two years, Governor Hugh M. Dorsey has prepared a booklet on "The Negro in Georgia," which deals with lynching, cruelty and holding in peonage of blacks. The pamphlet mentions the celebrated Williams' "murder farm" case, and while no names are mentioned by the governor, an excellent index of the real evidence in his possession is outlined.

At a meeting of the inter-racial committee at the Piedmont Friday, Governor Dorsey read his booklet and went into an interesting discussion of conditions in this state.
His presentation of the matter and the interest he has taken in improving the situation, which was brought to a climax by the John S. Williams case, has attracted much favorable comment.

The governor divided his discussion into four parts—the negro held in peonage, the negro driven out by organized lawlessness and the negro subject to individual acts of cruelty. One hundred and thirty-five examples of alleged mistreatment of negroes in Georgia were mentioned. All the cases were reported to the governor without solicitation, he stated, and in presenting them he declared that the majority of the better elements of the state were in favor of improvement.

HOT FIGHT WAGED TO LEAD HOUSES

Candidates for President and Speaker in Assembly Are in Accord With the Governor-Elect.

Governor-elect Thomas W. Hardwick will enter office in June with both the president of the senate and the speaker of the house in accord with his expressed policy regarding taxation, appropriations and other questions of state-wide interest, according to statements issued Saturday night by several of the candidates and the known attitude of others.

With the reconvening of the general assembly on June 22, much interest is being manifested in the two races. Three candidates for president of the senate issued formal statements Saturday night, each expressing confidence of his election and briefly outlining his platform.

Herbert Clay, of Marietta, who has been conducting a campaign for over five months, declared that he was fully in accord with the policies advanced by the governor-elect and would support his administration. J. B. Jackson, of Gray, stated that he favored the budget system, which has been outlined by Governor Hugh M. Dorsey, and amendments to the state tax equalization law.

Best Interests of State.
While O. A. Nix, of Lawrenceville, did not elaborate on his platform, he said that he "stood for the best interests of the state," and predicted that he will be elected on the basis of his record.

CAPITAL SILENT
AS GERMAN NOTE
FAILS TO ARRIVE

New Reparations Communication From Berlin Fails to Reach Washington Saturday Night.

Washington, April 23.—Germany's new note to the United States on the reparations question had not arrived in Washington tonight, although press dispatches from Berlin said it was dispatched during the day.

Officials at the state department, prior to the receipt of the German note, refused generally today to discuss the reparations question.
One thing appeared certain in connection with the reparations question, so far as concerns Washington. That was that should a reply be considered necessary to the new German note, the nature of the reply would be laid before the diplomatic representatives here of the allied governments before its dispatch. This course is known to have been followed in the case of Thursday's note to the Berlin government.

BRITAIN WILL ABIDE

Lympe, England, April 23.—(By The Associated Press.)—It is Great Britain's intention to abide by the provisions of the agreement arrived at in Paris last January with regard to what steps should be taken to coerce Germany into meeting her reparations debt; she agrees that failure by Germany to meet her obligations in this respect should be met with further pressure.

This became known in the course of today's meeting between Premier Briand and Premier Lloyd-George.

PROTESTS FILED AGAINST PENSION
PAYMENT SYSTEM

Should Case Be Placed in Court It Would Result in Holding Up $574,645
Now Due Veterans.

Condemning the action of Commissioner J. W. Lindsay in paying the old class of Confederate pensioners, while ignoring for the second consecutive year the new class, created in 1919 by the general assembly, the Covington county pensioners Saturday filed protests with both the governor and the pension department, which are the first of many objections that may result in throwing the matter into the courts for settlement.

While no official announcement has been made by the veterans' assembly, the commissioners' order, it is known that such action is being contemplated. The old pensioners take the position that the pension department has no authority to be partial to one class when the other has not been paid the fund appropriated for this purpose in 1920.

Should the veterans place the case in the courts, it will result in the payments due to be made to the first installment of the old class by Wednesday of this week being halted by injunction proceedings until the question is definitely settled.

Approximately $1,100,000 in pensions is due the new class. When the additional pensioners were created in 1919 no provision was made for their payment, as it was impossible for the legislature to foresee the number of qualified applicants.
In 1920, however, an appropriation was made to pay the new class, but the funds were never provided.

With this deficit confronting them, officials of the pension department are now at a loss as to how to pay the 1921 allowances, as no appropriation was passed by the last general assembly.

Warrants for $574,645 to pay the first installment of the old class have already been signed by the governor. It is stated, and payments will be started immediately. These payments will not cover the increases granted in 1920 by the general assembly, but will amount to the same sums paid the veterans last year. It is seen, therefore, that a large deficit will be caused by the non-payment of the increases.

HOUSING COMMISSION
ASKED BY CONVENTION

Lively Tilt Occurs at the Morning Session Over Resolution Asking Pardon for Debs.

A new precedent was established at the closing session of the labor convention Saturday, when, for the first time in the history of the Georgia Federation of Labor a woman was elected to fill the position of an officer, Mrs. Maggie E. Sewell, of Atlanta, delegate representing the garment workers of the Atlanta Federation of Trades, was among the five elected as vice presidents of the state association during the ensuing year, having thus bestowed upon her an honor never before enjoyed by a woman of Georgia.
The other four vice presidents were men.

A resolution demanding the release of Eugene V. Debs, the socialist presidential candidate, confined in the Federal penitentiary for his expressed opinions opposing America's participation in the world war, resulted in a lively tilt at the closing session of the four-day conference of the Georgia Federation of Labor in the Labor Temple on Saturday. Luther H. Still, of the Atlanta Typographical union, strongly opposed the resolution, which was finally adopted over a determined resistance. Another feature of the day was the passage of a resolution calling for a state housing commission.

At the close of Saturday's session, which marked also the close of the four-day session of the twenty-third annual convention of the Georgia State Confederation of Labor, it was unanimously decided that the 1922 convention would be held in Macon. Letters from the mayor and chamber of commerce of that city were read, inviting the 1922 gathering to meet there.

Officers Are Named.

The following officers were elected for the ensuing year: John G. Valentine, of Savannah, representing the Chatham county electrical workers, president; B. E. Petrey, of Columbus, typographical union delegate, and retiring minor clerk, vice president; R. G. Smith,

BOND ELECTION
WON IN SUBURB

Issue of $70,000 for Improvement and School Tax Increase Is Passed in College Park.

College Park, Ga., April 23.—(Special.)—School bonds in the sum of $50,000, sewer outfall bonds for $10,000, and paving bonds for $10,000, were voted by a large majority Saturday afternoon in College Park.
An amendment to the school tax, whereby the levy is increased from 1/2 per cent to 1 per cent, was also voted. Fred Schaefer, chairman of the bond commission, declares that the elections were virtually won by the voting of the women. This was the first occasion upon which women have voted in College Park.

The bonds and school tax amendment elections were won by overwhelming majorities in every ward of College Park except the third. In this ward, the bonds for schools, sewerage outfall and paving bonds all defeated. There were in the entire city 815 qualified voters registered.

With the ballots from each of the three wards counted, there were 598 votes for the school bonds, and 197 against; and 478 for the paving bonds and 209 against. For the sewerage outfall bonds, there were 507 votes cast favorably, with 189 against.

Voting of Wards.
Voting by wards was as follows:
Ward 1—School bonds, 175 for, 12
against; sewer outfalls, 165 for, 25 against; paving, 168 for, and 23 against.
Ward 2—School bonds, 258 for, 80
against; sewer outfall, 246 for, 83
against.

ELEVENTH SEASON OF METROPOLITAN SINGERS BEGINS

Rosa Ponselle Here and Beniamino Gigli Arrives
This Afternoon, Accompanied by Billy Guard.

FIRST PERFORMANCE IS "ANDREA CHENIER"

Great Increase in Out-of-Town Patronage — Hotels and Railroad Stations Are Crowded.

Officers of the Atlanta Music Festival association announced Saturday that the booth where single seats for the opera of great grand opera may be bought will be moved to the Auditorium Monday. It has formerly been located at the Cable Piano company's store, but will reopen Monday morning at 9 o'clock at the Auditorium.

Tomorrow evening at the Auditorium, Atlanta's eleventh season of metropolitan grand opera will open.
Today the great influx of people from all quarters of the southland begins, and the city expects its most splendid and appreciable week of music festival.

The first of the stars to arrive was Rosa Ponselle, who is now at the Georgian Terrace, resting after a strenuous concert tour while on leave of absence from the Metropolitan organization. Beniamino Gigli, the sensational new tenor of Giulio Gatti-Casazza's group of singers, will arrive this afternoon at 5 o'clock. Accompanying Mr.
Gigli will be Billy Guard, the official publicist and diplomat of the organization.

Both Miss Ponselle and Mr. Gigli will sing in "Andrea Chenier," Giordano's opera, which will open the season Monday night. The remainder of the season will be the greatest proportion of them, will pull into Atlanta Monday morning on a special train.

The interest which has been taken in the approaching season of opera has been unsurpassed by any of the seasons past. The guaranteed fund for this year's season was raised within four days; after the books were opened, and the sale of seats, both for the season and for single performances, has been consistently heavy.

Non-Resident Patrons.

Sales have been marked by the great increase in out-of-town patronage, since the season began. It was this year to afford the non-resident patrons of the season the same opportunity to secure good seats in the auditorium as has been afforded those living in Atlanta.
Two entire sections for the patronage of those not living in Atlanta, and C. B. Bidwell, treasurer of the Atlanta Music Festival association, has filled orders rapidly from the reserved seats, without conflict with the local sale program.

The season which opens Monday night brings, in addition to many old Atlanta favorites, a number of new lights who have during the past season achieved stardom in the opera world.

PROGRAM DECIDED FOR FARM BUREAU

Rate Reductions, Tariff Protection and Credit Facilities to Be Sought by Federation.

Washington, April 23.—Repeal of the guaranty section of the transportation act, reduction in railroad rates, and equal protection for agriculture were announced today as the legislative program which the American Farm Bureau Federation will recommend to congress as an aid to farmers. The program was formulated by the executive committee of the federation after a two weeks conference here.

Strong opposition was expressed to any sales tax, to repeal of the excess profits tax and to any tariff on lumber and fertilizer. Another recommendation proposed the submission of a constitutional amendment prohibiting the leasing of all tax-free securities as "more than $10,000,000 in securities now escape a federal tax."

The federation reaffirmed its stand for packer regulation vested in the department of agriculture, tax on land.

Different Factors. The attention of congress was called to the "important and differing factors affecting food products from the American farm in their relationship to imports of like products from foreign countries."

in considering the labor cost in making up the tariff law. Attention of congress was also directed to the "center of food production in the United States as being 'somewhat' in the Mississippi valley, while the populous areas of the east, 'many hundreds of miles away.'"

Ocean freight rates from competing countries to the consuming centers, were declared to be much lower "than are the exorbitant and increasing freight rates from our farms to our own consumers."

Not Adequately Financed. After setting forth that "recent experiences" have shown that the farmers are "not adequately financed," and that their welfare is jeopardized when they avail themselves of the present short-time commercial credits, the federation recommended legislation to provide proper authority for commodity and cattle financing, and for personal credit secured by proper insurance features. It also asked that profits from the federal reserve bank be used as a revolving fund to provide working capital during the interim between requests for money and the sale of the debentures.

Recommendation was made that such debentures be eligible for sale in federal reserve banks or on the open market, increase of the maximum amount which may be loaned to a single borrower from the federal land banks from $10,000 to $25,000 was suggested.

Announcement was made that a committee, consisting of John Brown, Indiana, W. G. Jamison, Colorado, and Chester H. Gray, Missouri, had been named to study the Muscle Shoals, Alabama, project. The committee will hire engineers for the work, and report their findings to the executive committee.

The annual cost of maintaining one soldier in Germany is 25,000 marks (normally $6,250).

Bomb Confessor Believed Crazy; Ligi Identified

Brooklyn Man Says He Saw Ligi on Scene of Big Explosion.

New York, April 23.—Two sharp developments marked today's search for the perpetrators of the Wall street bomb explosion last September.

In Scranton, Pa., Tito Ligi was positively identified as a man seen talking to the driver of the death wagon shortly before the tragedy, by Thomas J. Smith, of Brooklyn, employed in the legal department of an insurance company in Manhattan.

The other incident that caused unusual police activity was the suicide of Adolph La Sar, 37 years old, in his furnished room in Brooklyn. In an incoherent diary mentioning half a dozen names of men in New York and Chicago, was written: "They furnished the wagon load of T. N. T. with which I blew up Wall street."

Close examination of the man's effects and inquiry into his habits while in the Brooklyn house convinced the police tonight that the suicide was mentally deranged and none of the evidence associated him with the crime. Three suits leaving his clothing and a few personal effects to persons who could not be located were among the papers. In another note to his landlady he said he was "leaving for a better world."

WOMAN GIVEN PLACE BY GEORGIA LABOR

Augusta, vice president; J. O. Morgan, Macon, representing the moving picture operators' union, vice president; Mrs. M. E. Sewell, Atlanta, representing the garment workers of the Atlanta Federation of Labor, vice president; B. O. Kohls, Waycross, representing railroad carmen, vice president; Louis P. Marquardt, of Atlanta, secretary and treasurer; W. F. Rader, of the touring president, delegate to the American Federation of Labor; James A. Miller, attorney at Atlanta council, and George F. Hanev, representing the Blacksmiths' Union of Georgia, delegate to the Farmers' union.

The fight on the adoption of a resolution petitioning the legislature for legislative action on the maximum law of nine hours a day, which was postponed from the morning session, was resumed immediately after the opening of the afternoon session. Jerome Jones was the strongest advocate of this law, and urged that action be taken before the convention closed. He stated that the women who are affected by the non-enforcement of a law now in effect specifying the maximum working limit per day, required by law, of ten hours a day, could not fight their own cause, as they were forced to work from 62 to 70 hours a week, and this left them no time in which to try to secure the enforcement of the law governing their working conditions.

Claims Law Violation. This was corroborated by E. S. Callahan, of Columbus, representing the striking textile workers of that city, who declared that, contrary to the law that ten hours was the maximum that could be forced upon employees, the men and women were forced to work from ten and eleven hours a day, or from sixty-two to seventy hours a week.

The question of child labor was brought up and discussed. The president-elect was directed to investigate the reports of violations of the existing child labor laws of Georgia, instances of which were cited, and to make a report of the conditions as he found them. After considerable discussion, the resolution favoring the adoption of the maximum limit to working hours, and the resolution changing the existing law from ten to nine hours a day, was submitted to the legislative committee for further action, the convention having concurred in the measure.

Debate Over Debs. Perhaps the most heated debate of the entire four-day session occurred during the morning session of the closing day when a resolution favoring the release from confinement in the United States prison of Eugene V. Debs was introduced by William Wier, of the Atlanta Typographical union.

Luther H. Still, also of the Atlanta Typographical union, made a strong exception to this proposal, and heatedly replied to the remarks made by Mr. Wier.

"Although I am, strictly speaking, opposed to war, Mr. Still said, 'there comes a time in every nation's life when men's personal feelings and sentiments of pacifism must be put aside to meet a national danger. We fought Germany in self-defense, and it was a time after our entry into the war, to put aside all personal sentiments and stand ready to receive and support the sentiments of Americanism.'"

"But there were men who did not and would not voice this sentiment, and who were ready to support the sentiment of Americanism. For instance, the man under discussion, Eugene V. Debs, now in the penitentiary for his pro-German utterances, was the type of whom I speak. When the government wanted to do something, this man deliberately and with calm premeditation allowed himself on the side of the emperor of Germany, and set about to devise means and schemes of thwarting the United States government in its fight against human liberty and democracy."

Opposed to Resolution. "I am unalterably disposed to the labor organizations of Georgia taking any action in regard to this man, for Debs is not an American, and does not embody any of the American spirit, but he is the man who is fast becoming the greatest menace in American life. Our boys were shot down by the Germans in France, and there was sacrifice and unerring loyalty on the part of every American. But Debs was a traitor, except his liberty, by his attacks on the American war policy, and his advocating of sedition. And now he is paying the penalty for his disloyalty, and I say to the Georgia Federation of Labor, let him stay there, for he is a menace to the people of the state of Georgia and to America."

Further adding that "a man of Debs' caliber is not a danger to the country but the United States, have been lined up against a stone wall and shot at sunrise," Mr. Still closed by again stating his unalterable opposition to organized labor taking any action in regard to the case of Debs, and added that "it would be evitable to reflect on the sound principles of foreign policy which has always been the standard of organized labor movement."

Debs is still in the hands of George F. Bell, of the Tailors' union, who stated that the resolution dis-

Marital Triangle In Single Dwelling Found in Brooklyn

Belgian With French and Flemish "Wives" Occupied the Same Apartment.

New York, April 23.—The recent story of the Jersey City broker who was alleged to have housed two "wives" under one roof, was rivaled today in Brooklyn.

Complaints by detectives that Antoine Ruyt, a Belgian, was living in a Brooklyn apartment with two wives—one Flemish and the other French—led to his arrest on a charge of bigamy. He was held in $1,000 bail for a hearing Monday.

Ruyt is alleged to have married Madame Marie Pierre Labor, a Parisian widow, New York, in January, 1920, while his other wife and her two daughters were living in Antwerp.

Detectives learned, they said, that after Ruyt had installed the French woman in his Brooklyn apartment, he sent for his Flemish wife and family. They arrived in November, 1920, and immediately were assigned quarters in the Ruyt household. Wife No. 2 appears to be "boss," according to investigators, and has the choice of quarters.

The detective before whom Ruyt is employed in a theatrical costume establishment and go to and from work together each day. Since one speaks only French and the other Flemish, they communicate by code, rapping on wood.

Ruyt is 45 and an iron worker. He told authorities he met the "second Mrs. Ruyt" after he had fled his native city, when German troops attempted to force him to work.

CLABO'S COUNSEL WITHDRAW IN CASE OF ALLEGED BRIBE

Nashville, April 23.—Senator E. N. Clabo, republican of Sevier county, Tenn., is no longer represented by his counsel before the senate committee which is investigating his alleged acceptance of a bribe.

The attorney for the defense, who had been retained by Clabo, announced the decision to withdraw from the proceedings this morning after the committee had arraigned the attorney for their action in filing a petition Friday which sought the dissolution of the committee.

The opinion of the investigating committee, which was read by Vice Chairman W. W. Craig, was in the nature of a rebuke. It is demanded progress of the defense was accused of having filed the petition as a pretext for withdrawing. Senator Craig announced that the committee had anticipated such action, and that the committee contained an invitation to Senator Clabo to appear in person and testify in his own behalf.

The withdrawal of Senator Clabo's counsel will not retard the progress of the investigation, it is said. Two witnesses were heard, and when the committee adjourned at noon it was to meet again Monday morning to go further into the Clabo matter.

FARMERS WILL GET LOAN OF $4,000,000 FROM LAND BANK

New Orleans, April 23.—Over $4,000,000 for the farmers of Louisiana, Mississippi and Alabama soon will be available through the sale of federal land bank bonds. F. Davis, president of the New Orleans branch of the Farmers' Union, announced tonight that the amount will be distributed among the more needy farmers, it was stated, as the demand for funds at present far exceeds the supply of money in sight.

Many sales of the new 5 per cent bonds have been reported in this district. The local bank a few days ago sold $20,000 worth of these bonds in one lot.

Since the organization of the farm loan banks the local branch has distributed among the farmers more than $25,000,000. When the legality of the farm loan organization was put at issue in a suit filed in Kansas City nearly two years ago the sale of bonds to the investing public was stopped, and has only recently been resumed.

Bomb Confessor Believed Crazy; Ligi Identified

Brooklyn Man Says He Saw Ligi on Scene of Big Explosion.

New York, April 23.—Two sharp developments marked today's search for the perpetrators of the Wall street bomb explosion last September.

In Scranton, Pa., Tito Ligi was positively identified as a man seen talking to the driver of the death wagon shortly before the tragedy, by Thomas J. Smith, of Brooklyn, employed in the legal department of an insurance company in Manhattan.

The other incident that caused unusual police activity was the suicide of Adolph La Sar, 37 years old, in his furnished room in Brooklyn. In an incoherent diary mentioning half a dozen names of men in New York and Chicago, was written: "They furnished the wagon load of T. N. T. with which I blew up Wall street."

Close examination of the man's effects and inquiry into his habits while in the Brooklyn house convinced the police tonight that the suicide was mentally deranged and none of the evidence associated him with the crime. Three suits leaving his clothing and a few personal effects to persons who could not be located were among the papers. In another note to his landlady he said he was "leaving for a better world."

Approximately two hundred delegates attended the twenty-third convention of the Georgia Federation of Labor, which was held at the Georgia Hotel in Atlanta, April 21-24, 1921.

A resolution of thanks adopted by the convention, expressing appreciation of the hospitality extended them.

CONFIDENCE FELT IN FARMER RANKS

Barrett Believes Administration Will Homer Rates and That Congress Will Institute Probe.

BY JAMES A. HOLLOMAN.

Washington, April 23.—(By Constitution Leased Wire.)—Satisfied that the president would take such steps as would result in a reduction of freight rates and that congress would get busy toward passing farmer legislation, more than three hundred farmers who have been in Washington during the past week attending the convention of the National Farmers' union, left the city for their homes today.

C. S. Barrett, president of the organization, who left tonight for Georgia, said everything indicated that the government would do all possible to meet the demands of agriculture for freight reductions. He said that in congress there was a particularly friendly feeling; that he had talked with scores of men in both branches of the national legislature and found a very general desire to do something substantial to relieve the present situation.

Will Act Promptly. "I have reason to feel that congress will act promptly on a number of bills now before it and I feel that the president, the interstate commerce commission and other agencies will take up the question of a reduction in freight rates and bring about something substantial in that direction," said Mr. Barrett. "We have asked the government to act quickly and give us such temporary relief as will justify the country in entertaining the hope that a permanent adjustment will speedily follow."

I have talked with scores of men in both branches of congress and I have found not one who was indifferent to the problems now before the country. All professed a deep interest in agriculture and none refused to admit that a satisfactory settlement of this question depends on the future prosperity of the nation.

These seems to be disposition in congress to ignore party lines. All our friends on both sides of the two houses appear to want to act in concert. I have seen and correctly read this disposition and accurately interpreted the desires of the statesmen with whom I have conversed on this subject."

Hopes for Conference. Mr. Barrett said he hoped that the president would see his way clear to call a conference of spokesmen for all the great interests, including labor. If this conference is called, the farm union labor said he was sure, at least, that a basis for the settlement of questions now irritating the country would be found.

Congressman Campbell, chairman of the rules committee of the house, said he had information which inclined him to believe that the president would submit the farmer memorial to the cabinet. Mr. Campbell said he was sure the president was impressed by the showing made by the farmers, and that the matters suggested would be earnestly considered.

Mr. Barrett said he had every reason to believe that the cotton men and the cotton growers would work together for the purpose of eliminating evils that both branches of the farm industry had long complained of. He said the bill of L. R. Jackson, making it a felony to sell cotton unless the actual staple is in sight, would receive the support of grain farmers everywhere.

Helps Materially. "Mr. Jackson has helped us very materially in our conferences here, and Senator Mills has been no less useful," said Mr. Barrett. "A splendid spirit was manifested toward each other by the farmers of the west, east and middle west, and the cotton growers. I think the history of the first time in the history of American agriculture that growers of the two indispensable staples have made common cause. They have gotten together in spite of efforts by interested and selfish organizations to keep them apart. It is a manifest fact that the case of the farmers would be weakened by a division between the grain men and the cotton men. It is gratifying to know that they are recognizing an identity of interest in this fight to stop the practice of gambling in cotton and other staples.

Mr. Barrett said he was pleased to find such men as Senator Capper, of Arkansas, and Senator Capper, of Kansas, getting together for the common good of agriculture. These senators are assured of the hearty co-operation of the entire cotton investigation.

Mr. Barrett started home Saturday night. He said he would soon return to Washington to assist in getting a resolution calling for the creation of a special agricultural commission or inquiry adopted. The resolution will be introduced in the senate Monday, and in the house at the same time by Senator of Wisconsin, and by Senator of Kansas, respectively.

Police Blackmail Probe to Be Made By Jury in Macon

Attorney Sam Hunter to Lay Evidence Before Grand Jury This Week.

Macon, Ga., April 23.—(Special.)—Attorney Sam Hunter announced tonight that he will lay his charges of "blackmail and corruption in the Macon police department" before the Bibb county grand jury during the coming week. That was his answer to the statement of Chief of Police Martin Thompson and Detective Stevens that they would welcome an investigation.

"It will not be the kind of an investigation they want, for themselves and by themselves," said Mr. Hunter. "The practice of one part of a corrupt system investigating another part of a corrupt system is absurd," he declared.

Mr. Hunter has charged Chief Thompson and Detective Stevens with attempting to blackmail one of his clients by promising to drop a whisky case against the man if he would put up $125. Chief Thompson claims he was only following the usual custom of requiring collateral. Hunter's client refused to give up the money. The case was afterward dropped. Later, however, the defendant was brought before the United States commissioner.

Protection Alleged. In his statement tonight Mr. Hunter says: "I want every patriotic taxpayer of Macon this day to ponder the situation in Macon, not only as to the hold-up process, against which I rebel, but as to the existence in our midst of commercialized vice, gambling, hell, liquor selling and all other evidence of protected vice and crime."

"If you reach the conclusion that Macon is well policed, then you stand with the system. If you conclude that the department is guilty of graft or inefficiency, then you should stand before the grand jury for the county of Bibb is now sitting. I propose to go before that body and give them all the information in my power. I invite all good citizens to come and lay before the grand jury any information you may have."

YACHT GOES AGROUND, ESCAPES UNDAIMAGED

Norfolk, Va., April 23.—J. P. Morgan's yacht, the Corsair, went aground on Nantux shoals, off Plaquemine's island, near Cape Charles, this morning, while enroute to the cape in light weather. The coast guard cutter Manning answered her distress calls for assistance, but the Corsair worked herself free before the cutter arrived and proceeded to Old Point, apparently undamaged.

Ad Men Announce Program For Educational Meetings

BY C. V. HORNSTEIN.

Executive Secretary. Announcement has just been made from the central office of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World, giving some of the details of the educational program being arranged for the world's convention of advertising clubs in Atlanta June 12-15, 1921.

An address on "Business Morality—The Cornerstone of Prosperity," will sound the keynote of the convention Sunday afternoon, June 12, at the auditorium, to which the general public will be invited. One of the most distinguished orators in America has been secured for this occasion.

The first regular business session will be Monday morning following, and will be called the "let's go" session. At this time leaders in business and advertising fields, selected after mature consideration, will discuss their best thought on some of the vital problems of the day, especially with the vexing question of marketing goods in the world's unsettled condition.

An innovation has been scheduled for Monday afternoon, when four conferences are scheduled, each of which deals with the problem of promoting in a bigger way, the work being done by the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World.

Advertising clubs of the world, Tuesday and Wednesday, will probably be entirely consumed with separate departmental sessions, that is, separate educational programs by each of the twenty-five business classifications into which the members of the association are divided. Prominent among these will be the newspaper departmental, made up of delegates from every daily newspaper of consequence in America. From an artistic standpoint, the "piece de resistance" will be the advertising exhibit, to be staged Tuesday evening, June 14, in Taft hall, where there will be assembled all the finest advertising specimens from America, Europe, South America and the Orient.

Another big general educational meeting, illustrating in a broad way the service performed by advertising to build permanency in business, will all associate members of the advertising club who enroll under the privilege of attending the business sessions and women of Atlanta can attend these sessions and acquire valuable membership in the business wisdom of the past twenty years. Particulars regarding association membership can be secured by telephoning the executive secretary's office, Ivy 1556, at 397 Forsyth building.

Records for Wall Scaling Smashed by Atlanta Scouts

LIFE-SAVING EXHIBITIONS. Commodore W. E. Longfellow, national director of the American Red Cross life-saving corps, and president of the American Swimming association, will give life-saving examinations to the Atlanta scouts and scout officials Monday afternoon at 2:45 o'clock at the Y. M. C. A. pool. Scouts who are to instruct in swimming and life-saving during the summer camp in Camp Friendly, near Gainesville, Ga., will be present.

The boy scout organizations of Atlanta held a track meet and series of athletic contests in Piedmont park Saturday, which was pronounced the most successful ever conducted in this city. Troop 19 and troop 15 tied for first honors. The head judge of the National Scout Code of Honor, Commodore Longfellow, who is an expert on timing of athletic contests, set the wall scaling contest, won by troop 15, established a new world's record for boy scout records. The time made by this troop being 13 4-5 seconds. The following boy scouts comprise the team winning the event: Jack Wilkins, Floyd Moore, Robert Fahms, Franklin Cater, Alford Ruffy, Cozy Laird, Clifford Hendry and Cochran Wilson. Second place was won by troop 15, and third place by troop 25. Graves Smith, of troop 15, also won for his troop the scout pace, establishing a new record for scouts of 11 minutes 35 seconds. Gill Greverus, of troop 13, and Francis Plumb, of troop 15, won second and third places, respectively, for their troops.

Other events of interest were the equipment race, won by troop 15; stepping the 100 yards, by Graves Smith, of troop 15; first place, by Charles Kelly, of troop 15, second, by Charles Kelly, of troop 15, third, by Charles Kelly, of troop 15. The knot-tying contest was won by Hyman Cherry, of troop 23; James LeMay, of troop 13, winning second, and George Hardwell, of troop 13, third. Bandaging was won by William Eikas, of troop 15, assisted by Leal Scheff and Frank McCormack. Other features of the meet were tent pitching, fire by friction, and verbal relay messages. The event was won by troop 19, composed of the following scouts: James LeMay, William Eikas, Frank McCormack, Francis Plumb, Charles Cook, Clement Ford, Leal Scheff and George Cole.

The judges were: Kendall Wells, Forrest B. Fisher, J. M. McRae, Jr., Julian V. Boehm, Roy Flanning, and timekeeper, A. W. Falkenberg. Hundreds saw the scouts participate in these events, and the fact that they were winning a prolonged, lasting from 2 o'clock until almost 6 o'clock, did not detract from the keen enjoyment of the efforts of the boys by the visitors.

I. W. W. Chieftain Propaganda Head For the Soviet

Agents Believe Haywood Was Chosen for Position by Lenin.

Chicago, April 23.—Federal officials said today they had received information that "Big Bill" Haywood, I. W. W. chief, who is believed to be in Russia, had gone to that country to become head of the propaganda bureau of the soviet government.

"We have information that Haywood was chosen for this work by Lenin after being recommended by certain radicals who have been deported from the United States," said Charles F. Cline, United States district attorney. "We understand that the first fields for Haywood's propaganda will be Germany, Poland, Sweden, Norway and Finland. He will attempt to bring about uprisings there, we believe."

Offered Position. "Our information is that Haywood was approached by secret agents of Russian government and offered the position. I doubt very much if it will be possible to ex-cancellation of the Russian treaty. Haywood's time limit for reporting at the Leavenworth, Kansas, penitentiary, where he was scheduled to serve twenty years for obstructing war activities, expires Monday.

Others Also Leave. Mr. Cline said he believed that two or three other members of the industrial workers of the world had accompanied Haywood to Russia and that they would return to this country "to flood it with Russian gold in the interest of the soviet government."

He said he was not surprised at a report that Haywood was to become a chief in the soviet government.

"He is especially fitted for propaganda work," said Mr. Cline, "for he brought the membership of the I. W. W. up to 400,000 in this country and it has dwindled to 30,000 since he was convicted and consequently could not continue his organization work."

Rainey, Kirkwood; president, M. D. Collins, Fairburn; vice president, G. W. Glauser, Decatur; secretary and treasurer, Daniel Bros. Co.

Indemnity Bond On Coolidge's Coat Is Issued to Judge

Vice President's First Overcoat Disappeared in Atlanta.

Pittsburg, April 23.—An indemnity bond for $57.57 on Vice-President Calvin Coolidge's overcoat was issued here today to Federal Judge Joseph Buffington. The judge attended the inaugural ceremonies at Washington March 4 and during the excitement he walked away with the vice-president's overcoat, mistaking it for his own. The bond is designed to protect the coat while the vice-president attends the founder's day exercises at Carnegie Institute here next Thursday.

The bond, duly signed and sealed, insures the overcoat in the sum of $57.57 against loss of theft or sundry other causes, while the vice president is in Pittsburg.

While the coat is insured, the contents are not and under the bond the owner of the coat must wear it from 7 a. m. until midnight Thursday. Another clause provides that Mr. Coolidge must notify Mayor Hancock as soon as he arrives here.

LAUREL, ILL. April 23.—Four women are running for the offices at stake in the municipal elections here without uttering a single word in the way of a campaign.

Tallula, the majority being men. But the women, headed by Mrs. S. COURTS TO DECIDE THREE BIG ISSUES

Emergency Tax, Municipal Market, and Bond Validation Are Assailed in Recent Petitions.

Several matters of vital importance to the people of Atlanta will be determined in the Fulton superior court this week. One is the validation of the $8,850,000 bond issue which was approved by the voters in a special election March 8; second, is the question involving the legality of an appropriation of $42,500 for the purchase of a site for a municipal market; third, is an effort to eliminate the emergency tax of 12-1-2 cents per $100.

The legal fight against the emergency tax levied by city council comes in the form of a petition for permanent injunction against the city to prevent the levying of this tax. Henry B. Scott, president of the Atlanta Real Estate board, acting on behalf of that body and other citizens, brought this suit. It comes up Monday morning in the motion division of the superior court.

The plaintiffs declare in their petition that the special tax of 12-1-2 cents per $100 is illegal, in that the "emergency" it seeks to meet is not an emergency under the terms of the law. The tax was levied by city council to meet a deficiency in the funds used for the payment of school teachers, certain repairs and improvements to the waterworks and other items pertaining to municipal departments.

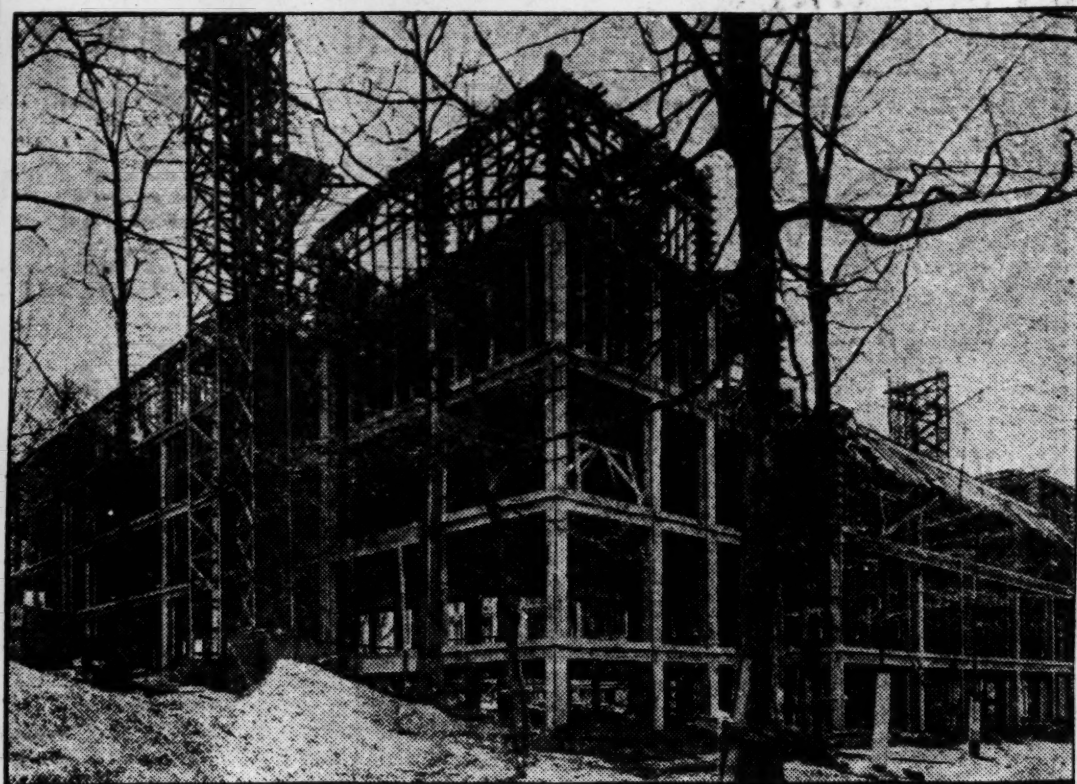

The legal firm of Moore & Emswiler appears for the plaintiffs, while City Attorney James L. Mayson represents the city of Atlanta.

On Wednesday in the motion division, the petition of 30 county truck growers for a permanent injunction to prevent the county commissioners from giving $42,500 toward a municipal market, will be heard. It is claimed by the petitioners that the county in appropriating a sum to the city for a municipal market is violating the constitution of the state which prescribes how tax money shall be spent. The law firm of Rosser, Sloan, Phillips & Hopkins, represent the petitioners.

The validation of the $8,850,000 bond issue is the subject of the motion division. The legality of these bonds is attacked by Walter R. Brown, well-known Atlanta attorney who insists that certain legal requirements were not met in calling the bond election, making up the registration lists and filling the petition for validation.

On June 29, 1927, a total eclipse of the sun will be visible in England, the first to be seen there in more than two centuries.

the university group and will accommodate a large number of patients. The most modern equipment obtainable will be installed, and, in so far as possible, the building, both interior and exterior, will be fireproof.

FARMER IN FLOYD COMMITTS SUICIDE BY USING SHOTGUN

Rome, Ga., April 20.—(Special.)—J. P. Price, a farmer living six miles from Rome, committed suicide at his home by shooting himself in the breast with a shotgun which he discharged by using a poker from the fireplace. Ill-health is assigned as the cause of his self-destruction.

His wife, with one of their young daughters, had gone to a neighbor's house when the suicide occurred. The other little girl, aged 12, was playing in the yard when her father shot himself. A coroner's jury found a verdict of suicide.

RUDENESS TO WOMAN PUTS SLEUTH IN JAIL

Savannah, Ga., April 23.—(Special.)—For treating a woman roughly, Howard O'Dell, head of a local detective agency, the Eagle Eye, faces besides a term of six months in jail, a sentence of twelve months on the chain gang or payment of a fine of $1,000, imposed by Judge Rourke in the city court Friday afternoon.

The man was arrested on charges preferred by A. S. Griffin, who said that the private detective forcibly pushed Mrs. Griffin aside, and entered his home on the pretense of searching for a burglar. Griffin was at one time employed by O'Dell.

SMALL TORNADO HITS VICINITY OF ALBANY

Albany, Ga., April 23.—(Special.)—Considerable damage was inflicted in the vicinity of the Kineba County club, near here, when a miniature tornado struck Friday morning, just north of Albany. The club house was just north of the path of the gale. Telephone poles and fencing in the vicinity of the clubhouse were blown down, and an automobile was carried 100 yards by the wind. No loss of life or serious property damage was reported.

Women and Booze Caused Downfall, Say War Heroes

Blaming women and liquor for their deviation from the straight and narrow path, Loyd Frost and James H. Williams, former vocational students at the state agricultural college, are held at Fulton tower in default of $2000 bonds, following their arrest by government authorities in Knoxville.

Both young men are veterans of the world war. They are charged with forging the names of officials of the University of Georgia to government pay checks for large amounts. When arrested they were taking courses at the University of Tennessee, to which institution they were transferred shortly after the forgeries were committed.

The boys admitted to federal officers the alleged forged signatures were written by them. It is claimed, but declared they must have been intoxicated at the time, as they didn't recall doing so.

Frost blamed his downfall on liquor and Williams said: "Liquor drove me to this."

Frost said that soon after becoming a vocational student in Athens some time ago, he married, and he took up drinking because of domestic trouble. He stated Williams was his close friend, and that it was Williams who suggested the forgeries were committed.

According to officers, both young men are prominent in their communities. Their parents probably will come to Atlanta Sunday and remain with them until they enter a plea of guilty before United States Judge H. Sibley on Monday.

TRIAL OF CLOY CASHIER CONTINUED FOR TERM

Savannah, Ga., April 23.—(Special.)—Newspapers from Springfield, Effingham county, today state that W. B. Puttelle, former cashier of the Farmers' Merchants' bank at Cloy, and C. C. Beville, indicted by special presentments of the grand jury now in session upon charges of defrauding the bank of $16,000, will not be tried at the next term of the Effingham court. The trial of the McKenzies murder case consumed several days of the term.

It is charged that Puttelle verified a false audit of the bank's statement of condition and that he cashed checks to the amount of more than $16,000, signed by Beville, when Beville, it is declared, did not have any money in the bank.

PEACEMAKER IS SHOT AFTER DICE GAME ROW

A pistol shot through the hand was the penalty received Saturday by Artie Williams, colored, a peacemaker in a row in the Seaboard Airline freight office between Ed Wright and Will King, two other negroes.

The dispute arose when King accused Wright of passing him a bad dollar in a dice game Friday night. Both men are said to have taken positions behind posts, 16 feet apart, and started to fire. Williams attempted to settle the quarrel and a ball took effect in his hand. It was afterwards removed at Grady hospital.

THIRTIETH SESSION OF D. A. R.'S ADJOURNED

Proceedings of Final Session of Convention is Largely Formal.

Washington, April 23.—The Daughters of the American Revolution adjourned their thirtieth national congress today after installing officers elected yesterday. While proceedings of the final session were of a perfunctory nature, announcements of candidacy for president general in the 1923 election by several aspirants, and the action of the resolutions committee in pigeonholing a resolution introduced early in the week calling upon members of the society to aid in a strict enforcement of the Volstead prohibition act, proved interesting topics for the delegates.

The prohibition resolution called attention to the fact that the D. A. R. was pledged to support the constitution and, as the eighteenth amendment was a part of the constitution, the organization should give it strong support. When the committee, in submitting its final report, failed to refer in any way to the resolution, there was considerable comment from supporters of the dry move.

Mrs. Anthony Wayne Cook, of Pennsylvania, and Mrs. William M. Reynolds, of North Carolina, were formally announced as candidates for president general, which office will be filled in 1923. Mrs. George Thompson, of Georgia, was reported as having withdrawn her candidacy for president general. It further was reported among the delegates that Mrs. William Cummings Story will shortly announce her candidacy for the leadership.

Mrs. George Maynard Minor, president, general, was given a rising vote of thanks for the efficient manner in which she handled the congress just closed.

WEEKS AND PERSHING CONFER ON NEW STAFF

Washington, April 23.—Organization of the new staff of the army was discussed at a conference today between Secretary Weeks and General Pershing. The conference was the first since the announcement this week that General Pershing was to be assigned to the important duty of building up a general headquarters designed to take over in time of war the direction of the nation's military forces in the field.

Name of Deceased Georgia Soldier Cleared in Trial

Three Guilty and Five Innocent in Jail-Storming Case.

Jonesboro, Tenn., April 23.—A verdict of guilty was returned this morning against Walter Goff, Walter Blevins and Byrd Moody, charged with conspiracy in connection with the shooting up of the jail at Jonesboro last October. Ten others were acquitted of the charge. Another defendant died recently. Motion for new trials have been entered by the trio convicted, which will be heard next week by Judge Vines. They offered an alibi as their defense.

Under the laws of the state the verdict carries with it a penalty of from three to twenty-one years in the penitentiary.

Fourteen men were indicted by the Washington county grand jury following the alleged conspiracy to storm the county jail in an effort to secure a negro, Casey Dallas, who it was alleged had made improper remarks to a white girl on the afternoon previous in a restaurant at the National Soldiers' home. The girl, it is alleged, later denied that the negro made the remarks, and the negro was released.

Euford Adams, one of the men exonerated, died several days ago following an operation. He was an ex-service man of Georgia.

"Who Owned the Bean?" Is Question Puzzling Canadian Tribunal

Hamilton, Ontario, April 23.—Responsibility for possessing a bean of the ordinary garden variety today furnished the basis of a $5000 lawsuit in the assizes court here. The suit was brought by William and Isabella Gilbert against A. McDougall for compensation for injuries suffered by Mrs. Gilbert when she slipped on the bean on from of the defendant's stall in a vegetable market nearly a year ago.

The plaintiffs were unsuccessful in a lower court, because of lack of evidence that McDougall owned the bean.

COMMITTEE APPROVES ARMY PROMOTION LIST

Name of Edwards Will Be Among Those Going to Senate Monday.

Washington, April 23.—Despite some democratic objection to Brigadier-General Clarence R. Edwards, the senate military committee today voted to recommend confirmation of the twelve major and fourteen brigadier generals nominated recently by President Harding for promotion.

General Edwards, who commanded the Twenty-sixth (Nebraska) division overseas until relieved by General Pershing, and returned home, was the only nominee on the list under fire. The committee vote on his name today was reported to have been 12 to 3, with three democrats opposing and three others voting for his confirmation. Those said to have opposed General Edwards included Senators Hitchcock of Nebraska, and McKellar of Tennessee. Senators Robinson of Arkansas and Myers of Montana, democrats, were reported to have joined the republican committee members in supporting him.

All of the nominations of general officers along with that of Charles G. Dawes, of Chicago, to be a brigadier general on the reserve list, will be submitted to the senate Monday. No opposition was expressed to the Dawes nomination.

KHAKI CLAD LADS IN GREAT PARADE

Impressive Ceremonies to Mark Atlanta's Observance of Memorial Day. Line of March Named.

Impressive ceremonies will mark Atlanta's observance of Memorial day on Tuesday, when the city stops for a while to commemorate the brave deeds of the soldiers, while the last fading remnant of the thin gray line is given the honor in the tribute being paid to their comrades who have gone before them. As is always the case, the living heroes of Lee's and the other great armies will be the feature of the parade, but the impressiveness and dignity will be added by the appearance of soldiers who have fought since those bitter days; men younger than the gray-clad, but men who willingly honor their sacrifices.

Plans are complete for the parade of the day, which is expected to be the greatest of its sort in Atlanta for a decade past. F. W. McWhorter is marshal of the day, and announces herewith the names of his staff and those who will command the various divisions of the procession, five in number.

Oakland cemetery will be the objective of the parade, which will start at the junction of Peachtree and Baker streets, proceed up to Whitehall and down East Hunter to the cemetery.

In addition to the presence of the Confederate veterans, impressiveness will be added to the march commemorating the heroes who have given their lives for the right cause by the presence of the Spanish war veterans, the disabled veterans of the world war, and detachments of troops from the army posts in Atlanta's vicinity.

R. O. T. C. Units to March.

The R. O. T. C. regiments of Emory and Tech, as well as those from local high schools, will march in the procession, and the children of the grammar grades will turn out in force. It is especially ordered by the marshal that the children of the grammar grades be in their places at 1:30 sharp Tuesday afternoon, and adequate arrangements have been made for quick and efficient placing of the groups in their marching order.

The marshal's aides are Charlie Cox, George Killian, Clark Howell, Jr., Homer Thompson and H. V. McCord, Jr.

The following are the division chiefs and their aides: First, Basil Stockbridge, chief, Rufus Barnett, James Harrison and Eugene Oberdorfer; Second, Otey B. Mitchell, chief, Saunders Jones, Charlie Thompson and T. H. Hartson; Third, F. W. McWhorter, chief, James Barlow, Roy Dorsey and Thomas A. Thrash; Fourth, T. C. Davidson, chief, G. P. O'Keefe, W. E. Persons and Dana Belser; Fifth, John Slaton, chief, Kirk Smith, Hill Freeman and Vernon McKillan.

These aides and chiefs will be responsible for guiding the troops to their locations, having the units present on time, seeing that the units move out in their regular order and in regulating the march.

Leading the entire procession will be Chief James L. Beavers and a detachment of mounted police, to be immediately followed by the marshal.

To Fire Volley.

When Oakland cemetery has been reached, a firing squad from the Fulton high school will fire three volleys over the graves of the Confederate dead and buglers from Marist college will sound "taps" after the sound of the last volley has died away. AGREES TO HALT GOLD MOVEMENTS.

Paris, April 23.—(By the Associated Press.)—Germany, instead of either agreeing or refusing to transfer the gold reserve of the reichsbank to occupied territory in the Rhine, as the allies have demanded, has offered not to export or permit the exportation of gold from Germany before October 1, next.

The note was signed by Dr. von Cernigoi, for the war minister, and pointed out that the removal of the reichsbank's gold would be a further step toward German exchange, and furthermore, that the gold reserve was not directly under the control of the ministry of finance, but was private property.

The transfer, the note contended, would not serve as a guarantee for reparations payments, as the commission seemed to think, the depreciation in exchange growing out of it would result in a general economic weakening of Germany.

DIPLOMATS APPROVE AMERICAN STAND.

Washington, April 23.—Approval of the course of the American government with respect to the reparations controversy is believed to have been indicated by the allied diplomats here before the dispatch of Secretary of State Hughes to Berlin appeal that President Harding act as mediator and fix the sum Germany must pay. It became known today that the German request and the American reply were discussed informally by the secretary of state and the European ambassadors, and it is understood that the foreign envoys were apprised of the character of the reply in the interim between the receipt of the German memorandum and the sending of the response.

State department officials were awaiting today the answer from Berlin, which press dispatches from that city indicated was about to be made after being placed before the reichstag. Until its receipt, officials are withholding comment on the whole subject. It is expected, however, that whatever proposal is made will be submitted first to the diplomatic representatives here.

SOUTH AND WEST FORM ALLIANCE

Acting Jointly to Protect Agriculture—Are Meeting Administration and Eastern Opposition.

BY JAMES O. HOLLOMAN, Constitution Bureau, Raleigh Hotel.

Washington, April 23.—(By Constitution Leased Wire.)—That there is developing a firm and formidable alliance of the agricultural south and west in congress to enact legislation that is not only stubbornly fought by the republican old guard of the east, but is just as vigorously opposed secretly, if not openly, by President Harding, is a situation that is comforting the republican senate insurgents and not pleasing to the administration.

This condition will take concrete shape next week in the Kenyon-Kendrick packer bill, and in the Capper-Tincher exchange trading bill, both of which the administration opposes. And yet, through a combination of southern and western interests in congress, with the aid of the republican bolters of the Harding policies, as developed in the Colombian treaty fight, both of these measures are on the high road to final enactment.

Packer Regulation. The Kenyon-Kendrick packer regulation bill is to be brought forth at once. Its passage is to be expedited. It commands a majority of votes in the senate. Could a secret ballot be taken it would lose, but republican senators from west of the Mississippi river are afraid to oppose it publicly. It would trust the government into a policy of violent conflict with Mr. Harding's political principles.

"We will pass the bill within a month," Senator Kenyon, of Iowa, said. "The bill will be reported out probably on Monday, just as it passed on January 21."

The Capper-Tincher bill to regulate trade in grain futures as virtually wrecked the Chicago board of trade will follow the packer bill. With few exceptions the "Roosevelt" republican senators who favor the packer bill and who oppose the Colombian treaty, even though it meant losing caste with the white house, will be found in line on the grain exchange legislation.

The progressive republican group in the senate now numbers about fifteen. On a strict party vote they could defeat administration measures. There are thirty-seven democrats. Forty-nine is a majority in the senate. The progressives are inclined to force the fighting on matters in which they have a vital interest.

Harding's Position. President Harding is committed to oppose such proposals as packer regulation and the prohibitions on grain and cotton futures trading. When the opponents of the Kenyon-Kendrick bill succeeded in killing it in the house last March, they made no effort to conceal their belief that if it were enacted after Mr. Harding took office he would veto it.

The senate vote for passage of the packer bill in January was 46 to 38. Forty of those senators who were paired on the vote, the advocates of the legislation predict a decision of fifty-five votes for the bill. They do not believe the white house could beat the bill, even though the president made the effort.

Supporters of the Capper-Tincher bill will be heard before the house committee on agriculture next week on Monday and Tuesday and the afternoon of Friday. The opposition will have a hearing on Wednesday and Thursday and the forenoon of Friday. Four days of hearings on the Kenyon-Kendrick bill will be held by the house committee beginning May 2. The committee will report the measure on May 6.

The body of the house is held to be just as strong for the packer bill as is the senate. The rules committee prevented action in February and March.

BEAUTIFUL SUNDAY PROMISED ATLANTA

A Sunday fulfilling the hopes of all persons who must toil in office and mills during the week is promised for today. The sun will shine out of cobalt skies, gently warming the city until in the afternoon the mercury will be registering a comfortable temperature, neither too hot nor too cold.

It will be somewhat warmer than the prediction. The warm sun on Saturday dried out most of the roads, and motoring today will be a popular pastime. Blue Sunday advocates will suffer a severe shock if they venture near the golf links, as the indications point to a general turn-out of enthusiasts.

JAPS ENTERTAIN HOPE FOR WAP SETTLEMENT

Direct Negotiations With United States Considered Likely.

Tokio, April 23.—(By The Associated Press.)—The leading morning newspapers, following the official deliberations of Friday on the question of mandates, say they believe there is renewed hope of settlement of the problem through direct negotiations between Japan and the United States.

According to the Jiji Shimpo, Great Britain, France and Italy have advised Japan to resume negotiations with the United States. The newspapers express the opinion that Japan will adhere to her stand regarding rights acquired by mandate in Canton and Shanghai, but an amicable settlement by compromising on the question of communication.

A number of sensational articles have been printed attacking the American attitude as aggressive. In this connection, especial prominence is given by the press to a statement by Baron Sakatani, former finance minister, in which he says it would be the height of folly to attach undue importance to the Yaw problem and to suppose that war alone would settle it.

The best minds in Japan and America, Baron Sakatani declares, have agreed that the peace of the world should again be broken over the comparatively insignificant question of possession of a small island in the South seas.

"There is no doubt," the statement concludes, "that if the matter is dealt with honestly and candidly the way will be found to a solution which will not compromise either party."

G. O. P.'S DETERMINE ON PEACE PROGRAM

Revised Knox Resolution Will Be Reported to Senate Monday.

Washington, April 23.—Plans of republican congressional leaders for collecting peace resolutions for introduction were completed today at informal conferences.

The Knox resolution to that end probably will be reported to the senate Monday by the foreign relations committee as revised, in technical, legal details, by Senator Knox of Pennsylvania. Debates in the senate then will begin Tuesday or Wednesday and will, it is believed, be comparatively short. There is possibility of a slight hitch, according to democratic senators, in delay by foreign relations committee.

As a matter of general party policy, most of the senate democrats are expected to oppose the Knox resolution, but republican leaders expect that a number of democratic votes will be given to the resolution. A peace resolution similar to the Knox measure is to be introduced in the house Monday by Chairman Porter of the foreign affairs committee.

Reserve Officers Being Classified To Meet Emergency

Washington, April 23.—The 66,000 officers in the reserve corps are being classified so that men fitted for each definite assignment can be located and called into active duty in event of national emergency. The war department announced today that it was expected that a complete record of every officer in the organized reserves would be in the hands of the nine corp commanders not later than June 15.

Although stating that the preliminary classification was not expected to be anywhere near perfect, the war department said: "One of the great advantages of organizing the reserve forces in time of peace is that the mistakes of classification and assignment can be tested and corrected, whereas the compilation of these most important records and assignments are practically impossible to obtain in time of emergency."

Corp commanders have been directed to make an immediate study of their districts with a view to locating reserve units according to the local population. These studies are to be submitted to the department by June 1.

Mother, Charged With Kidnaping Children, Sought

Police in neighboring cities will be notified to watch for Mrs. Fannie Clay, of Griffin, who removed her three small boys from the Georgia Children's home in Ormewood court Friday afternoon through a ruse, unless she is located in Atlanta within a few hours. It was stated by local authorities Saturday.

Mrs. Clay called at the home late Friday afternoon to visit her three children, Raymond, Herman and Clarence, aged 2, 4 and 8 years, respectively, who were being kept at the home by a court order. According to Mrs. N. S. Jones, matron of the home, Mrs. Clay took a seat in the parlor and talked to her children for half an hour.

Mrs. Jones told police that Mrs. Clay stated she had come to Atlanta to secure employment, and asked permission to use the telephone. The request was granted, and the woman was heard to make an appointment for a taxi cab to call at the home for her in a few minutes.

The matron said that while she was in the babies' ward fixing the afternoon bottles for a number of babies, the woman disappeared, taking the three children with her.

Miss Martha Durren, agent for the home, was telephoned at her offices in the Atlanta Theater building to secure employment, and was informed of the disappearance, and the officers on all watches were requested to keep on a lookout for the mother and children.

"Mrs. Clay's children had been taken away from her by order of a court at Griffin about two weeks ago," the matron said. "Some charge had been made against the mother, just exactly what I do not know, but the children were sent to us to keep until they should be adopted by some worthy family."

YOUNG MAN ARRESTED ON ASSAULT CHARGE

Jesse Starnes Held by Police After Hearing Girl's Story.

Jesse Starnes, a white man, 25 years old, living on East Fair street, was arrested about 8:30 o'clock Saturday night by officers Davis and Evans, and is being held without bond on a charge of assault on a young white girl of Atlanta.

According to reports made to the police, the young woman was walking down South Boulevard when she was accosted by Starnes. She is said to have been forced into an alley, where upon becoming frightened at the man's approach, she fled, only to be overtaken several hundred yards up the alley. The girl collapsed in her mother's arms just as she reached her home.

Examination of her clothing showed that it had been badly torn in the struggle, and after being revived by an attending physician, she complained of severe pain in her right side, where she stated the man struck her.

135 CASES CITED OF MISTREATMENT

ment of Georgia citizens condemned the acts of lawlessness.

THE NEGRO LYNCHED.

County No. 1.

July, 1919, two white men, drunk, went to the negro section of a town in this county at night. An elderly negro was walking alone on the streets. It is claimed to have been shot in the back, and the shooting which followed one of the white men was killed. The negro was taken to the jail, where the sheriff left him there, with no guard, to go to another place to get a prisoner. A crowd gathered, hearing that a mob was coming, went to the jail to remove the prisoner, but could find no key to unlock the door. The mob had the key. They lynched the negro.

County No. 2.

October, 1918, a negro was taken from the sheriff, who was carrying him from one county to another. The negro was preached and taught in schools and churches were closed on account of influenza, and the negro went to work for a farmer.

In a dispute about extra work, the farmer attacked the negro with an ax. The negro raised his gun. The farmer turned and received a load of bird shot in the back. The negro fled but was brought back. The sheriff heard a mob threatening and removed the negro to another county. Hearing of a mob, started with the negro to another county, but was overtaken as described above.

County No. 3.

A negro charged with assault upon a white girl, was tied to a tree and shot to death in January, 1921. No indictment has ever been found. No arrest made.

Negro Peonage.

County No. 7.

(a) In 1920 a negro on the place of a white farmer in this county made a crop of 2 1/2 bales of cotton and two horse wagon loads of corn. The farmer refused to take the crop, and the negro was forced to leave the place. The farmer claimed the negro still owed him $118. In September the negro ran away to Atlanta, where he was arrested and carried back to the place. A brother of the complaining farmer, made the man's bond and carried him to the place. The negro worked a week. He escaped and walked to Atlanta, where he was arrested again. In his presence, the negro charged the farmer offered to sell him to another man, if the man would pay him $35.

County No. 8.

The whites deny this, but one admits that the other said something about paying him for the expense of his Atlanta trip. He says that he settled with the negro in December, 1920, when the negro agreed to work for him for $12.50 a month and his board, the farmer agreeing to take care of the negro. On this new trade, the farmer advanced the negro $5, and bought goods for him amounting to $35 in cash and the goods, that the negro was cheating and swindling was sworn out.

The wife of the negro, mother of a girl of nine, and a boy eight years old, confirms her husband's story with the additional fact that the farmer killed her husband while they were having a fight. The farmer's infraction of the law was the murder of the negro's husband.

Concerning William's Case.

(c) A negro was sentenced to 30 days in the Fulton county chain gang for vagrancy. When he had served enough of his time to be released, he was taken to the place of a farmer in this county paid him out.

With ten other negroes he was carried to the man's farm, where they were locked up for the night. They were guarded by two armed negroes, by day and locked up every night.

The man stayed from February 1

until September 1st when he and another negro ran away. They were caught, brought back, and whipped. The other negro begged to be killed. The white owner shot him. The white owner put upon him. His body was put in a nearby pond back of the owner's home.

Fifteen negroes were working on the place. They were frequently beaten.

Another negro was arrested in Atlanta and fined $25 for keeping late hours. The white man paid the fine in April, 1920, and carried the negro to the farm to work upon a promise of $40 per month, board and lodging. Three months later he was carried back to the same time. He remained for four months, when he escaped. He was caught and carried back, severely whipped and locked up.

He was whipped twice. He claims to have seen another negro beaten and then shot by a negro for running away, and at the instance of the white.

Since the investigation, the owner of one of these places has been indicted for killing eleven negroes on his place. He was convicted and sentenced to imprisonment for life in one of these cases, April 8, 1921.

His three sons were on April 11 indicted for murdering negroes.

His sons are fugitives.

The murders are alleged to have been committed to conceal the crime of peonage.

NEGRO DRIVEN OUT BY ORGANIZED LAWLESSNESS.

County No. 10.

1. A white man in this county received the following notice in January, 1921:

FARMERS PLAN NATIONAL TOWN MEETING

"To Mr. ... you had better keep negroes out of this house of yours if you don't want anything you have got will be burned to the ground."

"BeWare and take notice."

"NITE Rider. X"

County No. 11.

2. Negroes were being worked on a railroad in this county. A small mob visited the camp in February, 1921. They notified the white foreman and the negroes that if they continued to work, while white men wanted jobs, they would be mobbed. A number of the negroes fled in fright. The sheriff of the county protested that there was no danger. This occurred January, 1921.

County No. 12.

3. December 31, 1920, a negro living in this county was taken from his home and badly beaten. The same month small coffins were made and painted with a skull and cross bones, were left on the porches of two negro homes.

County No. 13.

4. January, 1921, negroes in one district of this county were notified that no negroes would be permitted to remain in that district.

At 2 a. m. January 12, a negro living in this district was called from his bed by unknown parties. They asked him if he had made through his district. He answered that he would be given until Saturday night to leave the district; that if he did not leave, there would probably be war against him. He asked him if he had seen the notice posted on the nearby negro school house and said that he had not seen it. He was told to leave, and that they had notified thirty negro families that night.

He was told to remain in the district, permitting two shots in the air, the parties left.

"WHITE CAPS"

The same night, the home of another negro farmer was fired into. The shot striking the ceiling, just above the head of the bed. The negro fled out of the house at the time.

The governor sent the sheriff of the county a writ calling attention to the charges against the Ku Klux Klan, and saying: "Negroes have been called from their homes, shots fired, threats made to do them physical injury, if they had no left by night. I have four affidavits of negroes who have never been in court and some of whom own their own homes. This is an outrage and I beg that you will go into this district this afternoon and tonight with armed forces to protect these negroes, but for the purpose of making such a display as will deter these worthless white people from continuing their campaign of terror."

Representatives of many farm organizations are in Washington for the national town meeting, arranged to plan a joint legislative program. Among the leaders are George P. Hampton, manager of the Farmers' National Council; William H. Johnston, president of the International Association of Machinists, and Benj. A. Marsh, secretary of the People's Reconstruction League.

other county. A committee of citizens waited upon the judge of the circuit who informed them, it is charged, that he would put the negro in the chain-gang, when the case should come up for trial.

The man, his daughters and son were tried in the superior court. The father was fined $200, the son $100, and the daughters $50 each. The girls were fined $50 each. The son was fined $100. The negro paid the fines for his children.

The man's smaller children and his wife were in his home, while he was in jail. A mob led by the town marshal went to the house, kicked the door and demanded admittance, then shot up the house and went away.

This was night. The woman and her children fled from her home never to return.

A friend went by night and removed the live-stock belonging to the family, and sold it for them at a great sacrifice. Their crop was a total loss. They will be lynched it is said, if any of them ever return to their home.

Reputable merchants and bankers in this county unite in giving the negro and his family a good character. The son has been offered a loan of $50 by a leading farmer to pay a note, the holder of which threatened suit during these troubles. A leading merchant gave the father a line of credit running from $500 to $1,500.

County No. 21.

One of the best citizens of the county signed his bond.

The education of his children and the success of his thrift seem to be the sole offense of the negro.

County No. 22.

A white citizen of this county had a negro boy arrested for failing to comply with his contract to work for him. The boy's defense was—he was drafted for service in our army, where he served fifteen months. This service caused him to break the contract.

A successful negro farmer came to the court house of the county to sign the bond, which the sheriff said he would accept, the white man, declaring "no negro shall help another negro to beat me out of my money," shot the negro twice.

No effort was made to arrest the white man, and the first grand jury refused to indict him. Subsequently he was arrested, indicted and convicted in April, 1920, of "shooting at another." His sentence was twelve months and six months in jail or a fine of $200. The negro recovered.

The education of the white man shown by his conviction of rape upon a negro woman under circumstances composed of leading white convicted him and sentenced him to twelve months in the penitentiary in January.

County No. 23.

In November, 1920, a negro preacher was forced at the point of a pistol to enter a motor car. He was carried three miles into the country, stripped, tied to a log and beaten. He was left unconscious. When he recovered consciousness, he left the county. He knows the names of those who beat him, but dares not tell for fear of death. The sheriff of the county writes the governor:

"I understand this negro has been trying to organize the negro women at ——— not to wash or cook for the white people only for a certain price. He is the reason he was whipped. I also don't think it would do any good to offer a reward, because we won't be able to convict anybody unless the negro that got whipped will swear to the parties."

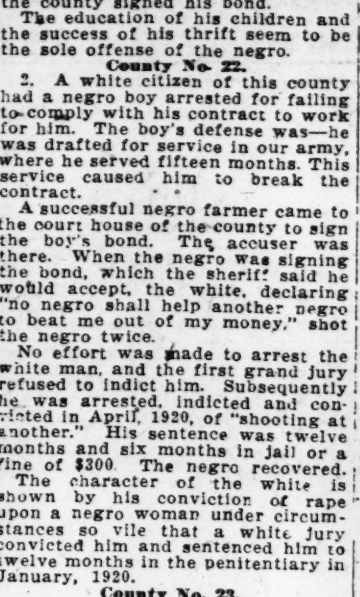

The Ready.

To end these conditions I would suggest:

1. Publicity, namely, the careful gathering and investigation by Georgians, and not by outsiders, of the facts as to the treatment of the negro throughout the state and the publication of the facts to the people of Georgia.

2. An organized campaign by the churches to place in every section

GOREE ASKS JOB AS POSTMASTER

Plan for Appointment of Three Referees to Pass on Political Plums Not Favored, He Says.

News of interest to members of the republican party of Georgia and Atlanta is contained in a statement issued Saturday by C. P. Goree, chairman of the state central committee of the party, in announcing his application for postmaster of the Atlanta office.

Mr. Goree, who returned from Washington a few days ago, where he had been on special business pertaining to the party in Georgia, stated that his application had been placed in the hands of the postmaster-general and was being considered by the department.

Commenting on the proposed plan for patronage distribution in the state, which includes the appointment of three referees to decide on the qualifications of applicants, Chairman Goree stated it did not appear to meet with the approval of party officials in the national capital and that another system would probably be used.

Under the system favored by members of the republican sub-committee, he said, all appointments will be handled directly by department heads, who will make the appointments from departmental investigations. Mr. Goree stated that members of the sub-committee had found no objection to the members of the proposed referee board, W. J. Tilson, prominent Atlanta attorney, and Charles Adamson, well-known manufacturer of Cedarhurst, who probably another representative from south Georgia, but that the direct system was probably more conducive to party harmony.

While in Washington Mr. Goree appeared before the sub-committee in opposition to the present plan of the various counties. His position, he explained, was that the present plan used by the republican party of Tennessee for county delegates at the state convention, which includes representation on a basis of the number of ballots cast in national elections.

It seems hardly fair that counties of the state voting large party tickets should be represented by delegates in the state convention from the counties which in some cases vote no party at all.

"The system used by the Tennessee republicans, and which I think is the greatest plan for the scope of the party in the state, is arranged so that each county will be given one state convention delegate for each 100 votes polled."

The sub-committee, with recommendations that the present plan be continued, but with the recommendation that the number of delegates be increased to 100.

YOUTH IS INJURED IN AUTO ACCIDENT; DRIVER ARRESTED

Ralph Williams, 9-year-old son of Mrs. Laura Williams, of 123 Echo street, is at the Georgia Baptist hospital in a critical condition, suffering from a fractured skull, received in an accident at the intersection of Marietta street and Belwood avenue at 2 o'clock Saturday afternoon.

Williams was struck by an automobile driven by J. V. Davis, of Riverdale, Ga., R. F. D. No. 5. At the time, J. B. Sumner, Jr., of the same address, and owner of the machine, was riding with Mr. Davis. According to a truck driver on the path of the approaching passenger car.

The injured child was rushed to the hospital in a passing automobile. Sumner and Davis went to police headquarters and reported the case to Lieutenant Gray Lindsay.

Davis was arrested Saturday night by Call Officers Anderson and Washington, who charged him with driving without a license. The accident was apparently unavoidable. Davis' bond was set at $500.

BIBLE CONFERENCE WILL CLOSE SATURDAY

The final session of the Wheat Street Bible conference will be held today, beginning at 10 o'clock with a platform meeting at 1 o'clock when several of the leading white citizens interested in the problem of the race will speak. Among them will be John J. Egan, Mayor Key, Dr. C. B. Wilmer and J. A. Mangert.

The night session, beginning at 7:30, will be filled to the brim with final messages of the speakers, who have been on the program during the entire week. In many respects, says Dr. Bryant, the pastor in charge, this conference will be the best ever held. Arrangements are being made already for the next year's session.

Praise Junior Chamber. Particular praise was sounded for the work done by teams composed of members of the Junior chamber of commerce—headed by J. H. Hickman and J. W. Wrenn. These teams were among the leaders in the campaign, and Robert Gregg, co-chairman of the phase, said in congratulating them: "We thought look what they have done for Tech."

The luncheon Saturday was enjoyed by stirring addresses from the Tech drive, and by Dr. K. G. Matheson, president of the institution.

Mr. Allen said that his extensive tour about the state interest of the campaign's complete success had demonstrated one fact in particular: that Georgia is looking on Atlanta as a pacemaker in the drive.

Concurrent with this development, it is interesting to note that the ordinaries of Georgia counties are allowed for the year before the pension handled. It is provided, however, that all pensions must be completely paid for the year before the ordinaries are payable. Since the 1920 payments are still unpaid, approximately $150,000 in these fees is being held.

The Resolution Adopted. The Coveta Resolution in full follows: "Resolved: That we read with surprise the announcement by the pension commissioner and the pension commissioner have decided to pay the old pensioners before paying the new pensioners the 1920 pensions. The pension you propose to pay the old pensioners is the 1921 pension. We see no reason for this partiality. The new pensioners were told to wait for their 1920 pensions until the new pensioners were paid. We condemn such acts of our public servants and regret that you have seen fit to prefer one veteran above another. All we ask is fair play, and we consider your re-nomination in this matter absolutely without justification."

Similar protests are being heard throughout the state, and authorities well informed on the situation stated yesterday that there is considerable doubt as to the right of the pension department to discriminate between the two classes, especially when veterans of the 1920 allowance. If court action is taken in the matter, it will probably come during the early part of the week.

Officials of the highway department take the position that the appropriation of the general assembly nothing can be done to relieve the situation until the next session is held in June. Commissioner Lindsey is preparing to request the legislature to pass a bill which will permanently solve the problem.

GERMANS EXPLAIN DELAY IN TRIALS OF WAR CRIMINALS

Berlin, April 23.—(By the Associated Press.)—The German government has addressed a note to the conference of ambassadors, explaining that a number of technical reasons, such as the non-arrival of evidence from Italy and other countries, have been the cause of delay in the trial of those accused of war guilt.

CITIES OF STATE RESPOND TO TECH

Augusta, Buford, Waycross, West Point, Brunswick, Columbus, Locust Grove Report Progress.

While Atlanta has been hard at work raising her quota for the greater Georgia Tech fund of $5,000,000—reports showing great progress, have been flowing into the state headquarters from every city, town and community of the state.

Augusta, for instance, up to Saturday morning had raised $2,000 of her quota after one day's work. The state campaign having begun April 22, Buford, the home town of Victor Allen, the state chairman, sent in its first installment of $12,000. Columbus stated that their first report, which will be rendered Monday morning, will show them well above the $50,000 mark.

J. A. Combs, the chairman of the campaign in Locust Grove, Saturday wired state headquarters that Georgia town had subscribed its quota within a few hours after the beginning of the campaign. Waycross, West Point, Brunswick and many other cities of the state have wired the information that their quotas had either already been obtained or were easily insight.

An interesting communication received Saturday was from the Blakely Hardwood Lumber company, of Blakely, Ga. This firm announced that it would give the first load of hardwood lumber to be used in the construction of flooring for the new buildings of greater Tech. The value of this contribution will be more than $500.

In addition to the work being carried on in Georgia, other states are reporting organization. Memphis Saturday reported the completion of its organization and made confident expression of the Tennessee city's willingness to move which means so much to the development of southern industry.

Ivy Lee, chairman of the work in the northern states, has reported several cities behind New York, well organized for the inception of their local campaigns. Notable among these are St. Louis, Chicago, Pittsburgh and Philadelphia, where there are many prominent alumni of Georgia Tech from which places substantial aid is expected.

and phase of the campaign was well prepared by the splendid reports at the luncheon of the twenty city-wide teams Saturday at the chamber of commerce. These men raised during the week just past approximately $200,000, the largest sum ever raised in an Atlanta campaign in the same length of time. The spirit of rivalry evoked between the teams has made the drive spirited from its start last Monday.

William Olden's team, with his last day announcement of $23,779.50, brought the week's total for the campaign to $82,523. Mr. Rich, announcing a record amount of $27,437 for Saturday's drive, raised a close second with $78,262. The total for all the teams Saturday was approximately a few hundred dollars of $100,000.

Particular praise was sounded for the work done by teams composed of members of the Junior chamber of commerce—headed by J. H. Hickman and J. W. Wrenn. Work Begins on $150,000 Church for Negroes

Sketch of new Wheat Street church for negroes.

Excavation work has just been started on Auburn avenue for the erection of the new Wheat Street Colored Baptist church. The plans have been prepared by Daniel S. Beutell, architect, and the construction will begin in May. This edifice, to be built at the cost of $150,000, and will be a modern church in every respect.

The main auditorium, which will have a seating capacity of 2,000 people, will be handsomely finished. The Sunday school auditorium, having capacity to seat 1,200, will have in connection with it Sunday school rooms, which will be arranged in an up-to-date and convenient fashion. In addition to this the church is to have ample rest rooms, committee rooms, play rooms, as well as rooms for dining and entertaining.

and that what Atlanta does the rest of the state will do.

Dr. Matheson thanked the workers for the splendid work they have done, and said that there was little doubt that Georgia and all Atlanta would respond to the appeal made with a complete endorsement of their belief in Tech's value to the great Georgia of the future.

Mr. Olden, in remarking on the experiences with which his workers met in their work, said that the "surface of Atlanta" has not yet been scratched. "And the work of being to be willingly given," he declared.

Confidence Is Felt. Great confidence is felt by the leaders in the success of the effort. Mr. Willis, the Atlanta general chairman, was especially fervent in his praise for the teamworkers, the vocational chairman and the gracious offer of the Tech student body. He also pointed out that there were a great number of subscriptions which would come in through initial subscription committee, headed by Thomas H. Daniel.

Many large Atlanta corporations, he said, "will give generously to the campaign fund, and several cities behind New York, well organized for the inception of their local campaigns. Notable among these are St. Louis, Chicago, Pittsburgh and Philadelphia, where there are many prominent alumni of Georgia Tech from which places substantial aid is expected."

FIRST METHODIST CHURCH FOSTERING BOY SCOUT TROOP

The First Methodist church is fostering the newest scout troop chartered by the Atlanta Boy Scouts council. The troop at the present stage of organization has 14 members enrolled, and John M. Eaton, connected with the federal board of vocational training, has been commissioned scoutmaster.

The troop will be known as Troop 6, and weekly meetings will be held on Friday nights. The membership is limited to those living in the neighborhood of the First Methodist church. The meeting place has been decided upon at the church. The troop is being organized by the church, and the vocational chairman and the gracious offer of the Tech student body. He also pointed out that there were a great number of subscriptions which would come in through initial subscription committee, headed by Thomas H. Daniel.

CAMP AND SUMMER SCHOOL IS PLANNED BY G. M. A. LEADERS

Colonel J. C. Woodward, president of the Georgia Military academy, has just returned from a visit to Columbus, Ga., where he went by invitation to meet a large number of the representative citizens to discuss with them the camp and summer school problem for their boys. Professor Kendrick, principal of the Columbus High school, is a member of the summer school faculty. As a result of their work Columbus will have a delegation of 35 boys from the very best homes in the city.

Major Ormond B. Strong, principal of the Henry Junior High school at Savannah, Ga., writes that the delegation of Savannah boys will number not less than 40. Professor D. D. Davis, principal of the Central Grammar school at Miami, Fla., writes that his delegation will be 25 boys.

The cabins to accommodate the senior section of the camp are now well under construction, while the athletic activities on the side of tents and files for the junior camp have been purchased and are now being set up. It is expected that the splendid cadet band will be in camp this summer and that the athletic activities will be of the highest order. The boys will be in camp this summer and that the athletic activities will be of the highest order. AUTOMOBILE CRASHES INTO VIADUCT RAILING

An automobile driven by a man whose name could not be ascertained rounded the corner of Forsyth and Alabama streets Saturday night about 8 o'clock, smashing into the traffic tunnel which begins at the junction of these streets. The car, witnesses say, was going fast, and that it was evident that the driver lost control of his machine, or the momentum of his car could not be checked in time to avoid the collision.

The driver was unhurt and his automobile was not damaged, it is stated. It is rather odd, however, that the side of the railing at the place the car smashed into it was badly bent.

SENATE TO CONSIDER CANAL TOLL SYSTEM

Washington, April 23.—Restoration of free tolls through the Panama canal to American shipping will be taken up next week by the senate, according to a committee of which Senator Borah, republican, Idaho, is chairman.

Three bills dealing with the free tolls question are before the committee, introduced by Senators Borah, Jones, of Washington, and Poinsett, of Washington, all republicans. The bills would limit the toll privileges to American coastwise shipping while another would give the privilege to all ships using the American flag.

BEATS LANIER
IN SLOW GAME

Macon, Ga., April 23.—(Special).—

choyls High defeated Lanier High school here today in the first home game of the season for the locals by the score of 12 to 9. It was a poorly played game, in which errors figured prominently in the scoring of both teams. Lanier made a run in the sixth inning down without getting a hit. Boys' high scored seven runs, Willis had bad start for Lanier in the first inning, but thereafter hurled good ball, fanning three men in the fifth. With the bases full Weaver, who took Willis' place in the seventh inning for the locals, was especially effective, allowing but one hit dur-

the reminder of the game. This was a home run drive over the fence by M. Smith, Clark, for the visitors, played a jam-up game at the initial fashion, as did White in center field. Ellis, though yielding more hits than his mates scored off the Laker hurlers, was in good form and kept the safeties well scattered. Coleman, at third, played the best game for Lanier. He accepted six chances at the "hot corner" without a bobble, and at bat secured a double with Tallent on base. Lanier staged a rally in the ninth inning that netted them two runs.

ROOSEVELT SEES NAVY WRESTLING- BOXING BOUTS

Quantanamo, Cuba, April 23.—More than 10,000 officers and men in the United States Atlantic fleet gathered at a reception here last night to witness wrestling and boxing bouts which were planned by Theodore Roosevelt, jr., assistant secretary of the navy, as a spectator during the evening.

Mr. Roosevelt was called upon for a address and in a short, but spirited speech in which he declared: "The navy should be made up of men who are not afraid of the name of Pantheons," but real men who are to be treated as men."

Emory Getting Ready for State Track Meet; Six Colleges Enter And Event Will Prove Success

BY GEORGE MACDONELL.

With six of the leading colleges in the state represented, the Emory university second annual invitation track meet will take place, the preliminaries to start on the morning of April 25, and the finals April 30. The six colleges which will send teams to the state track meet will be Emory, Tech, Georgia, Mercer, Oglethorpe and Piedmont.

Without a doubt the meet will be one of the biggest in this section for many years. While in the past Tech has usually held an invitation meet on the home grounds, there will be nothing of the kind this year, and the Emory meet will be alone in the field for this section.

With a full team, Piedmont college will make its debut this year as a track supporting institution, which will further strengthen this branch of athletics in Georgia. Coach Smathers has received a communication from the captain of the Demorest tracksters to the effect that a full delegation will be sent from his college.

The officials for the meet will be C. W. Street, president, Birmingham Athletic club, referee; H. G. Voss, coach, manager A. G. Spaulding & Co., and I. C. Matheny, physical director of the Y. M. C. A., head judges, and Wilbur Hutsell, athletic director, Birmingham Athletic club, starter.

This will be the second year in which the state meet has been held at Emory, as the captain of the school of medicine presented the cup for last year's meet with the provision that the event should be held at Emory for three successive years. Tech won the cup last year, but must hold it for two years to keep it permanently. Second in last year's meet was Georgia, with Emory coming third over the heads of Mercer and Oglethorpe.

The Emory cinder track has been completed at a cost of several thousand dollars, and will be in good shape for the meet on the 25th and 30th. The track is being supervised by Coach Smathers and an able corps of assistants, and will be in prime condition by the time the six colleges gather for the big run. This cinder track, a quarter mile in length, is said by leading track authorities to be one of the best in the south.

To Build Stand.

A temporary grandstand will be built to seat the visitors on the two days of the state meet. The slanting hillside facing the field will soon see rows of wooden benches which will accommodate the crowd who gather to see the events.

One feature of the meet will be that no one will be able to predict to any extent what will be the outcome, until the closing day of the meet. Although Georgia and Tech will give something of an idea of where their strength lies in their own meets before the state meet, the other colleges represented will remain an athletic mystery until the day on which the events are run.

Last year the University of Georgia and Tech ran track and field meets, with Emory only a few points behind. This year it is hard to say which of the three colleges is the strongest, as new athletic stars have shown up in each. Daves, who figured prominently in the Tech-Auburn meet, will have a chance to rub shoulders with Bill Watkins, of Emory, in the half-mile run.

The Distance Run.

The battle for the long distance laurels will lie between Captain McDonald, of Tech, and Lane Stokes, of Emory, who won the Southern Methodist road race last fall. In the hurdles Captain Mann, of Georgia, will compete against Pierre and Brandon, of Emory, while in the weights Van Buren is expected to hold his own.

A number of events will go to the 100-yard dash, the 220, the 440, the 550, the mile, the two-mile, comprising the important runs. Other events will be the high jump, the broad jump, the pole vault, the shot put, javelin throw, discus throw, high and low hurdles. A special feature of the meet will be a single and double tennis tournament, which will doubtless arouse much interest.

The preliminary matches for the tennis singles have nearly been completed, and the winners will begin getting ready for the state meet. A new system has been inaugurated by Manager Bell of rating the players. In listed order, which they can change by defeating the man next up.

Track practice continues as heretofore with the same regularity. Stokes is up to his old form, and Watkins and Rochelle still maintain their standard of speed. Van Buren, in the weights, has shown himself unusually effective with the javelin this year and should reach a greater distance in the meet.

Since the track carnival begun and carried out by Coach Smathers, a round has become easier to handle, because of the pruning done after the track of the track meet. The less useful runners are relegated to the sidelines. "Track" can now see almost able to carry on his work more efficiently.

Squad Makes Good.

In the beginning the Emory track squad worked up to the fact that it must start on the ground floor if it were to make good. As track is the only intercollegiate branch of athletics allowed the students of Emory as yet, the sport enthusiasts of the school were especially anxious to make the track proposition a success.

With little help from the students themselves, the squad commenced work in the fall, and more recently the faculty has been enlisted to help make the track program a success. It has become a fact that the Emory track team is now a well-known force in the state. The Southern Methodist road race was won by Emory, which won the Southern Methodist road race last fall. In the hurdles Captain Mann, of Georgia, will compete against Pierre and Brandon, of Emory, while in the weights Van Buren is expected to hold his own.

Coughlin Track Meet Contender Sewanee Star's Prowess Feared

BY WALTER CAMP

New York, April 23.—Everything is set for the grand opening of the national outdoor track season, which begins the last of next week on classic Franklin field at Philadelphia. All the signs point to a glorious year. They stand out as clearly as the aurora borealis in the September skies. For that matter, things have already happened that not only have whetted interest, but promise a period of activity—beginning at the Penn relays next Friday, and ending with the Harvard-Illinois meet at the Harvard stadium the last of May—never equaled in the whole history of track and field games.

The breaking of the American marathon record this week by over two minutes, the starting times reported from the Pacific coast by Paddock, the defeat of Harvard's track team by Penn State—these are among the definite things pointing to the foregoing conclusion. Going over the prospects hastily, it may be said that there is really less conflict of interesting dates than one would suppose; the ardent track fan can see almost at a glance that the season is a good one. Next Friday and Saturday the citizen will really open with the Penn relays at Philadelphia. This column has already indicated that will place there, namely the one, two and four-mile championships.

Added Interest.

But this week there arises a reason for even a new and added interest in the forthcoming season. The University of the South is sending up Coughlin, a runner who has been making a name for himself in the South. He is sending Kilby to fight out this event. The story is that all three can beat the record and set under five seconds. Coughlin is the man who nearly defeated Kilby last year's winner at the tape. Jesch was third at the Olympic championships in this event, and Kilby has made some time that looks very good to his backers. Afford the Penn relays, we come various dual meets, in which Yale, Harvard and Princeton figure, and on May 7 there will be a remarkably interesting triangular contest with Pittsburgh, Syracuse and Columbia. An excellent dual meet follows on the 14th between the Naval academy and Pittsburgh, and on the following Saturday Pittsburgh holds the annual intercollegiate and interscholastic games.

New England Meet.

The New England meet and the middle west conference meet, as well as dual contests, will serve yards in 211-5 seconds.

to create unusual interest in the intercollegiate. This great meeting will be held in the Harvard stadium on May 27 and 28. Usually it has occurred at the close of the season; but this year on June 1 there will be a Penn-Penn State dual meet at State college and probably on June 18, the National Collegiate association will hold its first big national meet at Chicago. Finally, it is possible that Yale and Harvard may accept the proposition for a joint meeting with Oxford and Cambridge in July.

While everyone knew that the conditions favored a fast race, few would have believed in the clipping of the record and certainly by not as much as two minutes. Frank Zona, of Newark, a former service boy, kept in the front from a very early point in the race and by the time it was half over was pulling away from his field. Melior, of Chicago, was the only one who could stay with him and even he was in difficulty before they were in sight of home. Zona finally finished 25 miles in two hours 31 minutes 57.5 seconds, the former record being held by Ryan, 2 hours 21 minutes and 18.5 seconds, made in 1912.

The fact that Paddock, the star California runner, who has just made such remarkable times out on the coast, will not come east, is a disappointment to all the fans and lovers of track events here; it is especially so to those who saw Paddock run last year in the Harvard stadium, and believe that he can repeat the times made out on the coast.

Rejoice, Cal., April 23.—Charles W. Paddock, of the University of Southern California, broke the world's 200-yard record, in the 200-yard dash, at the Southern California A. A. U. meet yesterday, according to official timers. Paddock's time for 100 meters was 21-15-20 yards, 59-1-5, 300 meters, 33-5 seconds. He ran 100 yards in 52-5 seconds, tying the world's record, and 200 well as dual contests, will serve yards in 211-5 seconds.

AMES QUARTET SETS NEW TWO-MILE RECORD

Des Moines, Iowa, April 23.—Running the fastest 2 miles ever made by a team of American runners, the Ames, Iowa, relay quartet established a new two-mile record of 7:52.5 for the Drake relays in the twelfth renewal of the games at the Drake stadium here this afternoon. Five other records for the games were shattered and one was equaled.

Paddock's time for 100 meters was 21-15-20 yards, 59-1-5, 300 meters, 33-5 seconds. He ran 100 yards in 52-5 seconds, tying the world's record, and 200 well as dual contests, will serve yards in 211-5 seconds.

T. Milton Wanted to Be Driver Is Running Dairy as Sideline

BY "POP" MYERS

Indianapolis, April 23.—(Special.) "When I was a little boy it was my sole ambition to be a race driver," said Tommy Milton, who will drive a Durant Special in the national 200-mile race for a purse of approximately $50,000 at the Indianapolis motor speedway Monday, May 23.

"It was my dream to drive my way to fame and fortune," said the driver of a speedy car with thousands of persons watching me drive." After making a few moments the modest Tommy continued, "Of course I got neither fame nor fortune and it has been rather a bitter pill. Winning bills for repairs has been a bad omen for me." But Milton has won glory and gold. It was this 23-year-old pilot who drove 126.4 miles per hour, establishing himself speed king, and he has the distinction of winning races on all tracks excepting Indianapolis and he is hot on the trail of victory at Indianapolis this season.

Milton is married—became a benedict shortly after he won third at Indianapolis last year. When asked if his family objected to his racing antics, he said: "Not now—at least the opposition has subsided."

Has a Dairy.

But racing does not occupy all of Milton's time. He is interested in a dairy, manufacturing butter exclusively. And then he never misses a chance to see a football contest, the great college game being his favorite branch of sport. Tommy went to college—but not for long—because he could not overcome his desire to be a racer and he rode his first race on July 4, 1912.

According to Milton he knows no fear in a race, would do it all over if he were a boy today and has no preference for any particular race course. The purr is in his blood, says Tommy. In training for his races, Milton plays handball and basketball. He is a country driver. Despite the fact that he knows no fear on the race course, he is a very cautious driver on public highways. He is monotonously careful.

Yes, you get plenty of thrills driving in a sale Milton, especially when the pacemaker of four or five cars grouped closely together, or loses control of his car. Then the drivers following have little time to decide just which way to go.

Milton was awfully embarrassed at a show given for disabled soldiers at the Indianapolis track shortly after the close of the war. When it came his time to perform he couldn't budge his mount. But it made a big hit with the soldiers.

ATLANTA SAVANNAH

KIWANIAN AND AD MEN PRACTICING

Kiwanians and Ad men are looking forward to their annual battle, which will be staged at Ponce de Leon park the afternoon of Thursday, May 19. Proceeds will go to the Home of the Poor, the Atlanta Children's home. Tickets will go on sale next week through committees of ladies representing the two homes.

Last year a crowd of some 3,000 fans saw the Kiwanians come from behind and score a victory over the Ad men. Until last week they had been resting on their laurels, whereas the Ad men, intent on settling old scores, have been hard at work for several weeks. The Ad men have another game scheduled for June 11, when the Miami advertising club will invade Atlanta, and there is a possibility that Dave Webb's Ineh Hounds will journey down to Savannah for a game with the advertising forces of that city.

Bruce Hall has been named business manager of the Ad club baseball team, and Herbert Porter will look after the special entertainment program to be staged out at Ponce park on May 19. Last year one of the features was Bobby Jones' acrobatic driving of a half-dozen golf balls way over the center field fence. Equally interesting features are planned for the coming game.

The Lions' club has entered the list of civic baseball challengers also, and there is a possibility that the Civitan club will put out a team. It looks like a good season for charity.

NOTRE DAME WINS IN HALF-MILE RELAY RACE

REO

This Reo Speed Wagon Knows No Rival, No Peer

More attempts have been made to copy this Speed Wagon than any other motor vehicle ever built.

That isn't a mere statement, it is a fact known to everyone in the automobile industry.

Some have produced trucks that, so far as outward appearance—and even mechanical specifications—went, were such good imitations they'd fool any but the most experienced.

But—if we are to judge by the short-lived success of all of them—they were able to copy the Speed Wagon only in outward appearance.

For in performance—carrying capacity and durability—the Reo stands out above all others today.

And each passing month adds to that eminence

This you may depend upon—only a motor truck that is Reo designed and built in the Reo shops, can guarantee you the same service and satisfaction—the same low price and low upkeep—as the Reo Speed Wagon.

We avoid the use of superlatives as much as possible in our advertisements—but there is one Best in every line.

Among motor trucks that distinction belongs to this Speed Wagon—and so far is not successfully disputed.

When you select a Reo Speed Wagon you are sure. Why experiment then with copies or imitations or substitutes if you can get the original?

For, you know—"If it isn't a Reo it isn't a Speed Wagon."

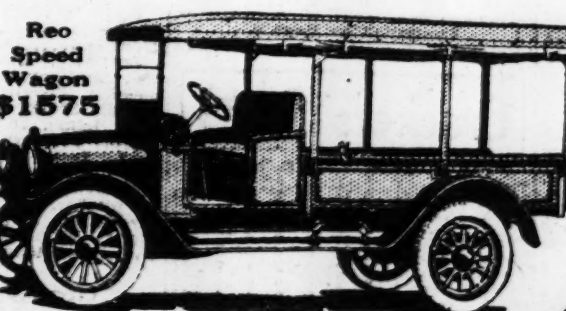

Price is f. o. b. Lansing, plus special Federal tax

ADVERTISEMENTS OF THE LEADING AUTOMOBILES, TRUCKS, MOTOR- CYCLES, TIRES, TRACTORS AND GENERAL AUTOMOTIVE EQUIPMENT

Section of Lincoln Highway To Closely Approach Perfection

An indication of what road building today really means may be found in the specifications adopted for the ideal section soon to be built on the Lincoln Highway through funds provided by the United States Rubber company. This road is based on an average traffic of 16,000 passenger automobiles a day traveling at a speed of thirty-five miles an hour and 5,000 motor trucks a day traveling at an average speed of ten miles an hour. This stretch of highway will have a right of way of 100 feet in width. It will be protected from water by drain tile and catch basins. The construction will consist of ten inches of concrete with steel reinforcing, and the road will have earth shoulders on each side of the concrete. It will be lighted and will embody no curves having a radius of less than 1,000 feet. All the curves will be super-elevated for a speed of thirty-five miles an hour.

There will be a footpath for pedestrians and all embankments will be protected by guard rails. The construction will be based on a maximum carrying capacity of 800 pounds an inch of width of tire actually in contact with the road surface, and to 800 pounds by wheel. This modern highway will have no grade crossings and no obstructions to vision, so that the motorist will be able to see for a distance of at least 500 feet each way at every intersection. All wires along this ideal section will be placed underground, and all distance markings will be correct and will originate at the municipal headquarters of the nearest town or city.

In examining the design one must have clearly in mind the conditions it was prepared to serve. Don't imagine that it is recommended or even suggested that such a road as outlined be constructed along

Afternoon Drive by East Lake, Decatur And Chamblee—Roads Excellent to Poor

Today's drive affords some splendid scenery, in addition to points such as East Lake Country Club, Decatur and Camp Gordon. With the exception of the ten-mile stretch between East Lake and Camp Gordon, the road is splendid. Probably every motorist in Atlanta is familiar with Ponce de Leon avenue, East Lake drive and Peachtree road. The stretch between Decatur and Camp Gordon affords some of the best scenery in the near proximity of Atlanta, and more than compensates the tourist for the slightly rough roads. At 16.2, as indicated on map, you will find a small creek or branch which must be forded. This branch is never deep enough to make passage difficult, except after heavy rain-falls, which would make travel difficult on other roads.

The southern route has been chosen by Oldfield, who has announced that his itinerary will carry him through Phoenix, Tucson, Douglas, El Paso, Dallas, Oklahoma City, Wichita, Kansas City, St. Louis and Indianapolis and Akron, his destination. This is not Barney's first extended trip in his speedster, for it has been his means of transportation not only to the coast, but on countless side trips of considerable length while there. This is the first time, however, that he has made a direct trip across the continent, with a minimum of stops, and he reports that thus far everything has gone along in an exceptionally smooth manner.

The E. R. Parker Motor company, Marmion distributors for Georgia, Alabama and west Florida, hope to have Oldfield in Atlanta at some time in the near future.

BETTER QUALITY REDUCES MARKET FOR AUTO TIRES

"By perfecting their product to a high degree the tire factories of America have automatically decreased their potential market," says W. F. Smith, president of the Doss Rubber and Tire company.

"For instance," says Mr. Smith, "only a few years ago tire makers were guaranteeing 5,000 miles. In the last few years, however, tires have been perfected to such a degree that today the Doss tire is sold under a guarantee of 8,000 miles. This means that a car owner buys fewer tires per year on account of the greatly increased mileage he obtains."

Actual statistics on hand from all parts of the south show that Doss tires are recording mileage records far above the 8,000 mile guarantee. The first grade materials, the expert workmanship, and the strict inspection applied to every step in the making of a Doss tire are factors that make possible exceptional service.

During last month Mr. Hill purchased the interest of his associate, Mr. Holden, and while proudly displaying his sales record for the past several weeks, he voices and optimistic belief in the future of the automobile business as a whole, and particularly as it concerns the Studebaker line.

steadily and consistent improvement. In fact, I have actually exceeded my maximum estimates in sales.

"I contribute a goodly portion of this increased business to a general betterment of business in all lines, but unquestionably, in my opinion, a greater portion is due to the ever-increasing popularity of the Studebaker line, which now comprises three different sizes—the little six, the special six and the big six," stated Mr. Holden.

MOTORCYCLISTS TO RIDE TO LITHIA SPRINGS TODAY

The second of a series of motorcycle trips, planned and given under the direction of the Atlanta Motorcycle club, will be staged today. All members and their friends will meet at Five Points at 8:30 o'clock sharp. The riders will then journey to Austell, Ga., where a chicken dinner will be enjoyed, after which they will ride out to the springs, returning to Atlanta Sunday afternoon.

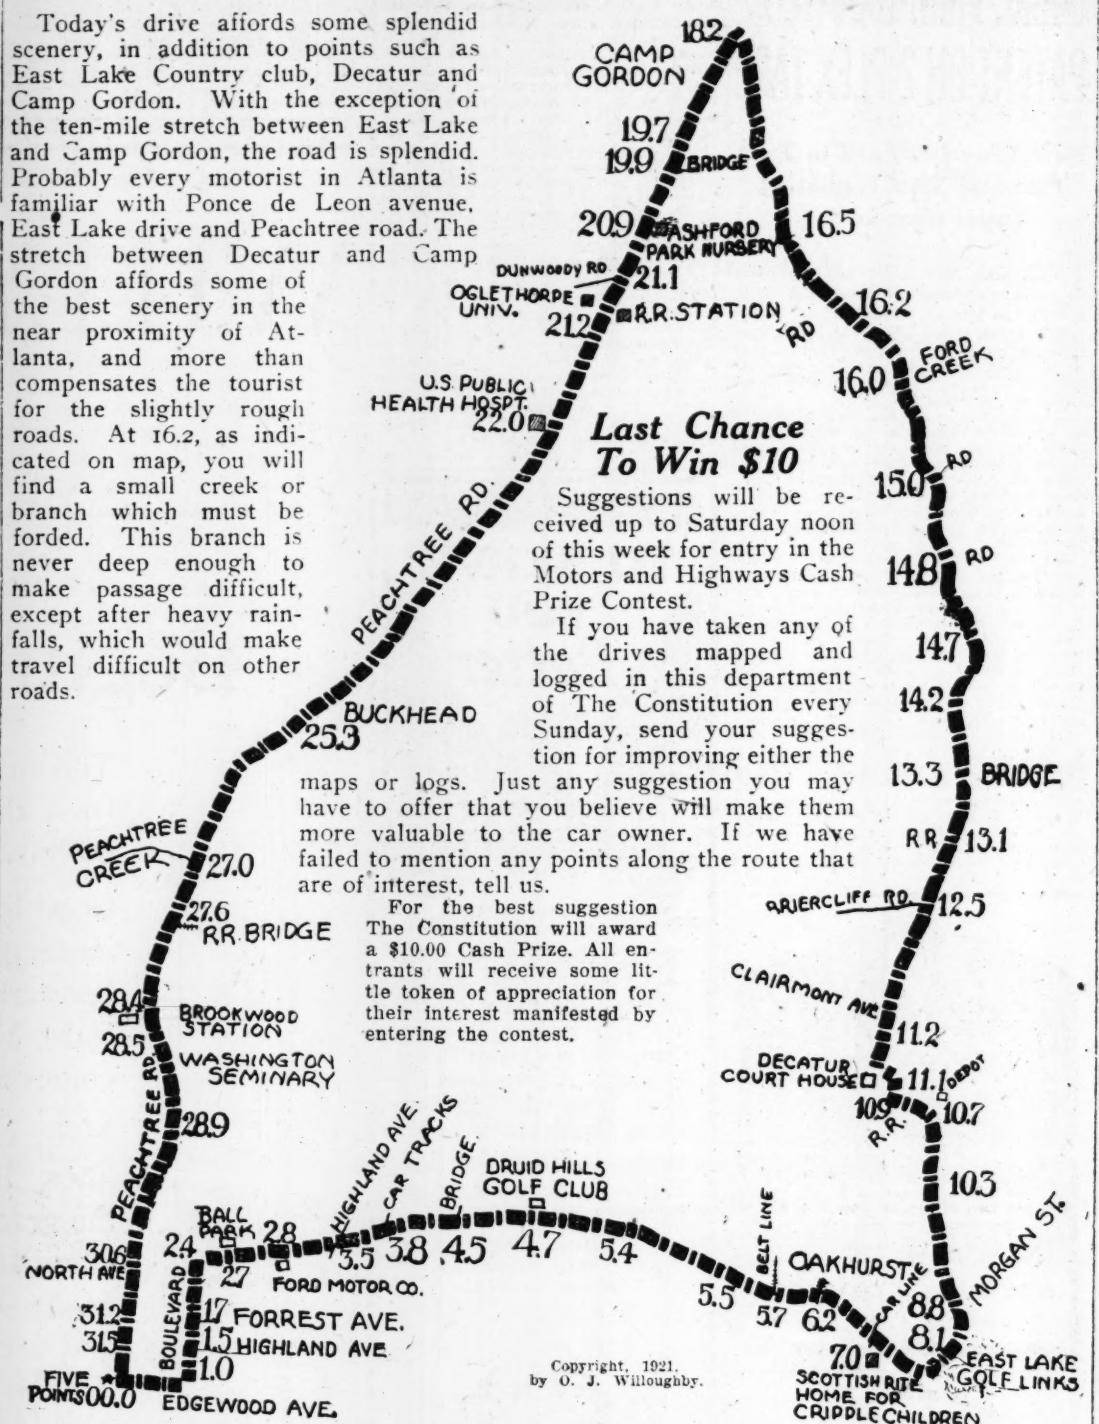

Every local motorcycle enthusiast will be glad to learn that Atlanta will be well represented in the motorcycle races to be held in Savannah, Ga., the week of April 25. Three able members of this club will probably be entered, namely: Harry Glenn, "Nemo" Lancaster, and "Haymond" Spring, and the members of the Atlanta Motorcycle club are confident that they will make a good showing.

FISK PROMOTES LOCAL MANAGER E. E. RHOADS

Mr. Rhoads Leaves Atlanta Today for Baltimore to Become District Manager.

E. E. (Dusty) Rhoads, popular manager of the Atlanta branch of the Fisk Rubber company, has just been appointed district manager, and leaves Atlanta today for Baltimore, where he will make his new home. Under his supervision will be the branches in Baltimore, Washington, Roanoke, Richmond, Norfolk and Raleigh.

Mr. Rhoads has been manager of the Atlanta branch for the past two and a half years, and has become one of the most popular men in the tire industry in Atlanta and territory. He is familiarly known to tire and automobile men throughout the territory covered by the Atlanta branch as "Dusty." He leaves many friends in Atlanta who will be pleased to learn of his recent promotion, but who will keenly regret to learn that his new duties will take him away from the south.

Under his management the Atlanta branch of this firm has had a steady and consistent growth, better than many of the other branches of this firm. All of which have experienced a great increase in business during this time. E. C. Cunningham, former manager of the Nashville branch, has been transferred to Atlanta to take up the duties of Mr. Rhoads. Mr. Cunningham is an experienced tire man and has been highly successful with the Nashville branch.

The day of the big cattle ranches has gone and the tendency is now in the direction of smaller herds. The average size of the present herd is 700 head, whereas in former times it was many thousands. At the same time the quality of the cattle is improving and the animals bring greater prices. The compulsory erection of fences has had something to do with this new condition, for it is now a difficult matter to move a herd around in search of good grazing grounds, as was the custom some years ago.

A glass for porcelain invented in Europe expands and contracts with the material it covers, permitting it to be blown and otherwise treated by heat in the same manner as glass.

VENABLE MOTOR CO. NEWEST AUTO DEALER

M. W. Venable Heads New Company to Distribute Roamer Cars and Service.

M. W. Venable, one of the "old timers" along Atlanta's automobile row, heads the Venable Motor company, which will open Monday at 533 Peachtree street. This new firm will handle Roamer cars in this section, and maintain southern parts distributing agency. Mr. Venable has been in the local automobile business for several years, and has held several factory jobs. He is optimistic about the future of the Roamer in this section. While he is not unduly optimistic over immediate sales, as compared with the boom period, he talks confidently of the automobile business for the coming months.

In speaking of the policies of the new firm, Mr. Venable states that service will be given the greatest consideration. His service station is now open, and while the parts stock is fairly complete now, he states that further replacement stocks are now en transit, and that he will be able to care for parts orders from the entire southeastern states.

The service station will be in charge of mechanics who are familiar with the Roamer car. Mr. Venable also affirms his belief in the "one line agency." He states that only Roamer cars will be handled, for he believes that in handling only one line he will be able to better serve his owners than he would if several lines were carried and his interest thus divided.

LOCAL FIRM GRANTED PATENT ON 2-PLEX TAPE

New Tape Designed to Take Place of Two Insulating Tapes Now in Use.

A patent has been granted the Diamond Holfast Rubber company on an improved combination electrical tape, designed to replace the friction tape and splicing compound now used in insulating joints or splices. It combines into one tape the two tapes now used.

The object of this invention is to provide electrically insulating tape which will in use be more quickly applied than ordinary insulation, give more uniformly perfect results, and eliminate certain kinds of imperfect work now common where unfaithful workmen are employed.

The officials of the company announce the approval of the Southeastern Underwriters has been secured and plans have been made for placing this tape on the market immediately. Local electrical jobbers and contractors who have been furnished with samples are very enthusiastic and state it is just what they have been waiting for. Its use will save time and money, will make it impossible for the workman to leave off the splicing compound, reduce fire hazard and insure a perfect splice every time. The company states this tape will be sold to the contractor and supply houses exclusively through jobbers and invites jobbers, contractors and supply houses to write for samples and prices.

President Weber Says Constructive Preparations Being Rapidly Made.

Detroit, Mich., April 23.—Large constructive preparations for the future of the King Motor Car company have been made in the past few days by A. Weber, president and general manager, and Sales Manager H. Alperin, of the King Motor Car company. With the rejoining of J. Emerson as purchasing agent, the company also announces that the Arnold Joerns company, of Chicago, who handled the King advertising several years ago, have been appointed their advertising representatives. This company has opened a Detroit office in the Kresge building with Bob Davis in charge. Mr. Davis knows the automobile business, having handled automotive accounts for a large Chicago agency. He is a former Detroit man. In a few days a man, who has been largely responsible for the large number of Kings that are used in Chicago, will join the company as assistant to Mr. Alperin. Mr. Weber says: "We have been laying our foundation. It has taken a long time, but we are building the future of the King on a solid basis. It is natural that this takes some time."

but King will come through it strong and better than ever. We are wonderfully well pleased with the general co-operation and pledge of support received from King dealers and owners all over the country. We are getting ready to go and go big. We are getting orders must take its rightful place in the and our faith is such that King industry in a businesslike fashion."

Birmingham, Ala., April 23.—Seven local unions, United Mine Workers of America, today forwarded appeals to Governor Kilby asking for immediate assistance to relieve what was described as "the needy circumstances" of 3,232 men, women and children. The appeal was signed by officials representing locals at Adger, John, Aubrey, Yolande, Rock Castle, Oakman and Republic.

WILLYS-KNIGHT

Begin with the motor

Too many people buy an automobile from the outside in, instead of from the inside out.

Good lines give distinction, but a good motor gives results. The Willys-Knight body is a thing of beauty, but its Sleeve-Valve Motor is a thing of duty, and duty comes first.

Many cars will intrigue you with their lines. But the Willys-Knight adds to the grace of a beautiful body, the quiet cumulative efficiency of the Sleeve-Valve Motor—the only motor that grows finer and fleetier with use.

HAUGDAHL TO DRIVE NEW RACING CAR

With a track that has been worked practically a month to whip it into fast condition, due to the two weeks' postponement forced by rain and with drivers that have had the advantage of one race meeting to improve their judgment of distance and speed, the automobile races should produce faster time and harder driving than any early spring program held over the fairgrounds track in several years.

Following the postponement a weeks ago, several of the drivers shipped to Mobile, Ala., for a two-day race meeting held there last Saturday and today's races shipped to

Dandruff Surely Destroys The Hair

Girls—if you want plenty of thick, beautiful, glossy, silky hair, do by all means get rid of dandruff, for it will starve your hair and ruin it if you don't.

It doesn't do much good to try to brush or wash it out. The only sure way to get rid of dandruff is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, get about four ounces of ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop, and your hair will look and feel a hundred times better. You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive and four ounces is all you will need, no matter how much dandruff you have. This simple remedy never fails.—(adv.)

LOVELY ATLANTA GIRLS

Stage Set For Week Of Opera

The opening Sunday of Atlanta's annual opera week is always a bit like the few minutes before the curtain rises on the opening performance.

Everybody is in a state of suppressed excitement. Visitors are arriving. The stage is set as to clothes and engagements, except for those few people who are always a little belated in their plans. And most important of all, there is the atmosphere of a happy anticipation.

The eleventh engagement of the Metropolitan Opera company, the greatest operatic organization in the world, is at hand. Twelve years ago there was the first season, and only in the second year of America's participation in the war—1918—was there a lapse.

Such brilliance, artistic and social, has marked each year's gala week that it would seem like unnecessary propaganda to predict for the season just about to begin, with flowers and sunshine sponsoring its success, that the season of 1921 will top them all.

But with a repertory that seems to promise a very general satisfaction; and with new stars and old favorites among the opera company's principals; with an advance sale for every performance that once more deepens Atlanta's self-confidence in her ability to put big things over; with an aggregation of visitors from every section of the south, and even from north and west to make more interesting the personnel of the opera's patronage; with an elaborate program of entertaining in clubs, hotels and private homes to heighten the calendar's social importance, certainly the week just opening may be expected to rival in brilliance any season of all the ten before.

Singers Will Arrive On Sunday Trains.

Four of the most beautiful members of Atlanta society. Upper row, left: Mrs. Philip Head, who resides on The Prado, in Ansley Park, and, at the right, Miss Martha McCrea, older daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas H. McCrea, of Peachtree road. Lower row, left: Miss Mary Nelson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry P. Nelson, of East Fifteenth street, Ansley Park, and, at the right, Miss Julia Murphy, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John E. Murphy, of Peachtree street.

Private Entertaining For Opera Visitors.

An outstanding even in the week's calendar of private entertainment will be the 5 o'clock tea at fresco on Friday at which Mr. and Mrs. Robert F. Maddox will entertain. Their honor guests will be Mr. and Mrs. Mills E. Lane, of Savannah, who will visit Mr. and Mrs.

Clark Howell for the opera week-end, and Mrs. Whiteford Cole and her party from Nashville. Mrs. A. G. Brandau and Mrs. Robert Lusk. A company of 100 is invited. Senora Pennino, of Havana, Cuba, who is at the Georgian Terrace for the week, will be a fêted visitor. She is the wife of Jose Pennino, who is called the marble king of Cuba, and handles vast marble business in Cuba, drawing extensively upon Georgia, Tennessee and Alabama marble, this business bringing him frequently with Senora Pennino to Atlanta. Senora Pennino will share honors on Thursday evening with Mr. and Mrs. Mills E. Lane in the party to be entertained by Mr. and Mrs. Clark Howell at the dinner-dance at the Piedmont Driving club. Mrs. W. H. Kiser will entertain at luncheon Monday at her home on

Face's Ferry road, in compliment to Senora Pennino, of Havana, Cuba, who is at the Georgian Terrace for opera week. Nashville Visitors To Be Fêted Guests. Mrs. Isaac Boyd's luncheon on Monday at the Piedmont Driving club will be a compliment to Mrs. Whiteford Cole, of Nashville, wife of the president of the Nashville and Chattanooga railroad, and the ladies who will accompany her on her private car to Atlanta for opera week—Mrs. Boyd's sister, Mrs. Brandau, and Mrs. Lusk. For Mrs. Andrews And Mrs. Mulherin. Mrs. Worth Andrews and Mrs. Joseph Mulherin, of Augusta, have arrived in Atlanta to visit Mrs. James R. Holliday at her home on Myrtle street during opera week. Mrs. Marie H. Mahoney will also be the guest of Mrs. Holliday, and there will be a series of parties given in compliment to these visitors. Mrs. Robert Otis gives a tea Monday at the East Lake Country club in their honor, and on Tuesday afternoon Mrs. Mahoney entertains at tea at the Georgian Terrace for Mrs. Andrews and Mrs. Mulherin. Mrs. James J. Lynch will be hostess at an informal tea Wednesday at the Georgian Terrace, and Friday afternoon Mrs. Henry W. Salmon will entertain in honor of Mrs. Holliday's guests. Mrs. Annie Flynn's bridge party Saturday will honor Mrs. Andrews, and Mrs. Mulherin.

Opera Gowns Undergo Price Operations---Dance Frocks at Tuneful Savings---Dinner Dresses on a Lower Scale of Costs

Three groups, 260 dresses, at new and lower prices. Now, if you are one of those unfortunate women who see the beauty of a dress through its high cost alone these frocks will make no appeal to you. Nevertheless, they are very beautiful dresses, a beauty unhappily spoiled for you because the prices are so exceedingly low!

However, if you do count the costs, and like to drive a bargain, here is an opportunity, a "hand-picked" opportunity to own a lovely gown for the opera, a delightful dress for dinners, or a wispy, diaphanous thing for dancing at a price dollars less than it was made to sell for.

Three groups, made up from purchases in the market and reductions in our own stock.

$89.50 to $147.50 Dresses, $57.95

—They're just as pretty as their designers could make them. Georgette is used, also chiffon and lace over taffeta. Some of them are flowered; others are beautifully beaded; a few of the filmiest are draped in billowy styles. Sleeves are short. They're sashed with wide, wide sashes. Often the skirts are embroidered or beaded almost all the way up. You'll find rose, tan, gray, ciel blue, copen, beige, yellow, black, brown and figured effects. It wouldn't take them long to disappear at $89.50 to $147.50—that's what dresses like these have been selling for all along—but at $57.95 they are likely to be gone in no time.

$69.50 to $97.50 Dresses, $47.95

—Lovely dresses in dinner or evening styles—dresses like you'll want to wear to Opera, at the matinee and in the evening. There are dresses of black satin frosted with crystal beads, of black Georgette with cut steel or iridescent beads, blue dresses with bright red wooden beads, henna with jet beads, light blue with jet, etc. The materials are Georgette crepe, for the most part, some in combination of Georgette with taffeta. Most of them have wide satin sashes. They are in navy, taupe, brown, gray, henna, red and ciel.

They're embroidered in wool or silk, they're trimmed with little hand-made silk flowers, with large ruffy rosettes, cut-out embroidery, etc. Some have collars and cuffs of summery white organdy, some are beaded. Navy, brown, black, gray, tan, beige, copen are a few of the colors.

FRECKLES

Now is the Time to Get Rid of These Ugly Spots

There's no longer the slightest need of face cream of your freckles, as Othine—double strength—is guaranteed to remove these homely spots.

Simply get an ounce of Othine—double strength—from any drug and apply a little of it night and morning and you should soon see that even the worst freckles have begun to disappear, while the lighter ones have vanished entirely. It is seldom that more than an ounce is needed to completely clear the skin and gain a beautiful clear complexion.

Be sure to ask for the double strength Othine as this is sold under guarantee of money back if it fails to remove freckles—(adv.)

How Nature Makes New Complexions

It is well known that the human skin is constantly undergoing a tearing down and building up process. With advancing years or waning vitality this tissue-change lags; the lifeless, soiled surface skin stays on so long that its owner acquires a "poor complexion." Common sense tells us this dead skin cannot be renewed or beautified effectively to resemble a youthful one. The natural thing to do is to remove the affluence skin—remove the bad complexion. Yes, this can be done. It has been found that ordinary mercurochrome was completely absorbed the devalued skin, in minute particles, so gently, gradually, as to cause no inconvenience. Mercurochrome, which any druggist can apply in original package, is out on at night like cold cream, and washed off in the morning. If you would have a naturally beautiful complexion, just use this simple treatment.

The natural way to remove wrinkles or redness, "itching" skin. This is easily done by using a simple wash made by dissolving an ounce of powdered mercurochrome in a half pint of water. (adv.)

Student Summer Conference Planned by Y. W. C. A. Girls

The present center of interest and enthusiasm for Y. W. C. A. girls, both business and industrial, is the Y. W. girl reserves, in raising their conference funds for this summer. Each group of local Y. W. girls will send a delegate to the special conference that the South Atlantic field division will give for the groups of girls from different departments of the Young Women's Christian association. In this field, Miss Edna N. C. in June and July there will be a student conference, also a community conference, the conference for the Y. W. C. A. South Atlantic industrial department will be held at the Y. W. C. A. and that for the South Atlantic girl reserves will be held at Pine Harbor Inn, near Savannah, Ga. The industrial department and the girl reserves of the local association in working for their conference funds, must raise their funds by their own efforts, assisted by their association secretaries and volunteer leaders.

Montreal for Atlanta's Y. W. C. A. in industry and Pine Harbor Inn for the girl reserves is the present slogan.

"What is the Y. W. C. A. summer conference?" as a matter of community interest, outlined by Miss Edna N. C. A. general secretary, as follows:

"At a summer conference, recreation takes on its most spontaneous form. Here delegations from the various departments of the Y. W. C. A. which their respective associations stand. The recreation committee gives form and content to the conference life. Out of combined work and play is born the conference spirit. The city girls in turn find the conference an answer to all sorts of longings which their scarce home existed; from business offices, sales counters, factories and homes they come to find interpreted for them in Bible, books, friends, comrades and the great outdoors.

"The summer conference is not a vacation center only, but a place of instruction in the eight or nine week days spent there has its program of fun, sight-seeing and rest carefully planned. The girl who learns in the morning of one who thought a good fight was out of the afternoon to play a better game of tennis or basketball, or to try a little harder in a aquatic contest; the spirit of the great friend permeates little groups that gather in friendly tests, go off for gipsy suppers, or indulge in impromptu spreads, while the newly discovered love of the Gaillean Man for the big outdoors puts new meaning into wild canyon trips, boating trips, the wonderful panorama from a precarious seat on a tall-ho-de, an evening song service at the edge of a fairy-tinted lake, or vespers at dusk on the side of the mountain looking out across the silent waiting world. At a summer conference, association day is a day set apart when each delegation impersonates association ideals or caricatures its own follies. It is girls' day in every sense of the word.

"The Atlanta Y. W. C. A. departments are working on extensive plans to send a full quota of delegates to our South Atlantic field conference this summer," concluded Miss Finley.

Girls in Industry.

The next question of interest is "What is a Y. W. C. A. Industrial Department?" There are 20,000 girls and women employed in Atlanta, states Miss Finley. "The Y. W. C. A. industrial secretary, Miss Edna N. C. A. and her committee, make the initial approach to girls in commercial and industrial life and associate them in such a way as to make it possible for them to share in the activities of the Young Women's Christian association. Miss Goss visits stores and factories and with the desire and consent of the managers organizes the girls into Y. W. C. A. self-governing clubs that meet once a week for instruction, Peachtree Park. The programs of these clubs at present include talks and studies on office efficiency and business etiquette, joint debates, social service work, plays, pageants and parties; glee club, directed by Miss Van Gelder, of Elizabeth Mather college, a "costume exchange" managed by Miss Mary Murphy, in which good, but used clothing is being sold at reasonable prices; commission on sales will be used by the "Blue Ribbon" industrial club for their conference fund. These girls have organized play, hikes and other forms of recreation. Their program is an extensive one and the foregoing covers the work only in part. These are the girls whose contemplated fund will send industrial delegates to the Montreal industrial conference.

Girl Reserves.

"The Girl Reserves," explained Miss Finley, "includes girls from 12 to 18 years of age, from the city high schools, Fulton High and the grade schools. The local girl reserves department has Miss Mayna Brace as girl work secretary. This department is a part of the national movement of the Young Women's Christian association for younger girls in the open country, towns and cities.

"The object of the reserve movement is to give girls thorough normal, natural activities, their habits, insights and ideals which will make them responsible women. Groups of local reserves meet regularly at school hours, at the Y. W. C. A., where they have their group programs for constructive work and recreation. "The 1921 whirlwind," recently given by 300 girl reserves at the Commercial High school, was their first effort to raise a part of their conference fund, and they are busy with future plans for sending their delegates to the Pine Harbor industrial conference.

Health Education Center.

The Y. W. C. A. health education center, usually termed the gymnasium, gave a closing demonstration Friday evening that marks the most successful year in the center's history. Miss Lucy Marvin Adams, director, was in charge. Far in advance of the demonstration's opening at 8:15 o'clock half the gymnasium was crowded. The audience banded the adjacent halls and many left as standing room was in demand.

The first number was a rhythmic dance by Miss Adams' very young pupils in their first year of training. This exquisite little performance was followed by the children's class, after their second year's training, in which they demonstrated more technique. The third number was competitive games and lairs, played by the Monday and Tuesday night classes of young women and girls. The latter won Cheers, excitement and vigorous exercise on the part of the players distinguished this number. The Monday night class won the second game. Miss Irene M. Scott, assistant in recreation, directed the competitive games.

The matrons' class in Swedish gymnastics showed that they are trained in well-balanced body work, the old-fashioned callisthenics that is so often seen even in modern gymnastics. The matrons, fifty-eight in number, despite their duties as housekeepers, find time to give two hours a week to the gymnasium training their work up to the highest standards of physical development. Eight girls, after one year's training, danced a Russian mazurka that was followed by the Tuesday night classes in apparatus work. The program closed with a number by the advanced class in esthetic dancing. The first dance was "Spirit of Spring," followed by a flower dance that was a costume novelty, the girls holding small baskets of flowers. The apparatus work was exceptionally well done. In high jumping, Miss Adams stopped the girls when many of them had easily scaled the four feet and seven inches mark. The compulsory physical examinations are given by one of Atlanta's leading physicians, the medical work being continuous throughout the year.

Miss Isabel Dew, a teacher of the Fulton High school, is Miss Adams' assistant in esthetic dancing.

Pi Beta Club Gives Informal Dance.

An elaborate affair of the past week for the younger social set was the informal dance given by the Pi Beta club on Wednesday evening at the Virginia club rooms. The chaperones were Mr. and Mrs. L. M. Fournier and Mr. and Mrs. N. F. Furney.

Among those dancing were: Thilla Reeves, Roy Eberhart, Mildred Stewart, Nona Pearson, Milla Lafitte, Edwin Gibson, Ruth Ayres, Jennie Wright, Dixie Leonard, Mable Kutschin, Gladys Hays, Glen, Bibi Ingram, Mable Morris, Fannie Joe Edwards, Mollie Morris, Betty Alcorn, Lotta Olin, Freda Smith, Gladys Glen, Bibi Ingram, Elsie McLaughlin, Mildred Lafitte, Ethel Burt, Frances Watson, Laura Jones, Mrs. Breeht, Mrs. L. Washington Seminary Notes.

The Literary societies of the Washington seminary met in separate session on Friday morning, but used the same question for debate.

"Resolved That Moral Ownership of Public Utilities is Better Than Private Ownership."

The affirmative side won in the Alice Chandler, and the negative in the Scottian.

Those debating in the Alice Chandler society were Maxine Hiles, Eleanor Briggs, Winnie Belle Davis, and Miss Ome, of the Key, and Isabelle Deming.

The Scottian debaters were Eleanor Spence, Mary Frances Chambliss, Rebecca Ashcraft, Julia Black, Sue Brown, Sterne and Ethlyn North.

Julia Black, as a leader of the Washington seminary, made a rebuttal, deserve special mention.

For several years the Dramatic club has offered a prize for the best original play written by one of its members. This year Miss Constance Cane offered a second prize.

The first was won by Miss Eleanor Briggs. The title of the play, "The Hired Girl," gives a clue to the play which is forth the feeling of the Japanese women to her father, husband and son.

The costumes were very handsome, being of original Japanese workmanship brought to this country by Miss Briggs' father, who is a naval officer of high rank.

The cast was as follows: Christine Stubbs, Mary Elizabeth Hutchins, Arnelia Hightower, Catharine Tillman, Emily Michael, Heslie Moore Mitchell, Martha Miller, Margaret Massengale and Mary Jan Hill.

"Candy," by Miss Georgia Mae Little, who was awarded the second prize. Those taking part in "Candy" were Marion Shuman, Edythe Coleman, Anetta Hightower, Catharine Tillman and Dorothy Duet.

Miss Edythe Coleman, president of the club, awarded the prizes.

Baby Show Is Being Planned By Child Welfare Committee

The child welfare committee of the Atlanta Woman's club will hold a baby show on the club grounds Saturday, May 11, at 3 o'clock in the afternoon. The number of Atlanta mothers who have already expressed a desire to have their babies compete for prizes, ribbons and certificates that will be awarded, assures the success of the undertaking.

Mrs. Harry Goodhart, who is chairman of the committee, has organized her forces thoroughly and announces the chairman of the different departments, the rules of the show and the different classes for entrants. Several special attractions have been arranged for the show, interesting to children, both those who are participating in the show and the other children who come merely as spectators.

Maypole Dance. Mrs. C. K. Ayer is chairman of the Maypole dance and has a committee working with her. She has two Maypoles and any one who wishes to dance may do so by securing a Maypole ticket, which is 35 cents, the regular admission price being 50 cents. Handsome prizes will be awarded and Mrs. Ayer and her committee anticipate equally as large number who will come for the Maypole dance as to the baby show.

Better Babies' Drive. The idea of the committee in conducting the show is not only to do credit to the beauty of Atlanta's future beaux and belles, but also to emphasize the importance of making our babies as nearly perfect physically as is possible. Each class is divided into two subdivisions in order that a baby may compete in either one or both as desired. In one division they will be judged for beauty and in the other for physical perfection.

Dr. Nevin Atkins, who specializes in the diseases of children, will be chairman of the committee who will judge the babies physically. Health certificates will be awarded every child who is examined. Children will be known by numbers when being judged. Dr. Atkins will be assisted by an able committee of doctors, a dentist, an eye, ear, nose and throat specialist, and a corps of trained nurses. Dr. Atkins is experienced with baby shows and the committee is fortunate in securing his services.

Mrs. Charles M. Goodman will assist Dr. Atkins by listing the babies who compete for the health certificates by listing them at the door before they are admitted to the examination department. All entrance for competition must be made through the chairman who has charge of the class in which baby is listed.

Rules Follow. The rules are as follows: 1. Price for entry in one class is $1 each. Additional children entered from same family will be charged 50 cents each. For each additional class child is entered an extra charge of 25 cents. 2. Twins or triplets will be entered in twin or triplet class for $1, and either one may be entered separately in any other class for 25 cents. 3. The $1 entrance fee entitles one person to admission with entrant. All others viewing the show will be charged 25 cents admission. 4. Entries must be made with

PROMINENT GEORGIA MANUFACTURER IS GUILTY OF MURDER IN THE FIRST DEGREE

Ocala, Ga., April 23.—Mr. C. D. Dismukes, of Ocala, Ga., premeditated one of the most outrageous wholesale murders ever committed in the south. Mr. Dismukes' friends, who number many in Georgia as well as in other states, are very much wrought up over the charges made against him by the investigators of this wholesale murder.

Mr. Dismukes is general manager of the A. O. Chemical Co., Ocala, Ga., who are manufacturers of the world-famous Fly-Flu. Mr. Dismukes has been found guilty of cold-blooded murder in the first degree. It appears from all evidence introduced that Mr. Dismukes several months ago deliberately planned a scheme by which he could commit murder by the wholesale and get away with it.

Mr. Dismukes is a gentleman 35 years of age and the father of two boys, ages six and eight, and has lived in Ocala, Irwin County, Ga., for the past 22 years, and is a highly respected gentleman by all who know him. Mr. Dismukes was represented by the best legal talent that money could command. The evidence being so conclusive against him, there was nothing else for the jury to do but find him guilty of murder in the first degree. It was not known at the time the jury was selected that the final meeting of his deadly preparation called Fly-Flu and finding that Fly-Flu would commit wholesale murder on all kinds of insects and germs, therefore the jury was put into a position where they were agreed upon on the first ballot. The verdict reads as follows: "We the jury find the defendant guilty of manufacturing and guaranteeing a stainless liquid preparation put up in 12 oz. prescription bottles called Fly-Flu which kills flies, mosquitoes, roaches, bed bugs, and moths, germs, etc., and is sold by all leading druggists, grocers and department stores everywhere."—(Adv.)

Impressive Ceremonies Mark Raising Of American Flag at Spring St. School

Photograph shows pupils of Spring Street school at presentation of flag ceremonies Thursday. Inset shows Miss Catherine Gunn accepting it on behalf of the school.

Impressive exercises marked the raising of an American flag outside of the Spring Street school on Thursday, April 23.—England has been grouped beside the building, facing the flagpole, and they sang the national anthem as the flag was hoisted to its place.

The donor of the large flag presented to remain unknown, and the presentation was made by John Porter, a Boy Scout, wearing many badges on his chest. After he had spoken little Catherine Gunn arose to accept the flag on behalf of the school.

Effort to Control Bathers' Costumes Fails in England

BY NINA BANCROFT.
United News Staff Correspondent.
London, April 23.—England has just experienced a hair-breath escape from government control of bathing costumes.

The first signs of turbulence came from Westgate-on-Sea, whose parish councilors asked the ministry to issue a regulation that bathing costumes should "extend from the shoulder to within three inches of the knee."

Certainly the English mode of bathing costume is remarkably frank. Skirts are not worn and stockings are not worn. Even sandals are eliminated. Most girls patronize the "regulation" pattern, which is designed principally for swimming, and which fits like the paper on the wall, so far as it goes. Arms and legs are completely and unequivocally bare.

However, at the first whisperings of a suggestion that the freedom of the fair should be interfered with, there were loud counter-muttermings from all around England's coast. Dr. Addison, instead of imposing such conditions as Westgate requested, merely sent out an edict that "every person above the age of ten shall, while bathing, wear an opaque costume sufficient to prevent indecent exposure of the person."

Thus, Westgate, while grateful for the "opaque" part of it, is left to weep for the decadence of modern youth—and those inhabitants who feel too badly about it are advised to draw their blinds during bathing hours.

NOTED EDUCATORS TO GATHER HERE

Delegates to Big Convention in May Will Have the Benefit of Reduced Rates to City.

Delegates to the annual convention of the Georgia Educational Association, the College and Normal school teachers, Georgia city and county school officials and Georgia Congress of Mothers and Parent-Teacher Associations will have the benefit of reduced rates to Atlanta during Georgia Educational week, May 3 to 7, 1921.

The program for the week has been completed by Secretary Harold T. Myer, of the Georgia Education Association. Many of the leading educators of the state will take part in the week's activities.

On of the interesting features of the commission last week was that of a man who was kicked in the chin by a cow, resulting in a neck being broken. The dairy of course, was held liable for the death, since the cow was its property and the man was in the performance of his duties at the time of the accident.

Unique Accident Claims Are Filed With Commission

Insurance Money Asked for Man Who Was Kicked in Chin by a Cow.

Here's a life for you—this life of the Georgia industrial commission at the state capital.

So far this month the board has had 800 accidents reported for its consideration. All of these cases in the commission as administrators of the workers' compensation act, and it probably handles more human interest matter in connection with accidents in a week than develops in all the other branches of the state government during the year.

One of the interesting cases before the commission last week was that of a man who was kicked in the chin by a cow, resulting in a neck being broken. The dairy of course, was held liable for the death, since the cow was its property and the man was in the performance of his duties at the time of the accident.

In another case, an employer is asked to make the proper settlement under the compensation law for the death of an employee who swam a tank while working on furniture.

But the most interesting application is found in a case where a workman fell into a river while working on a bridge. He succeeded in reaching the shore, but on looking back saw that his hat had been swallowed a tank while working on furniture.

The workman was in the performance of his duty when he fell into the river, but the question arises if he was performing any obligation for his employer when he attempted to recover his hat after reaching the shore in safety.

With many accidents being reported, the members of the commission are kept constantly engaged hearing arguments. Chairman H. M. Stanley, commissioner of commerce and labor, has been in several cities during the past two weeks conducting hearings, while Commissioner Sam State is now in Savannah.

Rare Treats on Program For South's Music Lovers

By LOUISE DOOLY.

THE greatest operatic organization in the world—the Metropolitan Opera company of New York—coming to Atlanta tomorrow for its annual week's engagement here, is bringing to the seven big audiences assured for the season a series of productions which, in the character of the principals, orchestra and chorus, the extravagance of the scenic investiture of each production, and the artistic direction of each, is equaled by the productions of no other company in the world, and is taken to no other city outside of New York except Philadelphia.

And the directors of the Metropolitan look upon their Atlanta season as of vastly more importance than the trips to their neighbor of Brotherly Love, for Atlanta's conquest means the possession of the south by the Metropolitan, in addition to the company's supremacy of music in the north.

The Atlanta season is unique, too, in that it is the center for the timebeing around which Atlanta and the musical south revolve. In New York opera becomes but an incident in the musical life, although a brilliant incident. In Atlanta for one week it is the paramount interest.

Atlanta, because she is for that week in holiday mood, would bring into the circle of her celebration, too, those who make her happiness, and with the hospitality for which southerners are known as familiarly as for their traditional love of music, Atlanta people extend the broad spirit of their celebration to the enjoyment also of the Metropolitan's singers, while the executives and conductors form a soberer fringe to the artist group that is featured at the season's most brilliant entertainments.

Hotels are so heavily booked with guests, and clubs and caterers with parties, that the social end of the opera season

THE SECRET OF PERFECT TASTE IN DRESS

Mae Murray

Dorothy Dalton

IT is a maxim among well-dressed women that one's personality should be expressed in one's clothes. The best dressed woman is the one who studies herself, recognizes her charms and her faults and dresses accordingly. It is seldom that two women, unless they are very much alike in figure, coloring and even in temperament, can wear the same gown effectively.

Read the following remarks on clothes by Mae Murray and Dorothy Dalton, both stars in Paramount pictures, and both among the best dressed women on the screen. Their ideas on dresses are almost diametrically opposed, yet each is correct in her views because she speaks with herself in mind. For instance, Miss Murray abhors navy blue hile it is Miss Dalton's favorite color. When you have read their deas tudy yourself. Perhaps you will discover the secret of perfect taste in dress.

Miss Murray Wants Freedom.

Mae Murray says:
The famous man who several centuries ago said "Give me liberty or give me death" gave a pre-release of what I would like to stand on top of the Woolworth building tower and say about clothes.

I want freedom in clothes. Freedom for all women from the shackled and docile fashion manikens to scrub-women and laundresses.

Freedom from tight skirts that trip one as she crawls; binding sleeves that restrict the graceful and comfortable movements of the arm; stabling stays; toothpick heels that make one look—and feel—as if she walks on stilts.

Freedom from uninteresting navy blues and murky browns.

Perhaps it ought to be said in a whisper, but my greatest delight is to come home after a hard day's work in the studio, throw off my clothes and climb into trousers. I always wear them in the house instead of negligees, and it certainly is a delight to get all comfy on a chaise lounge and tuck one's feet under one without fear of tearing some old lace or ribbons. They are real Chinese affairs with which are worn little coats in satins, brocades, gold cloth and all colors. I must admit I would like to wear them on the street.

Has the Right Effect.

I suppose it is because I was always a dancer and not accustomed to wearing much of anything that I insist upon loose clothing. At any rate, there is no doubt that a free body, mind, and the girl who from childhood to womanhood practices this theory is going to show a better development of both body and brain than a girl who is encumbered with tight, uncomfortable, thought-limiting clothes. There is a big difference in their faces, too; the one with comfortable clothing having a much happier, fresher and more contented look.

By "loose" clothing is not meant the sloppy, baggy, ill-fitting things that commonly are understood by that adjective. Nor the conventionalized clothes that some women are advocating. Rather, a combination of style, beauty and ease—some persons do not realize that this is possible. But just to convince them, there is a tendency right now along this very line.

The "Horrid" Waist Line.

There are certain tendencies in dress that I do not like at all. I hate those awful waist lines that are called "normal" or "natural"—the kind that make a woman look as if she were stood upon a table while some one tied a rope around her very, very tightly. There's something ungraceful about that, and few women look well in frocks with the wretched line cutting them in half.

Since I have what is called a "boyish" figure, I would never think of daring such a waist line, because I haven't a "normal" one. I like to shift the line a few inches below that generally accepted joint and put on a loose belt or sash.

This "normal" waist line is reached at its worst in an inside blouse and skirt. It is trying to wear and still look small hiped, supple and slim. And what is more offensive and disconcerting than a blouse's "tail" eternally creeping out of a woman's skirt—and at such inopportune moments. This season the overblouse is quite in vogue and I hope to see lots of women go in for it. If only they would be convinced how much more graceful their lines are; still more, realize how much more comfortable they feel, and vow, solemnly, to ever and hereafter have one of these blouses in their wardrobe.

Short Sleeves Sensible.

The tendency toward sleeves on the kimono plan, especially the short ones, is so sensible. There's no doubt that they are a blessing for girls who work in offices and always have to put false cuffs on their long, tight sleeves, which hinder them in free movements at their typewriters or filing cabinets. I always have my sleeves fashioned on the kimono style, putting in little variations in the way of net undersleeves and lace.

There's a volume to be said about blondes and colors. A lot of them go through life wishing and wishing that they were as fortunate as brunettes and could wear any color they pleased. What they ought to do is to get a frock of each desired color and see how becoming it would be to them. Blondes can wear nearly every color—especially those blondes with very white skin, and the blondes that don't have white skin are so rare they aren't worth considering.

White is my favorite color—white without the slightest touch of color. Somehow, white seems to bring out all of the real essence of a blonde person, just like purple shows off to best advantage a brunette. I know that most blondes think they should have a tiny bit of color with an all-white frock, but, in my opinion, there is no need for it.

I love colors and wear them to my heart's delight. I hate—absolutely hate navy blue. Where other women put navy blues in their wardrobe I hang blacks. When I wear blacks I always have a bit of color about me, such as a beaded bag of yellowy-red shade. I love those yellowy-reds so much, especially if I need something to cheer me up. American beauty is not becoming to me. Neither is purple. I don't like colors that have no definition to them. But, I reiterate, blondes can wear nearly every color.

Sports Clothes Attractive.

Women look best in sport clothes and their variations and Summer frocks. Of course, no universal style can be set for them, but they must be made to suit individual needs. Personally, my Summer wardrobe always includes some skirts of bridal satin, which I love, and with which I wear cute coats of different colored silks and velvets. I don't wear my Summer costumes so very much as there are certain styles and materials that always convey Summer to me. I always have a number of chiffon dresses with hand-painted flowers on them, which are made loose and cool. There's a white chiffon in my frocks this Summer that has orange and blue wool embroidery on it—on the bottom of the skirt and on the front of the waist. With it I wear a big hat with wool flowers.

There is also an adorable gingham and velvet suit, made on the eton style, which, I understand, has been associated with me. The skirt is green plaid gingham and cuffs and collar are of the same material. The coat is green velvet.

Miss Dalton Has Own Ideas.

Dorothy Dalton says:
Clothes!

Sometimes I think I loathe and detest the very letters in that word. And then when I receive lovely letters from persons who see my pictures, telling me how much they liked a certain gown or hat, I have a great compassion of conscience. Those letters are the one thing that make the purchasing of clothes pleasant.

I presume that lots of girls think that one of the nicest things about being a picture star is the opportunity to saunter, leisurely, day after day from one exclusive shop to another, while beautiful models parade before one in sartorial delights, and one nods unconcernedly to the proprietor, indicating which gowns one will design to purchase, but not giving a fig for the price. But believe me, it gets to be a boreome duty, this buying expensive, becoming and priceless gowns for pictures. I am sure that if every film star were driven to the wall to make a confession about the matter, she would agree. And she would also add, "if it were not for the fact that I love the people who see my pictures and I want so very much to please them."

Prefers Studio Work.

Being only a woman, I really have nothing against the poor inoffensive garments themselves, and, after I get them on my dislike actually changes instantly to love. Certainly I love to wear the gowns, capes and other things especially those that I believe will be liked by picture audiences. It is against the principle of the things, the urgent necessity, the "have to" about procuring a new wardrobe every six or eight weeks for a new picture that I revolt.

After seeing millions of things (it seems so) it is difficult to reach a decision for one must think about becomingness, suitability for the character and photographic powers all at one time. Then, come the fittings and fittings and fittings, and I rather work in the studio or on the stage all day than have one tiny fitting.

The real and only way to get enjoyment out of a shopping tour is to go into a shop knowing just how much you can afford to pay and looking at things only within your price limit. If you don't find something there, you can go into another shop and make your purchase. Then, one appreciates the garment and gets more pleasure out of wearing it.

Dislikes Buying Clothes.

Though I dislike buying clothes it's curious that I never, never tire of getting hats. I could buy hats all day. I love hats. I believe I was born with an affectionate feeling for them. I love large ones and small ones and silk ones and satin ones, sport, dress or evening hats. It doesn't even matter what shade they are for me to warm up to them, but one of the great favorites is a certain shade of old blue that makes my eyes look very blue. A big room in my home is a silent witness to my fondness for hats. I have it arranged almost like a shop, with row upon row of hat boxes all carefully catalogued.

Hats Very Important.

Somehow, I have an idea that I look better in a hat than without one, so I am ever so much more comfortable when wearing one. I never let an opportunity slip by for displaying some clever creation in pictures or private life, and I even scheme around to get to wear them with my dinner gowns. To me most women are more attractive in hats, because the majority of them do not have exquisitely kept hair and the coiffure certainly must be just right if one goes bareheaded. Even when I wear hats I am just as careful about my coiffure because it is most disconcerting to see ill-kept hair straggling out from under beautiful hats.

A hat is the most important part of a woman's wardrobe, in my opinion. This is because, after all, one's attention is focused most directly and lingeringly on the face, and when the effect is pleasing so much the better. The comparison of a hat to a frame always seems so apt, because that is exactly what it does become to the face, and just as a Corot is never shown off to best advantage in a gaudy frame, so a pretty face is often ruined by a carelessly chosen hat.

Hat Must Harmonize.

In choosing a hat a woman should of course, select a color and style that will harmonize with her gown. If she is able to at the same time choose one that brings out her coloring to best advantage, so much the better. The bright shades of early Spring often transform a homely woman into an attractive person, if they emphasize certain good points in her coloring and contour, until you wonder if this is the same woman who looked so drab in that hat of dull shade she wore in the Winter.

It is always economical to buy a good hat, because, even if the remainder of the costume is not very attractive or smart, with bad lines, faded material, etc., the hat can go a long ways toward offsetting the bad points. Vells are always good, if well chosen and put on snugly. They are smart and neat and should be encouraged with many hats.

Everyone has a favorite color—mine is navy blue. Anyone looks well in navy blue and navy blue in turn is good in any sort of clothes; it is very smart in an evening gown, stunning for a dinner dress, ideal for the tailor, for hats, vells, hose, etc. If a man in faultless navy blue with stunning collar and shirt, enters a room with other men he stands out immediately. It is a color that is economical to the extreme and in spite of that has a rich appearance. And one other important factor is that it makes one look slimmer. In private life I wear navy blues more than any other color.

Likes Winter Clothes.

There has been many an argument in a boudoir as to which are preferable, Summer or Winter clothes. To me, Winter clothes are nicer, I love the rich, warm, gorgeous shades obtainable in Winter. And the luxurious materials the shops carry. But of all the lovely furs to be worn. A good looking neck piece has a most charming effect on every woman, for it seems to soften her face.

One of my never-to-be-broken rules about clothing is to wear only clothes that are comfortable. We should never sacrifice our physical happiness just for some fashion whim. Sport clothes are so comfortable, and, since I am so fond of sports I adore wearing them.

And as for shoes—there is where comfort must be emphasized if one wants to enjoy life.

"BLACK BEAUTY" ON THE TUDOR SCREEN

Famous Story of Horse Is Coming Here for One Week's Engagement.

A picture that will excite more than ordinary comment will be shown at the Tudor theater this week. It is a visualization of Anna Sewell's famous novel, "Black Beauty." The film is one of the most unique ever flashed upon the screen. It marks a new era of story telling, that of blending two narratives into one, and at the same time keeping each story separate from the other. This feat, which several have attempted and failed, has been achieved by Lillian and George Randolph Chester, authors of international repute.

Anna Sewell's story was that seen by the horse. It hinted at things going on in the big house, but which Black Beauty could not know. Mr. and Mrs. Chester have supplied the inside story, after carefully analyzing Anna Sewell's narrative. They made this coincide with the original tale in every instance, so that the two blended into one, and the reason for the squire going to town on the rainy day, in which the bridge was swept away, is made clear. It also shows why the family went to the hotel the night the stables took fire and Black Beauty has a thrilling escape. Every incident in Anna Sewell's story is illustrated in the picture, and is in no way subordinated to the new narrative.

The film was directed by David Smith, famed as the director of big pictures in which animals have important parts. He is one of the best animal directors in the business. A large and expensive cast was engaged for the production, and headed by Jean Paige.

The leading feminine role requires much of the star and is considered far more difficult than a dual role, as she must portray the character from the age of 15 to 19 years. James Morrison, who plays opposite Miss Paige, has an equally difficult role. The cast includes such well-known names as George Webb, Bobby Mack, John Stepping, Adele Farrington and Charles Hallahan. In making the picture, though the "inside story" is never permitted to overlap Black Beauty's story, "The Autobiography of a Horse," as written by Anna Sewell. It has a strong and continual bearing upon the story of the humans. The burning of the stables, for instance, when Ginger is saved from death by Black Beauty's whinny call, serves to preserve Jessie from the consequences of an element into which she had been forced by the threats of the villain. The story closes with an added scene, presenting a thrilling cross-country race with the fate of Jessie at stake. Young Blomfield rides Black Beauty, now fully recovered from the effects of hardship as a cab horse, against the villain on a horse called Lightning. The climax is spectacular in the extreme.

Mable Showing Pep.

In "Molly-O" Mable Normand is showing that she still is the possessor of the pep that made her such a valuable member of the Mack Sennett organization before she signed a Goldwyn picture. Something happened to Mabel's artistic temperament during her engagement with Goldwyn, for she scored but an indifferent success in the pictures that were made to order for her in her last picture under the Sennett supervision. "Mickey" she was at her best, and it is in that picture that fans best remember her. "Molly-O" is expected to restore her to the position of the now really few successful players of the gentler sex. Mack Sennett is paying a good deal of attention to the production and Mabel is responding in a way that presages one of her old-time successes.

"FORBIDDEN FRUIT" FEATURE AT STRAND

Agnes Ayers and Splendid Cast in Big De Mille Drama.

Beautiful Agnes Ayers, one of the newest stars to join the Paramount forces, will be seen in the stellar role of Cecil B. De Mille's powerful drama of married life, "Forbidden Fruit," which comes to the Strand on Monday for a full week's engagement.

Appearing with Miss Ayers in this picture are some of the greatest supporting stars before the camera, among them are such well-known artists as Theodore Roberts, Kathryn Williams, Clarence Burton, Forrest Stanley, Shannon Day and Theodore Losloff, all of whom have strong parts, such as have characterized every De Mille production that has been seen here during the past few months.

In "Forbidden Fruit," Mr. De Mille has taken a topic as old as human life is old, and yet as young as this day, and has blended the human thoughts and desires and motives and passions with such a subtle skill that as the characters flash upon the screen and enact their respective parts it seems that they are men and women of flesh and blood.

The picture tells the life story of Mary Maddocks (played by Agnes Ayers), who elopes while still a student in a boarding school. Her husband turns out to be a rascal who finally degenerates into a tin horn gambler and loafer. Her love for him dies, but she will not desert him. Through necessity she is forced to become a wealthy woman, working by the day for the fashionable and wealthy people of the city in which she lives.

One day while sewing for one of the wealthy patrons she is pressed into service as a guest, taking the part of an absent debutante and receiving the princely sum of $50 for the privilege of mingling with the most exclusive society. She moves to be the most beautiful woman present, the expensive gowns and wonderful jewels furnished by her employer, proving just the thing to set off her exquisite loveliness. To the reception comes Nelson Rogers, a wealthy young mine owner from the west, who falls deeply in love with Mary at first sight, and to make matters worse, Mary conceives a deep and true affection for him. With this as a start the picture rapidly develops into one of the strongest and most entertaining love stories that has been seen here in months. The hackneyed plot of the average picture is entirely lacking, for Mr. De Mille has handled a delicate situation with a master's touch above that of the average producer that the suggestive element is entirely lacking.

It is a picture that reflects great credit not only upon Mr. De Mille, but upon Miss Ayers and every player associated with her in this production. One that will entertain and amuse you every minute it is on the screen. As an added attraction, a new education two-reel comedy entitled "A Seaside Siren," will be offered. It is one of the best that we have seen here this week and is filled with pretty bathing girls, funny comedians and laughable situations. Wallace Reid is scheduled to go to New York to appear as a costar with Elsie Ferguson in Paramount's screen adaptation of "Peter Ibbetson."

Alice Brady, long a favorite at the Alamo, opens the week on Monday and Tuesday with "Out of the Chorus," one of the most impressive and appealing romances she has given the screen in many months.

For Wednesday and Thursday, the Alamo headlines is Olive Tell, Broadway idol, whose newest success, "Love Without Question," is based on a gripping theme bordering on the supernatural. Closing the week comes William Fairbanks, the new "broncho-buster" star, in his latest collection of dare-devil exploits, "A Western Adventure."

As usual, the Alamo All-Star orchestra will entertain every day with enjoyable instrumental numbers.

Rudolph Valentino is playing opposite Nazimova in her Metro production of "Camille." Edward Connelly, well known character actor, also has a prominent role. A "miracle" rainstorm and a portion of the elaborate interior of the Casino at Monte Carlo are among the scenic features.

FAMOUS GAMBLERS TO APPEAR IN FILM

Quartet of Famous Gamblers Furnish Atmosphere for Kyne Picture.

The length to which Universal film directors will go to obtain correct detail in a picture is illustrated by the fact that four well-known gamblers—one of them the most famous card player in America—were engaged to appear in the gambling hall scene in the Peter B. Kyne story, "Renunciation," now being produced at Universal City.

These disciplines of chance are George Blair, better known as the Montana Kid, known in virtually every gambling house in the west; Charles Brinley, manager of gambling resorts in Reno, Goldfield and various Arizona towns in the early days; Lee Glower, a well-known New York gambler who is a familiar figure in the palaces of chance in Manhattan, Saratoga and other eastern resorts; and most important of all, Scott Turner, better known as the Cherokee Kid, who was for seventeen years associated with Cardfield in New York and who has operated gambling houses from Maine to California and from Alaska to Mexico.

Scott Turner recently wrote an article on "Why Men Gamble" for The American Magazine which attracted considerable attention. It told of his forty years of experience with the cards and why he finally quit the game. Turner is a man of education, the son of General Turner, former owner of The Memphis Scimitar, and has been a newspaper man of that city. Since his retirement from professional gambling he has been living in Los Angeles, where he is engaged in the tobacco business. At the request of the Universal picture, Turner consented to play the role of the faro bank dealer in the frontier gambling place which is an important scene in this Peter B. Kyne story.

Pretty Betty Compson.

Betty Compson, now a Famous Players-Lasky star, was the prettiest thing on the Lasky studio last other day. She is playing in a picture with the tentative title of "At the End of the World." It has to do with Chinese, and Betty is a Chinese maiden. Her costumes are simply wonderful in their beauty and value and she is "a veritable dream" in every one. The miracle lady of "The Miracle Man" is now thoroughly contented and has been taken into the Lasky organization as a full-fledged member of what is known in cinemaland as "the happy family." "Betty is unexcelled, unaffected and as sweet as she can be," said a high studio official who was standing a-peak during a rehearsal. "She has won all of our hearts already, and we are of the opinion that as a Lasky star she will often repeat the success she achieved in 'The Miracle Man.'"

Marion Fairfax Pictures.

The Marion Fairfax Production is the name of the latest picture producing organization in Los Angeles. Miss Fairfax deservedly enjoys the reputation of being one of the most capable playwrights in the country. She has to her credit many stage successes, among them being "The Chaperon," "A Modern Girl," "The Builders," "The Talker" and "Mrs. Crew's Career." Since entering the cinema game, Miss Fairfax has been responsible for many Marshall Neilan winners. Her screen credits for Neilan have included "The River's End," "Go and Get It," "Dinky" and "Job Hampton of Placer." Her first picture under her own brand will be entitled "Lying Truth," Marjorie Daw and Pat O'Malley, both scorers of successes under the direction of Neilan, have been engaged for prominent roles.

Morocco in Earnest.

Oliver Morosco says he has not engaged in the picture game just for the novelty of converting a few of his stage plays into pictures. "I want to make the name Morosco mean just the same in the film business that it does in theatricals," he says. "I am in to stay." The first Morosco picture, "The Half Breed," is nearing completion. Wheeler Oakman has the title role. Other members of the cast are: Ann May, Hugh Thompson, Joseph Deane and Leonard. Words on "Slippy McGee" will start immediately upon the completion of "The Half Breed."

Jack Pickford is planning an early return to the screen at the head of his own company.

Pauline Frederick Rumor.

It is possible that Pauline Frederick will return to the stage next fall. "Tin Pan Alley," by Leroy Clemens and Thomas Grant Springer, is said to be the vehicle she has selected for her opening play and is understood here that she will be under the management of A. H. Woods. Other noted film stars, according to rumors in circulation, will also forsake the movies for the footlights among them, Lillian Gish and Alma Rubens. Miss Gish, they say, will shortly be seen on the big time vaudeville stage in a tabloid version of "Broken Blossoms." Miss Rubens is now studying a leading role in a spring production that will be put out by the Shuberts. Bill Hart is still being tempted by stage offers, but so far has given no sign of weakening in his determination to take a rest and enjoy himself writing stories for boys.

Bennett With Lasky.

Richard Bennett's decision to abandon the stage for a motion picture career as a director, is one of the few bits of real news let loose in West Coast circles this week. He has signed with Famous Players-Lasky and is now at the studio in Hollywood for the purpose of studying picture technique at first hand. Mr. Bennett has had a very successful experience as a legitimate actor, having appeared in such plays as "The Lion and the Mouse," "Man and Superman," "Hypocrites," "White Headdress" and "His Excellency, the Governor." His screen experience heretofore was limited to his work in the production of "Damaged Goods" several years ago and the writing of the story for a picture titled "The End of the Road," which was donated to the United States government during war times.

CONSTANCE TALMADGE AT THE CRITERION

Has Captivating Role in "Mamma's Affair"—Prize-Winning Story.

Constance Talmadge has had perhaps no greater opportunity to display her great versatility than in "Mamma's Affair," the first National attraction at the Criterion theater this week. Always a lovable figure, Connie plays, in this, the role of Eve, brow-beaten daughter of an eccentric mother, in the well-known stage production by the same name, which is Rachel Barker Butler's Harvard prize winning story.

Following its run on the legitimate stage, Joseph M. Schenck secured the original cast to support Miss Talmadge and the result leaves nothing to be desired. Eve Orrin has long been the dutiful daughter of a nervous and eccentric mother who keeps her constantly at her beck and call with the simple alternative of a severe case of "nerves." If Eve shows any inclination to take an interest in affairs outside the home, finally, exasperated by the state of affairs, Connie persuades the doctor to prescribe absolute separation of mother and daughter for a short while, giving her opportunity for a brief breathing spell. The resulting tangles and ridiculous situations find a happy outcome and the vehicle proves an ideal medium for the delicious art of Connie.

Of course her fans will be delighted with the chic costumes worn by Miss Talmadge, of which it has been said that she could wear sackcloth and ashes with a distinction good to look upon. And they will welcome the news that Kenneth Harlan, who so ably acquitted himself opposite her in "Dangerous Business," is again Miss Talmadge's leading man, as the doctor who "discovers" mamma's nerves and rescues Eve from her selfishness. Opposite her in "Mamma's Affair," the handsome leading man proves himself conspicuously worthy of the honor of playing opposite the screen's favorite comedienne.

The overture by Conductor David Love's Criterion orchestra, Kinograms, the Educational News Weekly, and a special Kinetograph subject, "Babyhood," make up a well-balanced accompaniment for this feature picture.

Dorothy Devore has returned to the Christie studio and is now enacting the role of a well-known tale of ancient Egyptian history. In one scene she floats down the Nile propelled by Christie juveniles made up as dusky barge chauffeurs.

Ruth Roland has signed a contract with Hal Rosch, who will produce her next serial for Pathé. It is entitled "The Golden Canyon." There will be fifteen episodes, which will be run off as two-reelers with the first scenes in three reels.

THE RIALTO THEATER OFFERS "BEAU REVEL"

Thomas H. Ince Production With Florence Vidor
as Star.

A sterling example of the results which may be obtained through the combination of a powerful and unusual story, a brilliant all-star cast, and flawless direction and photography, "Beau Revel," the latest Thomas H. Ince-Louis Joseph Vance special production, will be presented as the feature attraction at the Rialto theater for an entire week beginning Monday.

From every standpoint of interest "Beau Revel," boasting one of the most remarkable casts ever assembled in a single picture, and a story theme as novel as it is fascinating, is one of the most subtle gripping productions offered in many months.

The cast sets a hitherto unattained standard of histrionic excellence. Lewis Stone, as the heart-breaking Beau Revel, Florence Vidor, as the beautiful and alluring Nellie Steele, William Conklin, Harlan Tucker, Lloyd Hughes, Kathleen Kirkham, and others equally capable and popular, guarantee the artistry and fidelity of the characterizations.

Unusually beautiful and effective photography is another outstanding feature of "Beau Revel." In one of the scenes of Nellie Steele's exclusive dancing club, a remarkable double exposure has been achieved which produces the effect of a dance over and under, and in perfect rhythm, with the waves of a tumbling surf.

"Beau Revel" is the story of a wealthy, ultra-fashionable leader of New York's smart set, whose chief diversion is treating the love of beautiful women. His son, Dick Steele, and the only person for whom Beau has any real affection, loves Nellie Steele, a beautiful young dancer, who conducts an exclusive mid-night club frequented by the leaders of society.

Beau Revel, convinced that Nellie is not the sort of girl his son should marry, forces Dick to confess his love and then agrees if Dick will stay away from her for two weeks to prove his contention by having Nellie alone with him in his apartment at midnight of the last day.

Believing in his father's sincerity, reluctantly consents. Then follow events in quick succession, all filled with drama and appeal until the end of the story comes with one of the most amazing climaxes imaginable.

The comedy part of the program for this week will be furnished by a brand-new educational comedy, another one of those wonderful two-reelers that have proven so popular among the patrons of the Rialto during the past few weeks. The title of this latest mirth producer is "Holy Smoke" and it's funny all the way through.

"BEAU REVEL"

A Powerful Picture With a Surprising Climax

It is a story of a wealthy, ultra-fashionable society leader of New York who tries to protect his son from a dancer and falls in love with the girl himself. Nothing more luxurious in the way of New York night life, beautiful women and gowns, and pretentious Long Island estates has ever been done. It is one of the most lavish productions of the year.

Screen Entertainment for Coming Week

Many Fine Pictures On Program at Savoy For the Coming Week

William Christy Cabanne's powerful human screen drama, "The Stealers," is the opening attraction for the coming week at the Savoy theater. This big production, which comes Monday only in eight reels and one of the strongest pictures ever placed upon the screen, is an additional feature Monday No. 12 of the Screen Snapshot series.

Tom Mix is the star on the Tuesday program, appearing in the leading role in the five-part Fox western feature, "The Texan," a romance of the sage brush land and the great plains of the slums.

On Wednesday, the bill is topped by Norma Talmadge, in "A Daughter of Two Worlds," a marvelous story by LeRoy Scott of the slums and high society. Bud Duncan is also on the same bill, in the comedy "Poor Rich Cleaners."

Eugene O'Brien comes as the star Thursday in "The Figurehead," a powerful story of politics and love. The comedy for the same day is "The Bank," with Charlie Chaplin playing the chief comedy part.

For the balance of the week, excellent features and comedies have been provided. Friday brings Allen Dwan's production "Soldiers of Fortune," the cast is an excellent one and includes in the principal parts Anna Q. Nilsson, Wilfred Lucas and Pauline Starck. The Saturday attraction is William S. Hart in "The Apostle of Vengeance."

Herbert Rawlinson's press agent is telling people that the now popular leading man was once head pantryman on a Great Lakes steamer. Rawlinson is now playing opposite Ethel Clayton in a Paramount picture.

T. Daniel Frawley, now a Metro director, is planning another theatrical invasion of the Orient. While touring he will film scenes for a serial, the actors in which will be members of his dramatic company.

William Desmond Taylor has completed the filming of "Wealth," his latest Paramount production starring Ethel Clayton. Miss Clayton's "Lifted Veil," an original story by Arthur Jones.

Thomas Jefferson will have the role of "The Van Wyke" in the screen version of the play that bestowed fame upon his father, Joe Jefferson.

GERTRUDE ATHERTON RELATES STUDIO WOES

Gertrude Atherton, who is known the world over as a clever and successful writer, and in movie-land as a Goldwyn Eminent Author, recently talked to the members of a prominent Los Angeles woman's club. She told of all that might, might, the unwary in the studios, and also on the fate of one of her celebrated novels when it was transformed into a scenario for a picture.

"I'll never again sign a contract which gives the producer the right to entitle it," said Mrs. Atherton. "Someone at the studio, who knew how to take my 'Porch of the Devil' and wrote the continuity for it. He read it to me. I was amazed. I wouldn't know my own brain child. I couldn't get anything out of it. My producer said all good continuities are flat. Then I said my play would be a huge success for nothing could sound flatter than that continuity. But it wasn't a success. So I wrote the scenario of a new play, though that wasn't in my contract. But again flattery won me. Every one said it would be a great success. I wanted to call it 'Noblesse Oblige' or 'Honor,' but they wouldn't listen to that. This is the huge fly in my ointment. They called it 'Don't Neglect Your Wife.' I asked William de Mille when I met him socially if he couldn't get out an injunction against them for infringing on his lovely movie titles like 'Don't Change Your Wife' at all. He said he would ask Cecil."

"But Cecil said they might be able to get out an injunction as a trademark, but not under a copyright law. So my story with the scene laid back in the days of old California, 1868, went on with the modern title, 'Don't Neglect Your Wife,' which even I couldn't remember, and was variously called 'Don't Forget Your Wife' or 'Don't Neglect Your Husband,' and I never made myself so disagreeable to a human being in all my life as I made myself to Mr. Goldwyn. But it was just because I don't understand the movie game. You see, I'm too highbrow or something for them. But fancy a publisher changing the title to my book. Why, I'd go down and brain him."

Walter Hiers has a congenial role in Wanda Hawley's latest Realart picture, "A Kiss in Time."

Frank O'Connor, Realart director, will start this week on his initial production, Hector Tuerbull's "Everything for Sale."

Helene Chadwick has the leading feminine role in the original Mary Roberts Rinehart story, "The Glorious Fool."

Do You Know?

Jack Hoyt is an expert horseman.

Wanda Hawley is a good judge of tobacco.

Lola Wilson is slowly but surely working her way to stardom.

Margaret Loomis is said to be the most graceful dancer in films.

Wallie Reid persists in wanting to be a director.

Roy Stewart, when a youth in San Diego, was known as "the fighting choir boy."

Conrad Nagel has become very sedate since the arrival of a baby daughter.

Irene Rich is having the time of her cinema career playing opposite Harry Carey in Westerns.

Norma Talmadge entered motion pictures at the age of 14, with no previous stage experience.

CHILD ACTOR PAYS A MAN'S SIZE TAX

Four-year-old Stanley Goethals suddenly paused in one of the most dramatic scenes of May Allison's new production, "The Woman Next Door," now being filmed at Metro's Hollywood studios.

"Here, Stanley, what's happened to you, our most reliable player?" called out Bayard Veiller, chief of production at the Hollywood studios.

"Got to fix my tacks," said Stanley. "I forgot all about it."

"Tacks?" inquired Mr. Veiller, thinking of possible difficulties in the sole of the boy's shoe, chair or trousers.

"Yes—you know, tacks that you pay," explained Stanley.

"Oh, I see. Not carpet tacks or hardtacks, but income tax," agreed Mr. Veiller.

Finally it was revealed that little Stanley, at an age when other children are pleading for an occasional penny for a lollipop, is the possessor of an income that calls for much explaining to government tax collectors. As the boy's salary of no trifling proportions.

And now the boy is playing what promises to be an even more sensational part in "The Woman Next Door," a drama of mystery that has been crowded with all the gripping action that characterized Mr. Veiller's stage success. The picture, which was personally directed by Mr. Veiller, was prepared for screen

DESIGNS GOWN FOR TEN MINUTES' WEAR

Among the many precedents that have been established by Nazimova in the making of her elaborate production of "Camille" for Metro is one involving the costumes in which she will appear.

For a French fabric maker was called into conference to plan a new material, Parisian looms were called into service to weave it, and Miss Natacha Rambova designed one garment that will be seen for about ten minutes only when the picture is given its public showing.

Because of the distinctiveness of the material and design it can never again be worn.

Fifteen costumes worn during the different stages of the production are unique in their originality. They are typically Nazimova gowns, each portraying the fascinating personality of the great Russian artist.

For the opera scene, Nazimova will wear an opera gown of gold metallic cloth. Fashioned of one straight piece of the material, it is wound about the body and caught over each shoulder with a narrow strap. One single fastening holds the gown in place. The silver camellias are the only adornments to the costume.

With this gown is worn a striking opera cloak of black and silver cloth, studded with heavy silver camellias—the garment that required the especially designed and woven material. Unable to purchase the quality required for one cloak, it was necessary to have made in a wholesale lot, sufficient of the rich cloth to make a score of cloaks.

The foundation of the cloak is heavy black silk net. Equally heavy silver threads are used in the floral design. A wide band of kolinsky fur forms a border around the bottom of the cloak.

The Ince-Vance special, "The Bronze Bell," will be released by Paramount in May.

Ewart Adamson, noted Scotch writer and cartoonist, has been added to the Realart scenario staff.

By Molly Parro, of Metro's West Coast scenario staff from the story by Maxwell Karger.

Dorothy Gish In Paramount Comedy At the Vaudette

Thrills and laughter are happily combined in Dorothy Gish's latest Paramount comedy, "The Ghost in the Garret," which will be shown at the Vaudette theater on Monday and Tuesday. That this is one of the best comedies in which Miss Gish has been seen for many months all her admirers will agree after they have seen the picture.

Miss Gish, in this story, is a poor girl who goes to the home of her wealthy uncle and aunt, taking her dog and parrot with her. The dog plays a fashionable party to rout and from that moment the action is not permitted to drag for an instant. Then comes the theft of a valuable pearl necklace by a society crook who flees with his booty to a haunted house where his pals are in hiding. Going in pursuit of the thief to protect her sweetheart who has been arrested for the theft, she finally recovers the jewels after a series of thrilling and laughable show-ups.

As an added attraction a clever two-reel comedy entitled "Fresh From the City" will be offered.

On Wednesday and Thursday, Lois Weber's powerful drama, "Please One Woman," will be the screen, together with a fine educational comedy, entitled "Don't Blame the Story."

On Friday and Saturday the irrepressible Douglas Fairbanks will be seen in his celebrated farce comedy, "Manhattan Madness," one of the best pictures he ever made. As added attractions a fine two-reel comedy entitled "Let Er Go" will be offered, together with the ever popular feature "Topics of the Day."

Doug at Work

Doug Fairbanks and his company are now at work on the filming of "The Three Musketeers." Studio officials promise that the costars, more than a hundred in number, will be the most elaborate and picturesque ever seen on the silver sheet. The cast: D'Artagnan, Douglas Fairbanks; Athos, Leon Barry; Porthos, George Sargent; Aramis, Eugene Pallette; De Rochefort, Eugene Irvin; Buckingham Boniface; Sidney, Frank Planchet; Charles Stevens; Cardinal, Nigel de Brulijer; De Treville, Willis Robards; Father Joseph, Louis L. Adolphe; Mary MacLaren; Constance, Marguerite De La Motte; Milady, Barbara La Marr; Louis XIII, Adolphe Menjou; Edward Knocklock, who has written the continuity, is supervising the making of the wardrobe in order to insure that the costumes will be the star's screen masterpiece.

Maxwell Karger, Metro director of action, has returned to Los Angeles from New York and is engaged in the filming of "The Man Who..."

Sidney D'Albrook, character comedian, will play the comedy heavy in Viagraph's "The Son of Wailingford."

Ellnor Glyn appears as an extra in her own screen story, "The Great Moment," now being filmed at the Lasky studio in Hollywood, Cal.

MCKENZIE GIVEN SENTENCE TO PEN IN MURDER TRIAL

Springfield, Ga., April 23.—(Special.)—The jury in the case of Frank McKenzie, charged with the murder of Robert Crosby, at Guyton, Ga., March 21, brought in a verdict of guilty of manslaughter this morning. The penalty was fixed at from 15 to 20 years in the penitentiary.

The trial lasted three days, and, because of the prominence of the two families, attracted wide attention. McKenzie claimed to have killed Crosby in self-defense. J. W. McKenzie, father of the convicted man, is to be tried as an accessory before the fact.

Motion for a new trial has been made and granted. A change of venue will be asked. Application for bail for the father of young McKenzie, indicted as an accessory before the fact, was favorably viewed by the court. The killing is understood to be the outgrowth of family trouble of long standing.

Fall Will See Completion of Beautiful New Westminster Presbyterian Church

New edifice to be erected at cost of $100,000 to rank with foremost religious institutions of Atlanta.

The beautiful new Westminster Presbyterian church, being erected at the corner of Ponce de Leon avenue and North Boulevard, will rank among the foremost of the religious institutions of Atlanta upon completion some time in the early fall. Plans were prepared by C. H. Hopson, well known architect, and the total cost of the building, together with the Sunday school rooms, will approximate $100,000.

The rooms for the church activities will be in the extreme front of the building, contrary to the customary arrangement, and a wide Gothic entrance will open through the center leading into the church auditorium. The interior will be lofty, having an elaborate trussed roof, the ridge of which will be 60 feet from the floor. This will be supported by four marble shafts, 28 feet in height. The trimmings of arches, piers and windows will be of stone.

Dr. J. W. Caldwell, Jr., is the pastor, and under his inspiring leadership the campaign for the building funds has been carried on the past year, with remarkable results. Dr. Caldwell was called to New Orleans. The building committee, under whose supervision the work is being executed, is composed of W. M. Everett, chairman; L. D. Strouse, Dr. C. J. Vaughn and Dr. D. G. Wise.

The new location selected for the site is an ideal one, being, as it is, in the very midst of the residential section of the majority of the members of the congregation, and in the center of a rapidly growing apartment house district.

HENRY GRADY PRASED BY JUDGE BEN H. HILL

Celebration Meeting Hearty Response on Every Hand in Atlanta.

The great celebration of Henry W. Grady's birthday, May 24, planned by the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce on a nation-wide scale, is meeting enthusiastic indorsement on every hand. Many Atlantans have expressed themselves as highly gratified that the occasion will be set aside.

Prominent among the expressions is that of Judge Ben H. Hill, one of the city's best known citizens, who Saturday said:

"Atlanta has been blessed with many citizens whose generous and unselfish services have contributed to her growth and power, and to whom she owes a large debt of gratitude. But in her wonderful history of civic pride and progress the tireless and brilliant efforts of Henry Grady stand far above all others.

Always Responded.

"There was never a crisis in the upward career of the city that he did not respond with devoted enthusiasm to her call for help, and whose unselfish efforts always lifted her to higher and stronger levels. 'Recalling his life of service, it is most appropriate that citizens should join in affectionate and grateful commemoration of his birthday, to be celebrated under the auspices of our chamber of commerce on May 24. Remembering him and his work, we will forget all our differences and reunite in consecrated work in behalf of our beloved city.

"The plan of the chamber of commerce to celebrate the anniversary of the birth of Henry Grady on May 24 is such as Grady would have most appreciated, and I hope and believe that all Atlanta will join in it," said Forrest Adair, Saturday.

"I believe the proper celebration of his birthday offers us a great opportunity to not only pay fitting tribute to one of the south's greatest sons, but to take stock of our own citizenship to the end that we may try at least to match our ideals with his."

"Of all the leaders that Atlanta has ever developed, the figure of Grady stands out the clearest in my memory. In my boyhood the men of Atlanta were naturally much closer together than now, because the city was so much smaller, and the only means of transportation was an occasional 'hay burner.' The philosophy and wit of Grady, Evan Howell, Joel Chandler Harris and others of the old guard sparkled as they rode to and from their offices. As a young fellow associated with my father in business, I was thrown in constant touch with these stalwart men, and I well remember many occasions when Henry Grady would sound a call for a meeting on some public matter, and the banker and lawyer, doctor and merchant, gathered at his door, ready to follow wherever he might lead.

100 KIWANIS GO FOR MEETING

Atlanta Is to Send Large Delegation in Effort to Land the Next Annual Convention.

Atlanta's campaign for the 1922 convention of the International Association of Kiwanis clubs has every assurance of success if the Atlanta Kiwanis club sends a big delegation to this year's convention to be held in Cleveland in June, for the purpose of presenting Atlanta's invitation.

This was the definite impression left upon the minds of Atlanta Kiwanians by O'Samuel Cummings, international secretary, who spent Friday and part of Saturday in the city, and who infused the "On to Cleveland" committee with new enthusiasm in their campaign to organize a monster delegation.

Beginning tomorrow, the committee will inaugurate an intensive drive to secure not only among the members of the Atlanta Kiwanis club, but also among the members of other Kiwanis clubs in Georgia, of which there are nineteen, all flourishing. The committee is composed of thirty-five Kiwanians selected for their experience and energy in work of this kind, under the leadership of Simon Selig, with William L. McCalley as vice chairman and Roy Walraven as secretary. In addition to the "On to Cleveland" committee there is a transportation committee headed by C. D. Knight, which will attend to all details in that line.

One Hundred to Go.

One hundred Kiwanians as a minimum, a large number of ladies, a special train and loads of Atlanta banners, souvenirs, advertising matter, noise-making devices, invitations and general enthusiasm—these are the goal of the "On to Cleveland" committee, with a strong representation of Kiwanians from other Georgia cities thrown in for good measure. Next Tuesday's weekly meeting of the club is the last one to be held before the hotel reservation lists will be apportioned among Cleveland hotels for the June convention, and the committee is planning a record attendance for the purpose of signing up the entire delegation then and there.

Plenty of Vigor Shown.

Mr. Cummings' visit last week was a great inspiration to all who heard him. He went over with directors of the club all important features of their campaign, addressed the members at a luncheon Friday, spoke to the members of the Presidents' club Friday night, and appeared before the directors of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce, the Atlanta Convention bureau and the Atlanta Hotel Men's association. He declared he had never seen a finer spirit of civic unity and co-operation than here among Atlanta's civic organizations, all of which are ready to help each other in a big and important undertaking.

Although Atlanta's chances of winning the convention are exceedingly good, she will not play the game all by herself. Fort Worth, Texas, and Toronto, Canada, are going to Cleveland with urgent invitations backed by big delegations, and Atlanta is going to be called on to extend herself to the utmost. It is therefore specially important to have a big delegation.

NEGROES WILL HOLD MASS MEETING TODAY

A big educational mass meeting will be held Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock in Big Bethel church. Some of the most prominent negroes in the city will make addresses, and a splendid musical program has been arranged.

Secretary W. J. Trent, of the Butler Street branch Y. M. C. A., will preside. Dr. C. V. Roman, of Nashville, Tenn., has been invited to appear on the program, while the principal address will be delivered by Dr. J. W. E. Bowen, of the Gammon Theological seminary. Other prominent speakers include Dr. P. J. Bryant, Dr. W. P. Penn, W. J. Faulkner, physical director of the Butler Street branch Y. M. C. A., and C. A. Shaw, of the Standard Life insurance company.

Liberty Bond Investment.

United States government bonds are about the only securities in which one does not need to spread the risk. They are the obligations of all the people and of all the businesses of the country. Their principal and interest is secured by taxation on all these sources. The risk is spread the full length and breadth of the United States. It is not confined to any one section, nor is it based upon any one single industry or activity. Here is one security that combines the elements of diversification within itself. No corporation, state or other local security does this. That is the reason why Liberty bonds are particularly suitable investments for persons who cannot afford to take risks with their money—which is to say they are particularly suitable for most everybody, for there are few who really can afford to take risks with their savings.

Roscoe Arbuckle Rumor.

The allusion to giggles, hilarity and shrieks is a reminder that about the most interesting rumor now afloat about the west coast cinema

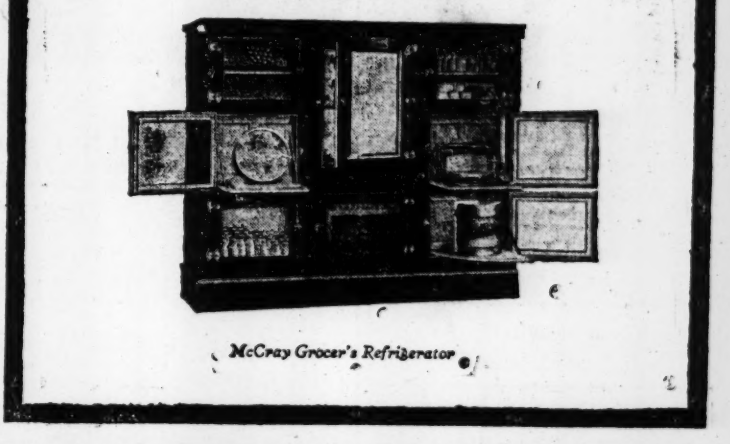

Atlantans Are Urged To Become Associate Ad Club Members

Invitations to representative Atlantans asking them to become associate members of the Atlanta Advertising club were sent out Saturday by Miss Theodora Stansbury, chairman of the women's department. General Pershing, in this author's opinion, "was but a puppet of the Wilsonian policy; the peace treaty is "the bandits' peace of Versailles."

Reference is made to "the robber and cutthroat instincts of those soudreals, Lloyd-George and Clemenceau," and so it goes throughout the eighteen pages of the tract.

It is from the pen of a man named Herman George Scheffauer,

"of California," the reader is informed by the front cover.

It was published by the "Overseas Publishing company, Hamburg;" rubber-stamped on the reverse side of the front cover by

"Ferdinand Hansen, Hamburg 15, Spaldingstrasse 152," and imprinted from the press of "Berliner

Handelsdruckerei, Berlin, N. 27,

Schonhauser Allee, 6-7."

Consider the source!

RIGHTEOUS INDIGNATION.

Law-respecting Georgians generally will agree with Dr. Spencer R.

Stone that "the recent and frequent escapes of prisoners in Georgia arouses the indignation of honest taxpayers," as he expresses it in a communication in another column of this page.

Dr. Stone is a prominent physician of Atlanta, not given to hysteria nor to criticism of public officials ill-advisedly or without ample reason for doing so.

And particularly in this instance his "indignation" is righteous indignation.

A few weeks ago a nationally-notorious bank swindler was caught "red-handed" in the act of mutilating one of the leading banks of Atlanta to the tune of approximately $10,000. He was arrested by Pinkertons, taken to the Atlanta police station and turned over to the detective department.

Without guard he was permitted to go with an attorney into the detective headquarters consultation room for a "conference" behind closed doors.

Presently he was gone from there—he had made his getaway by simply crawling through an open window to freedom—and, so far as we know, he is still at liberty, and, perhaps, still swindling banks.

Just a few days ago a convict was brought to Atlanta to testify

as a witness in a case on trial.

Returning, his keeper—at the prisoner's request—accompanied him to a hotel on a supposed errand;

and the desperate man was permitted to escape through a rear entrance to the building, and probably would be going yet had he not voluntarily returned to the Fulton county Tower and given himself up!

The escape of the notorious bunco gangster, Abe Powers, from the state prison farm at Milledgeville, alluded to by Dr. Stone, is still fresh in the public mind.

Society pays large sums of money to employ officials to protect it against crime—as our correspondent puts it, "to arrest and retain criminals."

These men were arrested, placed in the hands of public servants paid to hold them in custody of the law.

They are gone!

Had they overpowered their guard, or had they saved bars or by other violent means procured their liberty there might possibly have been a measure of excuse for the keepers.

But in each of these instances the criminal escaped with the ease with which a mischievous schoolboy plays "hooky!"

For the guardians of the public safety to say "I thought" so-and-so, or "I was told that the man was to be trusted," will never do—it will not satisfy the public!

A man competent to be entrusted with the custody of desperate criminals is not supposed to "think" anything relating to the security of their charges. They are supposed only to know!

They are supposed to take nothing for granted!

Bank swindlers and confidence

buncoists, of all types of criminals, are shrewd, quick-witted, cunning

as a fox, resourceful.

They necessarily have the outward appearance of the "gentleman;" they bear the apparent marks of refinement and trustworthiness—otherwise, they would not be able to swindle or to gain their victims' confidence.

Their business requires that.

Men entrusted with the custody of desperate criminals should be men who know something about human nature—especially something about the nature and wiles and tactics and cunning and subtlety of men who make their living by craftiness and by outwit-with the services of our peace officers and prosecutors and criminal court judges, and scrap our jails and penitentiaries.

A CENTURY AFTER.

On May 5 the centenary of the death of Napoleon Bonaparte will be celebrated.

Already the announcement of it has started something like a world controversy.

The mere mention of the name

"Napoleon" anywhere, and at any time, sets the argumentative powers of laymen and military men in action.

His pictured face, on an office wall, is enough to make the caller on important business forget his mission and follow the "Little Corporal" through splendid battle scenes to the final field of Waterloo!

The world will never have done with him, one way or another.

Forever it will fight his battles over—defending and assailing.

His "faith in a star" was not misplaced. The light of that star led armies in the late world-war, but the ambition that created it sent another would-be world-conqueror to worse than death.

Recent eminent English criticism has not spared the Napoleonic tradition. Napoleon has been called "a little man in a cocked hat," and "a very little man," at that!

They never will "leave him alone in his glory!"

So there will be universal celebration of the centenary of his death; with France, of course, leading—always loyal to his great memory.

And after what changes of Time

—from empire to republic eternal;

with the blood of late fresh-guttured still coloring her clouds—the "red rain" yet on her ruined fields!

It was predicted that Napoleon's downfall marked the end of war.

That was as far as they could read the future then.

But his battlefields were as play-places, and his battles like playing at war to what the world has since witnessed.

His fame, bright and dark, needs no reviving, but a century after his death there will be a revival of all that went to make him honored or condemned.

We shall have poems, pamphlets, and perhaps new histories of the man and his campaigns.

In the celebrating time Waterloo will stand out in the mind of France. Her chief and victorious enemy then is now her ally, and the blood shed for her by that ally has wiped out old scores.

And France will not be without thought then of the crosses on the later fields that make her turn in

NEW PEACE PACT MAY BE FRAMED AT BERLIN

France May Follow U. S. In Rejection of Treaty Written in Paris Meet

Action on Part of European Republic Warranted By American Refusal of Terms—Stands Taken at Peace Conference Repudiated By Subsequent Moves.

BY FRANK H. SIMONDS

Washington, April 23.—Will the treaty of Versailles be revised by a conference held at Washington or by a treaty made at Berlin? This is the question squarely raised now, when the first declarations of the Harding administration and the subsequent indication of French policy serve to reopen the whole discussion of European affairs.

On behalf of the state department announcement has been made that American representatives are to resume the place which was occupied by other representatives of this country in the reparations council. It is further intimated that, on invitation, we are prepared to send delegates to the Porto Rosso conference, which, on April 30, is to take up nominally the question of helping Austria, but actually the problem of restoring economic life and order in central Europe from Prague to Salonica.

We have now to consider the whole range of American declarations in recent weeks, beginning with the note to Berlin which warned Germany of American purpose in the matter of reparations. Followed by President Harding's message to congress and completed by the official statements coming directly from the state department and expressing the purpose of the United States to resume participation in the economic discussions of Europe. In the same sequence must be counted the notes to Great Britain and France in the matter of mandates.

U. S. Conception Plain.

Now the American conception, the conception of Mr. Harding and of Mr. Hughes, seems fairly plainly set forth. America has rights which must be asserted, hence the mandate discussions. America has a duty which must be performed, hence the warning communicated to Germany through Mr. Drexel at Berlin. Finally, America has interests, economic interests, which are vitally affected by European conditions and discussions, hence the assertion that we desire to be represented in all conferences, such as those held in the past at Spa, San Remo, Hythe, London and Paris.

As a matter of foreign policy we

That Corn ends tonight

Make that resolve and watch what Blue-jay does. Apply it with a touch—the liquid or the plaster. The corn pain will cease at once. In a little while the whole corn will loosen and come out.

This is the scientific method and is right. A famous chemist perfected it. This world-famed laboratory stakes its reputation on it.

It is gentle, yet sure. The old, harsh methods are not in favor now.

Mr. Baruch sets it forth in his volume, which is worth rereading on this point at this time. We can say to Britain, France, Italy and Belgium, "reduce your claims for German reparations to the level of the existing situation," but in saying this we cannot once more affirm, as was done at a recent cabinet meeting, that our loans to Europe will not be canceled or reduced.

The thing which is not accurately appreciated in America is that the allied demands upon Germany represent in fact, for more than 50 per cent, the basis of allied payment of American reparations. The German owe to the British, under the Paris agreement, almost exactly the sum which the allied nations owe to the United States. When France had deducted from her share of German reparations the portion due to Britain and the United States she will have less than enough to pay for restorations and nothing for pensions.

Thus it follows inevitably, as the experience of the Paris conference demonstrated, that at a certain point American representatives must abandon all agitation for a reduction of the sum of German reparations or accompany their arguments with promises to America will at the same moment agree to reductions of its claims upon its associates. The United States cannot argue that its associates of the war show greater consideration for Germany than it is willing to show to these same associates. Yet there is much talk now of "fixing reparations," as if they could be fixed, or the past fixation could be simply modified.

Lesson of Conference. It seems to me that to assume that because the United States is manifestly affected by economic unrest in Europe and because this unrest is due in part to the question of reparations we have the right or could acquire the privilege to procure a reduction of the sum of German reparations is to imagine a vain thing. What the Harding administration has yet to do is to pay in concessions to European interests. This was the final lesson of the Paris conference.

It may be assumed as axiomatic that the French, the Belgians and the Italians, and probably the British, will not consent to any reduction at their expense of the sum of German reparations merely because such a reduction by restoring European markets would benefit the United States. If we are going to set up such claims we can only maintain them by entering into a new transaction. And if it was transactions, after all, which ruined Mr. Wilson at Paris.

Mr. Hughes has said over and over again in public utterances, and his documents have indicated the same view, that the United States is intimately concerned with every phase of the world economic situation. It is a favorite phrase, borrowed from official sources, that every American consumer and taxpayer is affected by the European situation. But it is not realized with sufficient clarity that to obtain a benefit for the same taxpayers and consumers we shall have to pay in kind.

Others May Reject Part.

Moreover, and this point is capital, since we have decided to reject all of the treaty of Versailles which is not of benefit to us, is it unreasonable to expect that a similar policy may presently be adopted by one or more European powers? This brings me to the alternative I have mentioned in my opening paragraph. If the treaty of Versailles is mainly rejected by the United States why should it not be rejected by France? Certainly the objections are no more technical and the way of escape not fraught with too many legal difficulties.

Let us suppose, for example, that France should find in the present German attitude in a final refusal on May 1 to meet the conditions explicitly laid down in the treaty of Versailles warrant for action against Germany, which might amount in terms to a declaration of war. Let us suppose that France sees in this situation which is fully as unsatisfactory for her as that created by Mr. Wilson has been for us. Let us conceive that France should repudiate the work of Clemenceau as we have "scrapped" that of Wilson.

Certainly there is quite as much justification for the French. Their reigned permanent occupation of the Rhine barrier in return for Anglo-American guarantee against German attack, unprovoked at the time. But the American action will not and will not ratify that treaty and the British ratification is without effect. The French have then lost security, in advance. In the same way France repudiated her historic and economic claims to the Sarre basin, in the face of Anglo-American opposition and with the assurance of Anglo-American financial and political assistance as a substitute. And neither the one nor the other is forthcoming.

France Is Loser.

France has, in reality, lost everything which Clemenceau bargained for in the conference of Paris. She is now thrown back upon her own resources to collect any reparations. She has been compelled already to reduce her reparations claims, first in the original conference of Paris and thereafter in the various conferences from Spa to London. Aside from possession of the provinces of Alsace-Lorraine, a temporary ownership of Sarre, coal mines under league of nations direction and limited occupation of the left bank of the Rhine, she has nothing to show for her victory.

Why then should not the French, following the American example, free themselves from the treaty of Versailles? They can do it by the simple recourse to a declaration of war for which German actions have supplied and will continue to supply a score of reasons. Following the declaration they can go to Berlin. There is no one to stop them. At Berlin they can write a new treaty of peace which assures them permanent occupation of the Rhine barrier and absolute title to the Sarre basin, which will give to their Polish ally the equally clean title to Danzig and to the Silesian coal fields. And at Berlin they can make final terms covering the whole subject of reparations.

I am aware that such a program will seem to some of my readers fantastic and to others criminal. But, stripped of all details, it represents a very far repetition of the American course. We found the Versailles bargain totally unsatisfactory and we repudiated it. We were able to repudiate before ratification, while the French legislature ratified it on the express assumption that American ratification would follow promptly and automatically. The French have been caught where we escaped, but do they need to stay caught? Is there no way out for a nation, wholly united in sentiment and possessing the power to express its national purpose?

France May Back Down.

In my judgment such a French course will be made almost inevitable if American decision to re-enter European discussions with the express purpose to avoid all commitments and work solely for the protection of American economic interests is followed to its logical end. If the United States undertakes to set up a right to fix the sum of German reparations, while insisting upon maintaining the sum of allied indebtedness to it, that claim will not only be repudiated, but repudiated with extreme bitterness. Europe wants American co-operation, one hears this assertion on all lips, and the truth is self-evident. But Europe does not understand American co-operation to be anti-lateral. France understands co-operation to mean assistance in collecting German reparations, not undertaking to reduce the sum total of that reparations. All our former associates can understand a policy which seeks to assist American rights, that have been allowed to lapse, by American passivity in past months, but which can be revived. So far the Harding administration is on sound ground.

Europeans do recognize it. It understands a little less easily the decision to have nothing to do with the league of nations that, too, is a matter of right. But the moment America undertakes to assume a place in European councils, then it is just as plain as plain can be that the United States must be benefited by a restoration of real peace, then let America pay her share toward such a result. This is the situation which American representatives will have to face.

Reaction After Conference.

Europeans of the opinions which have followed the Paris conference have had a French as well as an American reaction. The repudiation of Clemenceau is just as big a fact as the repudiation of Wilson. And Clemenceau has been repudiated because he based his whole conduct of the Paris conference upon the conception of Anglo-French-American solidarity. The American people are accustomed to refer to concessions made by Mr. Wilson, which they regard as prejudicial to American interests, with bitterness, but there is no less bitterness in the tone of the Frenchman, talking of the concessions Clemenceau made to Mr. Wilson and Lloyd-George.

The treaty of Versailles counts in France for just as colossal a failure as in the United States, and in addition, it is reckoned a national catastrophe, since it has prejudiced so many vital French interests, which count for far more than the treaty. The French people, in the mass, are not so much concerned with the mass of Americans desire to escape from the control of the unpopular paragraphs of the treaty of Versailles, what shall one say of the feelings of the average Frenchman whose very existence, to his mind, is compromised by the document?

In my judgment, then, it would be a mistake to overlook the fact that one consequence of the positive declarations of the Harding administration in the matter of foreign policy may be the "scrapping" of the treaty of Versailles by the French. I do not think that there is any Englishman, Frenchman or Belgian, who would over the assertion in French lines that France ratified the treaty under a total misapprehension of the war and its certain benefits and she paid in advance. But the benefits have been withheld and she now has obtained under any conditions.

Way Out Is Plain.

The way out, as I have said, is plain. The road to Berlin is open and a treaty of Berlin can easily secure the defects of the document made at Paris and signed in Versailles. The United States has repudiated the treaty of Versailles, Germany has deliberately defied its provisions. The benefits France claimed and believed to be assured are lost, why should France "stick" to the treaty which has brought her no benefit and which she believes she can obtain by action now?

Of course, if France goes to Berlin, American business will suffer. So will British. There will be criticism in London and in Washington. But will either Britain or the United States undertake to secure for France the things which every Frenchman holds essential as essential as the United States has held those rights, to preserve which it has repudiated the treaty of Versailles, in all the essential details? Will either the American or British governments consent to share with France the expense of a joint military expedition to bring Germany to terms? Will the United States guarantee to France any of the things which France believes she can obtain by action now?

What has happened is that just as in the United States the Wilson doctrine of world association under the league of nations has been repudiated, in France the Clemenceau doctrine of Anglo-French-American association has been abandoned as a phantom, not a reality. We are asserting here in Washington, over and over again each day, a policy which we describe as American. But every returning traveler from Paris can testify that in the French capital one hears just as frequent iteration of a policy which is there named French.

Warranted French Action.

The course of the Harding administration in repudiating the league of nations and all but American circumstances of the treaty of Versailles, which amounts in reality to abandoning the treaty, whatever the disapproval of the employed must supply the French with precisely that warrant, in fact, which they desire for a similar policy based upon even greater material considerations. If the American believe the treaty of Versailles did violence to American independence, the Frenchman is not less firmly convinced that the same treaty created a permanent menace to French safety, that it left France at once financially ruined and militarily indefensible.

Now, exactly this state of mind and state of facts will have to be faced by Mr. Harding, by Mr. Hughes, by whatever distinguished statesmen it may send to Europe to represent the United States in any new or old international commission. America is to go, so official Washington asserts, to protect and advance American interests. But these interests have no peculiarly sacred character. They must take their place alongside British, French, Italian and Belgian interests. When there is a conflict there will have to be a compromise. When we maintain our interests we shall have to pay for it.

At Paris, in 1919, France desired to fortify her future by taking certain precautions, Lloyd-George and Mr. Wilson persuaded her to abandon her purpose, but only by promising something specific in return, something "equally as good." But both have failed to "deliver." And France, from her point of view, has regained her freedom of action. She is undertaking in 1921 to seek the same things she was deprived of in 1919. She has the power and she believes she has the right. She is strengthened in her conviction by the course of the United States in repudiating a transaction which it held injurious to national interest. That will Great Britain and the United States offer now, if anything? And if they offer nothing, why should France hesitate?

One Danger in Situation.

One danger in the whole situation lies in the wholly exaggerated notion Americans have of their own power in the situation. Washington believes America has only to "ask" to receive. Mr. Wilson believed the same thing, but discovered at Paris that it was a case of "pay as you enter" and at each fare zone thereafter. We have far less power now than then, but otherwise the situation remains the same. We cannot do a thing, but only by making a similar reduction in the average American loans. We can persuade the French to relax military preparations against German attack, but only by guaranteeing American aid, that we cannot do to persuade any Englishman, Frenchman, Belgian, Italian or Pole to give up something vital to him, solely because he sacrificed his benefit to us.

In the last analysis the action of the Harding administration has done something more than kill the league of nations, it has slain the treaty of Versailles. In rejecting the document because of purely American reasons, it has supplied the basis for similar rejections in Europe. Our participation was one of the fundamental circumstances, in removing our post we have undetermined the whole structure. France ratified it only because of the guarantee of our support which it contained. They are gone.

The treaty is dead for France. The business of French statesmanship now is to obtain something in its place. As long as there was a doubt of American decision France had to wait. But there is no doubt and there is no further reason to wait. That is why I believe that, before the year is out, we shall have a treaty of Berlin supplanting that of Versailles. For, in the last analysis, if Mr. Hughes' decision has rescued us from all foreign entanglements, it has just as completely released France from all foreign restraints. If Mr. Harding fore the year is out, we shall have a treaty of Berlin supplanting that of Versailles. For, in the last analysis, if Mr. Hughes' decision has rescued us from all foreign entanglements, it has just as completely released France from all foreign restraints. If Mr. Harding has replaced Mr. Wilson, Mr. Poincaré has just as completely replaced Mr. Clemenceau, whether it operates through Mr. Briand or through Mr. Poincaré, the treaty of Versailles is dead. (Copyright, 1921, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate)

Belated Credit Given Far-Seeing Atlanta Pioneer

Late Colonel Richard Peters Named as Founder of Mohair Industry.

Just how much the Atlanta Spirit figures in the recent accomplishments of a great American manufacturer of mohair fabrics, is told in an interesting story in the current Dry Goods Economist under the title of "The Ramping Angora."

States. How this connects up with the beautiful displays of crepe mohair now being made by some of Atlanta's big department stores makes an appealing story, both on account of the local references and because it records a tremendous American triumph over old world methods.

The Dry Goods Economist says: "The late Colonel Richard Peters was awarded a special prize at the state fair in California in 1891 for the introduction of the Angora or Cashmere goat, when he actually exhibited two pure Angora rams, which he had obtained from Colonel Richard Peters, of Atlanta, Ga. One of these goats became famous all over the Pacific coast as 'Billy Atlanta,' and was known as the 'King of the Cashmere Goats.'"

"Colonel Peters was the real founder of the Angora breeding industry in the United States. In 1854 he purchased from Dr. Davis (James E. Davis, of South Carolina, to whom these goats had been given by the sultan of Turkey) his nine pure Angoras and a number of those who were called 'Thibet Angoras,' that is, Cashmires. In 1861, as already mentioned, he sent out two purebred Angora rams to California.

THE BUYER'S STRIKE.
As predicted, the so-called "buyer's strike" is being broken and business is gradually resuming a normal aspect.

A "buyer's strike" always defeats the very end in view. Production, at such a time, is lowered and warehouse stocks and reserves are reduced to a minimum. When the inevitable demand begins to be felt, there is a scarcity of goods and, naturally, prices again ascend the scale.

The wise purchasing agent is buying what he needs now for two reasons: First, buying what he needs now keeps his own organization busy and it helps keep the other fellow's factory working, too. Second—and this is important—there is no assurance that prices are always going to remain at the present low level.

Buy what you need NOW!—The Dodge Idea.

Successful Collection Methods

BY C. V. HOHENSTEIN

Any collection system, to be successful, must be based upon a thorough understanding of this thought: will furnish the proper slant on the problem of collecting—ignorance of it will keep you floundering around, working with no definite objective. Understanding this point, the problem resolves itself into one of "keeping alive this intention," and converting it into actual payment.

In a great many cases, it is at least difficult to keep alive such intention and convert it into payment—something more than mere persuasion must be resorted to in these cases. "Pressure" must be brought to bear, but it must be businesslike and definite.

Transition from persuasion to pressure must be co-ordinated so as to keep the debtor in a defensive attitude, that is, a position that will prevent him from charging you with being unduly persistent regarding payment of the bill. The steps from persuasion to pressure must be so graduated as to accomplish the desired end with as little loss to the good-will of a business as possible. It is hardly practicable to illustrate this basic principle in this particular article, but specific illustrations will be given here and there, so that you will not only appreciate the application of these ideas and grasp their spirit and intention, you will not only approximate something like 100 per cent in collection results, but you will go further by keeping for a business customers upon which so much energy and money has previously been spent in securing them.

It is quite impossible to get the right viewpoint on collections without some knowledge of the fundamentals involved in the selling and of a business. It is a function of the sales department not only to get sales, but, also, to keep such business afterwards. This latter function cannot be accomplished unless the collection department appreciates the significance of this idea and governs its activities accordingly.

I think I can safely state that 98 per cent of the patrons of the average business intend to pay, at the time a bill is contracted. Thorough understanding of this thought will furnish the proper slant on the problem of collecting—ignorance of it will keep you floundering around, working with no definite objective. Understanding this point, the problem resolves itself into one of "keeping alive this intention," and converting it into actual payment.

Real Factory-Made College Education

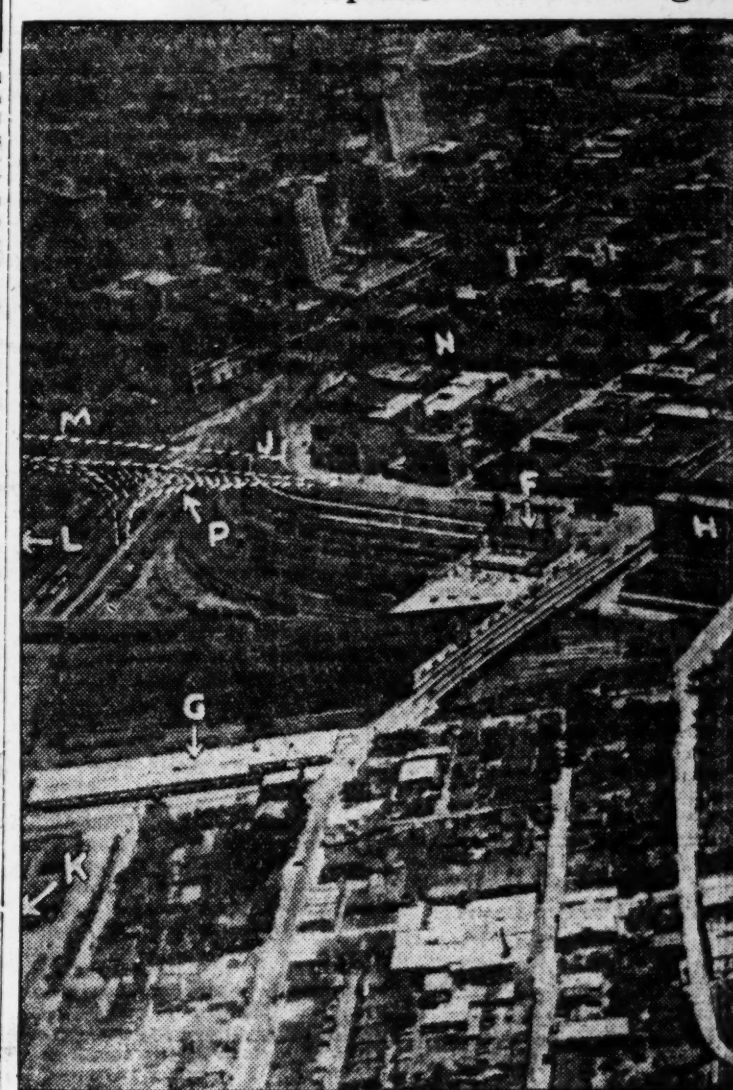

Last September there was started at the Carnegie Steel company an enlarged program of educational work. It involved so-called "works schools" and one of the main objects "was to bring within easy reach of deserving and ambitious employees who had not been able to attend college, some of the advantages of a college education combined with a practical knowledge of the metallurgy of iron and steel."

As a central school seemed impracticable, each plant has its own school, the management of which comes under the jurisdiction of the plant superintendent. No tuition is charged, nor are the students required to spend any money for supplies except special text-books which are supplied at the cost of printing.

"For all time spent in attending the lectures and recitations the men are allowed full pay. The company is endeavoring thus to remove as many restrictions as possible, and to present impartially to all its employees an opportunity to learn the reason for the practices of the mills."

Up to the present time these schools are in operation only at the three larger plants of the company, in the Pittsburgh district. At each of these plants the men taking the course are assembled twice a week, in classes of 20 each, for a period of instruction of not less than one hour. The recitation and lecture periods occur between the hours of 8 a. m. and 6 p. m.—The Iron Age.

Airplane View Showing New

The New Walker Street Wholesale District

THAT the importance of Atlanta as the wholesale, jobbing, distributing and manufacturing center of the southeast is increasing in a way that the average man in the street is entirely unaware of, is a matter of almost daily comment and observation on the part of those who are more directly engaged or interested in promoting the city's upbuilding.

The accuracy of this statement is concretely illustrated in views of the new Walker street wholesale district shown above.

Within three blocks of the Terminal station, this district—made every building shown and several not shown—has been recently built within a period of eighteen months from nothing at all in the way of business houses to a thriving and busy wholesale center of the city. And probably not one-tenth of Atlanta's population knows that it is there.

It is not a district devoted to any one line of wholesale or job interests, but on the contrary, no two concerns located there are the same line of business. It has grown because Atlanta has grown. Whether it has been a new concern that has started or located in Atlanta or an old one that was compelled to find larger quarters, the result is the same—an increase in this city's wholesale development.

Unfortunately, the illustration does not do these properties justice—it does not show the size nor depth nor the high quality of construction. But the aggregate business done annually by the several concerns housed in this one block exceeds $10,000,000, and the representatives of these firms cover every point in the southeast—each carrying and preaching the gospel of Atlanta's superiority as the great central market.

While the cold facts are just as stated—the growth of Atlanta a big business center is the reason why this district has grown substantially in such a short time—a fair word must be said for the peculiarly advantageous location of the district itself. As shown

VISITING CUBA FOR BUSINESS SURVEY

Herbert E. Choate, treasurer of the J. K. Orr Shoe company, left Wednesday for Cuba to be gone for about three weeks. The object of Mrs. Choate's visit will be to make a general survey of financial, commercial and agricultural conditions as they may affect the selling and credit policies of his company for the immediate future.

The J. K. Orr Shoe company established a Cuban selling agency some years ago and have a number of very choice accounts in the island. Mr. Choate will spend a good portion of the time traveling through the interior, accompanied by a Spanish interpreter and observing conditions at first hand. He expects to return about the middle of May.

A Measure of Atlanta's Commercial Growth

The airplane view above this district is in the very heart of Atlanta, although out of the rumble and rattle of the galloping downtown streets.

W. D. Hoffman, district manager of the Otis Elevator company, whose councilman duties seem to require him to keep a path well worn between his cool and airy offices in the Otis building and the city hall, says that he can walk it easily in thirteen minutes, and he does not brag on his ability as a sprinter.

Alvin Lovingsood, of the Lovingsood company, declares that although the street car service is as good as any in the city, he seldom waits for a car or takes time to crank the office runabout.

Just why this section of the city lay dead white business built around it on practically every side is a problem for the man who figures all these things out, but when the building started it certainly got under way at a rate that seems to mean fast work from now on.

At the rear of this block runs an industrial track, a spur of the Southern railway, which is so arranged as to give each concern side-track privileges for loading and unloading cars while not interfering with switching cars in or out for others. This service extends to the adjoining and opposite properties located on this spur and it is along this trackage that the building is continuing. Concrete loading platforms in the rear of each building furnish ideal facilities for the handling of freight, and as the construction of all the buildings is of the standard mill type with brick and concrete the principal materials used, the fire risk is reduced practically to the vanishing point.

Nearly all buildings have offices on the second floor, and the occupants believe they have a location that solves many of the regular office troubles of the day. Employees are in pleasant surroundings, close enough to the center of the retail district to be in almost immediate touch with everything that downtown Atlanta offers, and still in an atmosphere that does not sustain the distractions of ordinary office life.

BETTER BUSINESS METHODS

BY M. R. MILES
PRESIDENT ATLANTA AUDIT CO., INC.

ORGANIZATION and advertising, as fundamental and basic factors in the work of laying the foundation and building any successful business, having been considered in last week's article, this article will be confined to credit methods and accounting--the two essential features making for the continuance and maintenance of that business.

Credit Methods.
It would seem that with an organization perfected, goods carefully and thoughtfully bought, a corps of willing and interested salespeople and an advertising manager who knows that money has been provided for him to make the worth of his goods known, success had been achieved. In fact, there is a very prevalent opinion that if a business succeeds in building up a large sales account it will "go over the top." This is largely true if the selling is for cash and such margin has been provided as will allow for a handsome profit. But if, as is generally the rule, the goods are sold on time--thirty, sixty, ninety days and up--after a few weeks of large sales, when the accounts begin to roll up and the bookkeepers are working overtime, the management gives a serious consideration to a credit man. He must be a student of finances, well informed as to local conditions and, as far as is practicable, know the people with whom the concern would like to form business connections.

It is very important that the credit manager be familiar with accounting methods since it often devolves upon him not only to see that the accounts placed upon the books are safe, but that the payments of them are forthcoming in such manner as will meet the requirements of the business. When the credit manager is not responsible for the collections he should co-operate with the collection manager from the time the account is created until the money in payment of it is safely in the bank. In many instances business promoters forget that after all of the foregoing advantages have been taken there are other guarantees and securities which are of vital interest. We do not mean merely the insuring of the stocks of merchandise, equipment, etc., against fire and burglary and the bonding of all employees who handle funds, although these are vastly important. The safest insurance for any business today is a proper and adequate accounting system, so kept as to provide for a full and correct accounting at any time.

Accounting.
At the close of the business year the accounting department will, of course, make a full report as to just what has been accomplished and what profit had been made on the investment. However, we believe that the report by the bookkeeper should not be sufficient, but that a disinterested party should verify the report--this for the satisfaction of all at interest. The honest bookkeeper or treasurer will invite such verification. In such report it is not only determined as to whether all funds have been accounted for, but just what profit has been realized or what loss has been sustained in the operation of each department. It is not infrequent for a complete audit of a business to disclose the fact that one of its largest departments--one showing sales larger in proportion to the expenses than many other departments--is really operating at a loss. True the selling price shows a profit over the cost and the expenses have not been unusually heavy, but when all facts have been taken into consideration the manager, who prided himself that he was underselling a competitor and yet making money for his concern, is in reality having his department carried by other departments of the business showing a profit. Such a condition, once it has been determined, can, of course, be remedied. However, since the expenses cannot be cut without a detriment to the business there remains but one alternative. The selling price of the articles must be raised such a small margin as to not affect the trade, but at the same time to convert a losing proposition into a money-making one.

No doubt the proprietors of some of our leading department stores would be startled if they knew the exact amount of profit or loss each department of their business would show were the net results of the year's operations presented to them. While there are numerous other factors that go to make a successful business we believe the four great essentials have been touched upon briefly, two of which were considered in last week's article.

OUR FOREIGN TRADE

(The Dodge Idea)

During the past year our export trade with Europe--our oldest and best customer--has fallen off very seriously. Exports have decreased in that short time nearly $720,000,000 while, on the other hand, imports have increased nearly $476,000,000.

This condition is due, largely to the difference in exchange which exists today and to short-term credit basis which has dominated our foreign trade business during the past year. Germany needs raw cotton for her mills, but obviously cannot afford to buy with a currency worth less than ten cents to the American dollar. France needs American machinery and other products but wisely refrains from making purchases with her currency worth less than one-third of its face value.

American exports to the four principal South American countries during the past year showed a slight increase, as did our trade with Cuba. The more settled condition in Mexico during the last four months of 1920 is reflected in an increase of $75,000,000 in exports and an increase of $148,000,000 in imports. The present condition of Mexico leads to the conclusion that both exports and imports will total larger sums in 1921 than in any other previous year.

Exchange drawbacks and lack of credit have hindered, in a serious manner, our international trade and our foreign trade expansion for this year will be measured by the manner in which exchange rates are equitably equalized and by the extent to which we co-operate with institutions that are in a position to place long-term credits at the disposal of countries in constant need of our surplus products.

Our American industries should work harmoniously together toward solutions of these two important industrial matters which would mean an immediate general revival and stimulation of foreign trade, and this export trade would be very profitably reflected in added national prosperity and prestige.

Our export business affords the manufacturer a natural outlet for surplus goods and creates a business balance which means that a market for products is always available, regardless of the general business condition in any one single country.

'Leading Your Own Life Considered Selfish Doctrine'

President of Radcliffe College Warns Against This Viewpoint.

Dean of the faculty of arts and sciences at Harvard university and president of Radcliffe college, delivered a lecture at the Garlick theater, Philadelphia, recently, under the auspices of the Unitarian Laymen's league.

"The very notion that represents the individual proclaims its right to unchecked expansion as a nation, whatever the cost to its neighbors," said Professor Briggs. "Yet, if every nation adopts such a doctrine the result is the crushing of all nations but one, or international anarchy."

"Whether with nations or with individuals, the doctrine defeats itself. If everybody is determined to lead his own life, nobody will attain his end, and nobody will be happy."

"I have often heard the doctrine of leading one's own life preached to college students. It is partly true. The best servant makes the five talents ten; but the best servant, having made the ten, returns the money to his master. In colleges we see men developing capacities which they ought to develop, but developing them for selfish ends. We see this not merely in athletes, but in the studies."

"There is still room for Him who said, 'Bear ye one another's burdens, and so fulfill the law of Christ.' This generation should have taught us the peril of progress without faith and love. Though a nation or a world shall shut its eyes to the 'law of Christ,' the law that 'whoever will save his life shall lose it' is vigilant and eternal."

THE SECRET OF FRANCE

BY PAUL HAYDEN
(New York Commercial)

Out of 3,800 factories put out of commission during the war in France, June 1, 1920, showed 76 per cent had resumed operations.

On two large railway systems 1,810 miles of double track were destroyed. These have been entirely rebuilt, together with over 1,500 bridges, 12 tunnels and 536 railway and signal stations.

Houses to shelter 750,000 people have been totally rebuilt since the armistice.

Such facts and figures make our own chaotic conditions of strikes and "vacations" seem rather small.

What is back of the spirit of France which is solving her own reconstruction problems, while our own economic one seems to be at a standstill?

Turn back a page in French history and you will find the answer. It is not found in the lessons learned in the last war. These have brought difficulties and differences there as well as here. There is a foundation somewhat below and back of even the last six years, which explains her success.

At the close of the Franco-Prussian war France was a defeated and depressed land, robbed of her richest provinces and facing an indemnity of a billion dollars. It was expected that years would elapse before this, at that time a tremendous debt, could be paid.

It was paid in twenty-six months. This feat, considered at that time a miracle, was performed by a great national determination and agreement to produce and save. This was the moving spirit back of every Frenchman. It is the spirit which is performing the wonders of reconstruction noted above. It is the only spirit which will save every country today. It is the spirit which must come to America before we will be able to save ourselves from worse days of depression and disorganization.

Production alone is not all we need. But saving of money and material for home investment and foreign distribution must be preached and practiced.

We have our great historical lesson of "produce and save."

Why do we refuse to learn by it?

For the New Prosperity.

The business skies are clearing, but if we long for speedy sunshine we must make up our minds to push the clouds away for ourselves. All must co-operate. Every brain and hand must utilize every atom of energy, every constructive thought, every helpful suggestion that will bring us nearer to the dawn of the new day.

Management must become management plus. The producers of raw materials and manufacturers must co-ordinate their interests with wholesale and retail distributors in the will to win by working together.

Every sales organization should be on the road selling prosperity, and star salesmen should ignore the one night stands. Beating the brush for business is more profitable than killing the time at home.

Super-effort in the sanctum, office, factory, on the road, behind the counter will do more to blow away the clouds of uncertainty and put business on a sound economic basis than all the theories that ever have been or ever will be expounded.

Let's go--"The Optimist."

GENERAL TRADE--Industrial and Commercial Activities Reviewed

The Growth of the 'Truth' Ideal In Advertising

BY C. V. HOHENSTEIN
Secretary the Advertising Club of Atlanta

The Constructive Power of Vigilance Work.

It is well for everyone to get a clear understanding of the fundamental attitude of the national vigilance committee of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World and the Better Business Bureaus, operating with the national office. Unless this is done, misapprehension may arise in the minds of those who are not thoroughly acquainted with the extent of vigilance work.

Vigilance work is essentially constructive and reformative, as distinguished from punitive. That is, the power of the organization to punish offenders for offenses against the ideal of cleaner and better advertising is never invoked except as a very last resort. It is not a routine seeking to establish a record of convictions of offenders who violate the principle of "truth in advertising." On the contrary, it is a public-spirited enterprise, the object of which is entirely educational. Every advertiser at all times to bring offenders to a realization of the fact that, when they violate the principle of "truth in advertising," they are laboring under a misapprehension of the true mission of advertising, and that the organization desires to do them a real service by showing them the error of their ways. Many errors on the part of advertisers are purely unintentional, and a simple, courteous expression at the hands of the vigilance committee is all that is necessary to correct such omissions. Even in the case of offenders who really are inclined to "put something over" just so long as they remain within the law, suggestions from the vigilance organization meet a ready response and converts in such cases are very numerous. In fact, the files of the organization show a large number of such cases that have become now the staunchest supporters of the movement.

Only a comparatively insignificant percentage of cases have arisen of such a flagrant character that the legal power of the organization had to be invoked, and even then drastic action was adopted only after every possible measure of a persuasive character had previously been taken.

The business world in general is going to recognize that vigilance work abhors "big stick" methods, but on the contrary are actuated by a sincere desire to perform a service to the business world. With such a foundation, it is easy to understand why this movement has gained such proportions, and will continue to gain in momentum until it eventually becomes recognized as one of the outstanding institutions in commercial life.

WEEDS OR SEEDS?

(Georgia Savings Bank Topics.)

There are two ways of looking at small change. One man sees in pennies, nickels and dimes only weeds, and the other sees in them seeds. The man who sees in them weeds is the man who is not worth his money in the bank as soon as he has been able to save enough greenbacks to make it worth while. Meanwhile he treats the pennies, nickels and dimes in his pocket like so many weeds. He means to plant his money in the bank, but he never does. He lets them slip through his fingers because he does not recognize their potentialities. He scatters them broadcast as prodigally as nature scatters her weed seeds. The nickels, pennies and dimes considered as weeds produce their own harvest. They grow for their former possessor a crop of small useless things, and grasping acquaintances. They daily give him a crop of perplexing questions like, "What becomes of all my money?" Not content with this tangible mischief they implant in his very being the spendthrift habit. Once firmly rooted this habit is as tenacious as any weed. A garden overgrown with weeds is nature's replica for a spendthrift's financial garden.

The man who considers his small change as seed does not judge it by its present worth. He sees the latent possibilities of dimes, nickels and even pennies. He spends them wisely for things worth while. In this way he reaps a harvest of needs adequately supplied. He saves as much of his money-seed as possible, because he sees the wisdom of enlarging his financial garden, cultivating it more intensively.

Small change systematically saved soon amounts to considerable sum. Then the wise man plants his seeds in the protection of our institutions. He entrusts them to the care of expert financial gardeners, the seed coins grow into a money crop.

As his thrift account grows the habit of thrift takes deep root in the life of the man who has the "seed vision." Its importance as a crop is equally as great as the dollars which grow in the account.

Better Building Outlook.

Substantial February building reports have added confidence in the prospects for spring building. Builders are dictating the market, but rather than future reductions, a structural wood demand yellow pine, hemlock, spruce, fir, etc., is expected on western woods serving as a check on Douglas fir orders. A slight increase was noted in hardwood buying by industrialists that have increased their outputs. Weakness continues in lower grades of northern and southern woods, with further price declines quite general.

BOOK-BINDING AS LIBRARY PROBLEM

Many Interesting Details Unknown to the Borrower, Who Says, "All Bindings Look Alike to Me."

BY SUSIE LEE CRUMLEY,
Assistant Librarian, Carnegie Library, Atlanta.

The buying capacity of a library book fund has decreased 50 per cent since 1915 and the was librarian is studying more carefully than ever before, the book market, with its specialized problems of remainder stocks, editions and discounts. To the borrower who considers a library book buying merely a selection from many authors, titles and subjects, the librarian would like to point out an entirely new field of information—the physical make-up of the book. The conscientious librarian, having learned by observation that one edition of a juvenile book will wear as long as its pages are clean enough to be read, will not be enticed into buying heavily of another edition without first having tried out its merits with a single copy. The general knowledge of publishers' standards of publishing firms are quickly ascertained by such a study, for the constant use in a library of a book of mere pretentiousness within a very short time and reduce a poorly bound book to a ragged volume in less time than it takes to prepare the book for circulation.

Knowledge of publishers' standards and of the physical as well as the intellectual qualifications of particular editions is essential for a book buyer of a library, but here an even more essential matter of edition having been settled, there remains a choice of publishers' binding, reinforced binding and special library binding.

The publisher's binding is the only one considered in the Atlanta library for books other than fiction and juveniles; but in buying these two classes of books, careful consideration of binding is necessary.

Publisher's Bindings. To know what is meant by reinforcing a publisher's binding, it is necessary to know the publisher's binds his book, and to begin with—to understand that these books are not, properly speaking, bound at all, but merely pasted into a cover which is made by machinery in one part of the book, sewed together in another, and then, rounded and backed, is sent to the publisher. The publisher's binding is sewed together, group or printed, and the publisher's binding is sewed together, group or printed, and the publisher's binding is sewed together, group or printed.

As a first step toward reinforcing, a book must be carefully taken apart, one signature at a time, and all old threads, glue, paste, etc., removed. A thin coat of warm water may be used to soften the glue, but care must be taken to avoid the loss of text from erasing the book. The book should then be examined, page by page, to see that there are no imperfections and to repair any injuries that may be discovered.

Reinforced Bindings. The backs of the signatures are then pounded down so that they may be made as nearly as possible the same thickness as the front of the book. The book is then in the best possible condition it may be rebound from this state on, just as it was bound originally. If, however, the fold of any signature is worn through, the back is not only rounded down but it is put under the knife and entirely cut off, leaving single leaves instead of a special process of sewing, called "overcasting," is used to fasten the tapes extending across the back of the book. The success of overcasting depends largely on the amount of margin at the back, and care must be taken in cutting to take no more of this margin than absolutely necessary.

The value of reinforcing is that for a comparatively small price a book is restored to the library that otherwise would be thrown away and in a form that outlasts many times the original form in the publisher's binding. Statistics show that in a library where, with continued mending, publisher's binding will circulate 40 times, the same book rebound will circulate 80 times and probably be discarded then because the pages are too dirty and worn for further use, although the binding is still usable.

The Atlanta library spends between $700 and $1,000 in 1920 on rebounding and twice as large an amount would have been an economy on the part of the city.

New Wholesale Home of One of Atlanta's Live Wires

This new business home, only recently completed, is one of the largest and most modern buildings of its kind in the country. It has a frontage of 80 feet on Haynes street with 210 feet sidewalk on the Southern commercial tracks. This tractage side of the building has four large doors for loading and unloading goods which are so located that four cars may be placed on the sidetrack and loaded or unloaded at the same time.

The building covers 60,000 square feet of floor space, 5,000 square feet being allotted to general business and executives' offices. Being of brick and concrete construction with sprinkler system throughout, it is absolutely fire-proof.

On the south side of the building is a loading platform for trucks where city and suburban shipments are speedily handled. Among other modern conveniences are rest and dressing rooms, hot and cold showers and first aid equipment for employees. The offices have ideal lighting and ventilation and are cool and free from the downtown dust and dirt.

The growth of the Carter Electric company to the point where this splendid building became a necessity is not only a matter of much gratification to the personnel of the concern, but is another of those fine instances of the rapid and substantial progress which a combination of the Atlanta opportunity and the Atlanta spirit makes possible. It is a "home-grown" business house of which Atlanta may well be proud.

HARD TIMES OVER BUSINESS BETTER

In Palestine, under the businesslike administration of Sir Herbert Samuel, according to reports of the foreign agents of the American Express company, trade and industry are rapidly recovering from the wave of depression that set in in the spring of 1920. The market had been glutted with cheap German and Austrian goods brought in through Trieste, also with British cotton goods bought at very high prices. Until this accumulation of goods had been cleared, the banks had to refuse credit facilities to the Palestinian firms. However, reports now indicate that with the new building season and the plentiful harvest, Palestine will be able to absorb a considerable portion of the expected Jewish immigration.

Meanwhile, the Palestine administration is going ahead with an extensive program of public work. The industrial future of the country depends on the hydro-electric developments now being surveyed by competent engineers. whose opinion is that not only are these water sufficient to generate electrical power for Palestinian industries but also to provide a surplus for irrigation.

Count up how much you could have saved in the last year if you had not bought things you really didn't want or need.

FIRE PROOF

L. F. HACKETT, Prop.

Rome Ga.

April 19th, 1921

Mr. W. Beechman, Sales Manager, Couch Cotton Mills, Inc., Atlanta, Ga.

Dear Sir:—

Referring to our display advertising of compalls and play suits, Big Chess shirts and Suits, which is appearing in the Atlanta Constitution, I wish to advise that among the dealers I have called on many evidences of its effectiveness have been apparent and many complimentary remarks have been made, not only upon the merchandise, methods of production, marketing etc., but upon the "copy" also.

At a number of places mention was made of our ads before any reference was made by me to the matter, and at practically every store the clippings of the ads which I had secured were instantly recognized and cheerily greeted.

Many helpful things have been said about our line and I have had plenty of assurances that our plan of putting Georgia cotton over Georgia counters in the shape of the finished garments--of going "direct from the fields to the folks," as you say--it is heartily endorsed and will be backed to the limit. The enclosed orders are proof of the sincerity of these assurances. I overheard one buyer say to the head of his house. "They deserve business--their plan of building home industry commands the business--give them the order."

Please accept my personal appreciation of this sales promotion plan which makes it easier for the salesman to get the attention of the buyers--and the orders.

Respectfully,

R. G. Todd!

YOUNG COMPANY HAS A "GROWING PAIN"

The Dixie Garment company moved during the past week from the Peachtree Arcade to larger quarters in the new Curtis building at 70 South Forsyth street. This young company, which represents leading manufacturers of ladies' and misses' ready-to-wear, and which was started only last fall by L. A. Cohan and associates, has already fallen into Atlanta ways and before the end of its first year has been compelled to move in order to secure more space.

Another proof of the big possibilities when the Atlanta opportunity is grasped by actual business go-getters.

Eleven Business Maxims.

The president of the London Chamber of Commerce gives these eleven rules which he has tested through years of business experience:

1. Have a definite aim.
2. Go straight for it.
3. Master all details.
4. Always know more than you are expected to know.
5. Remember that difficulties are only made to be overcome.

6. Treat failures as stepping-stones to further effort.
7. Never put your hand out farther than you can draw it back.
8. At times be bold, always be prudent.
9. Make good use of other men's brains.

10. Listen well; answer cautiously; decide promptly.
11. Preserve, by all means in your power, "a sound mind in a sound body."

Say to yourself often "You can spend what you must but you must save what you can."

Some of us do our saving for the future; others save only in the future. Get the right preposition into your idea of saving.

To save only what is left is a plain case of the tail wagging the dog. Deposit some money this month before you give yourself a chance to make unwise purchases.

The Dollar Speaks.

In the hands of the spendthrift I am poison.
In the hands of the thrifty I am power.
In the hands of the thoughtless person I amount to nothing.
In the hands of the philanthropist I am the source of charity.
In the hands of the miser I am even worse than useless.
In the hands of a wisely directed children I am a thrift primer.
In the hands of age I am an insurance policy against want.
In the hands of the wise investor I am the open sesame to success.
In the hands of the reckless speculator I am a will-o'-the-wisp—Speculator Savings Bank Topics.

SAYS TRY YEAST IF RUN-DOWN

Now Specially Prepared in Convenient Tablet Form. Why Hearty Eaters Are Often Thin and Anaemic.

Even big eaters are under-nourished, emaciated and run-down—because the modern diet of meat, vegetables, prepared foods, etc., is almost entirely lacking in the essential element of all foods—vitamins, the one element that is needed to make us strong, active and grow more sturdy, causes signs of old age to diminish, and builds up exhausted, run-down systems. It is also well-known that yeast-vitamins are a splendid remedy for boils, skin troubles, pimples, etc. These facts have long been proven by experiments in great medical institutions, but the real problem—in what form to take yeast—has only lately been solved. For the common yeast cake, intended to be used in raising bread, is merely a makeshift. It contains only about 20 per cent yeast, the rest being starch and water. And this small percentage of yeast is less satisfactory than the liquid yeast.

Now at last the ideal type of yeast, combined with iron and other health-building ingredients, has been put on the market in convenient, ever-fresh, tablet form. These tablets, called IRONIZED YEAST, can be purchased of any druggist. They are a specially prepared tonic treatment and supply yeast vitamins in concentrated strength. They are pleasant to take and will not nauseate. You'll know before finishing the first box that it's doing you good. IRONIZED YEAST costs but little more than the common yeast cake, only 10 cents a day, and is much more effective. Get a package of IRONIZED YEAST today. BARNES IS HELD IN MURDER CASE AT STATESBORO

Statesboro, Ga., April 23.—(Special.)—Following a preliminary hearing before Judge B. D. Holland, who had associated with him Judges Henry Kennedy and W. O. Anderson, of the Sinkhole district, Perry Barnes was committed to jail without bond, to await trial in superior court on a charge of murdering his brother, Henry Barnes. The court will convene Monday. It is not known, however, exactly when Barnes' trial will begin.

The killing occurred at the home of a third brother, Conley Barnes, on the night of Friday, April 8. Perry Barnes asserts that he cut his brother to death after Henry Barnes had struck him down with a smooth-bore iron. Perry Barnes has been under the care of a physician for injuries which he states he received at the hands of Henry Barnes before he cut him to death.

George Brinson and his two sons, who were at the scene of the homicide when it was committed, were the chief witnesses for the state. It was testified that the quarrel culminated in the fatal cutting arose from a discussion of money matters.

With Appropriate Ceremonies New Bridge Will Be Opened Next Friday Big Barbecue Planned.

Another monument to the great progress of highway construction in Georgia will be presented to the public next Friday, when the new bridge across the Flint river, connecting Taylor and Upson counties near Thomaston, will be opened with appropriate ceremonies, according to an announcement Saturday night by state highway department officials.

The bridge is located on state-aid road number three, Atlanta to Americus, and has been under construction for the past several months. The new route shortens the distance between Atlanta and Americus more than twenty miles. Beginning at Marietta, the designated route passes through Atlanta, Hapeville, Jonesboro, Hampton, Griffin, Thomaston, Butler, Ellaville, and other cities and towns. From Americus, the road extends through south Georgia.

All along the route, a number of small roads connect with it, covering a large territory which is thickly populated, making it one of the most important highways in the state, according to officials. Among the towns in direct connection with the highway are Marietta, Hapeville, Decatur, McDonough, Talbotton, Robertsville, Port Valley, Oglethorpe, Buena, Preston, Knoxville, Macon, and Vienna.

"We are planning to make the celebration of the opening of the new bridge one of the greatest in this section of the state in years," said E. T. Nottingham, of Thomaston, in discussing the program for the day. "A big barbecue has been arranged and we are expecting to have present five to ten thousand people. A number of prominent citizens from Atlanta and Macon will attend, while addresses will be made by several leading men of the state."

Commenting on the opening of the bridge, Governor Hugh M. Dorsey declared that the new bridge was a proud of the progress being made in highway construction in this state.

"The program of the highway department to connect every county in the state with a chain of modern highways is one which, when completed, will give Georgia a system of good roads that will compare favorably with any in the country," he said. "The opening of the Taylor-Upson bridge is another stepping-stone toward our goal."

The state highway department will have all of its leading officials present at the opening.

MANY ATLANTA ELKS GOING TO CONVENTION

Special Train Will Be Used to Carry Members of Atlanta Lodge to Tybee.

The annual convention of the Georgia Elks' association, to be held at Tybee Island May 20 and 21, promises to be largely attended. A special train will be used by the members of Atlanta lodge No. 18, carrying several hundred members, and large delegations are expected from many other cities of the state.

Invitations have been sent out by State President John S. McClelland and State Secretary T. B. Lamar to many lodges in neighboring states, and quite a number of visitors from these states are expected. In the letter of invitation Mr. McClelland says:

"Savannah lodge, No. 185, has arranged a most enjoyable program, and we are looking forward to the largest attended, most enjoyable and successful meeting ever held by Georgia Elks."

"Prizes will be given by the association to the tallest, fastest, shortest, oldest and youngest Elks who attend the meeting. Also prizes will be given to the two couples that are the best dancers attending the meeting and the lodge for the largest attendance at the meeting will receive a handsome prize."

"Atlanta lodge, No. 78, has extended an invitation to all Elks in their vicinity to join them on their special train, which will leave Atlanta for Savannah at 9 p. m., May 19, over the Central of Georgia railroad. Reduced rates will prevail from all points in Georgia to Savannah. The round trip rate will amount to a fare and a half, with the limit on the ticket until May 24. All Elks and their families will be entitled to this rate, but it will be necessary to procure an identification in order to purchase the round trip ticket.

"Please ascertain as early as possible the number that will probably make the trip from your community and notify the secretary, and he will forward the identification certificates to the secretary of your lodge."

"The Tybee hotel will be headquarters for the association, and we have received a written guarantee as to rates that are very reasonable, and there will be ample accommodation for all. Make arrangements now for this trip, and the most that we can say to you regarding the trip is that you are hereby guaranteed that you will have the time of your life, and the only regret that you will have is that you did not go, if you fail."

Active Middle Age May Beat Youth

Medical Science proves blood rich in iron to be a secret of great strength, energy and endurance

You may be a better man at 50 than the husky stripling of 25 if you take care of yourself and KEEP YOUR BLOOD FILLED WITH IRON.

In an account of a severe mountain climbing test, a New York newspaper states that 20 per cent of those who accomplished the feat were 44 years and over.

Prize fighters, wrestlers and athletes have learned the value of plenty of plain coarse foods in their training as such a diet helps supply their blood with iron.

THERE ARE 30,000,000,000,000 RED BLOOD CORPUSCLES IN YOUR BLOOD AND EACH ONE MUST HAVE IRON.

Nature put plenty of iron in the husks of grains and the skin and peels of vegetables and fruits to enrich your blood, but modern methods of cooking throw all these things away—hence the alarming increase in recent years in anemia—iron starvation of the blood, with all its attendant ills. When you get up feeling tired in the morning; when you find yourself nervous, irritable and easily upset; when you can no longer do your day's work without being all fagged out at night; when your digestion all goes wrong, or you have pains across the back and your face looks pale and drawn, do not wait until you go all to pieces and collapse in a state of nervous prostration, or until in your weakened condition you contract some serious disease, but count your family physician and have him take a specimen of your blood and make a "blood count" of your red blood corpuscles, or test the iron-power of your blood yourself by adding plenty of spinach, carrots, baked apples or other iron-containing fruits and vegetables to your daily food and take organic iron, like Nuxated Iron, with them for a while and see how much your condition improves.

Thousands of people have surprisingly increased their strength, energy and endurance in two weeks' time by this simple experiment. But in making this test be sure that the iron you take is organic iron and not metallic iron, or mineral iron which people usually take. Organic iron is like the iron in your blood, and like the iron in spinach, lentils and apples, while metallic iron is iron just as it comes from the action of strong acids on small pieces of iron. Organic iron may be had from your druggist under the name of NUXATED IRON.

Your money will be refunded by the manufacturers if you do not obtain perfectly satisfactory results. At all druggists in tablet form only.

China "Famine Week"

Set From May 1 to 8; Campaign Planned

All activities of the workers now engaged in securing contributions for the China famine fund will be directed this week along lines preparatory to the launching of an intensive campaign during the period from May 1 to May 8, which will be observed as "China Famine Week" throughout the country.

The intensive campaign of "China Famine Week" comes as the climax of the entire movement, according to a statement from the southern committee headquarters at 502 Cambridge building. The necessity for immediate action by the southern relief workers is emphasized by the fact that the famine situation makes it imperative that a special effort be put forth during the period from May 1 to 8. According to cable advices from relief workers in the famine area, this is the critical stage of the situation. The inhabitants of the region devastated by famine have reached their last resources, and unless American aid is forthcoming, the harvest of death will be terrific during the next few weeks.

Gratifying results are being reported in every state of the south, according to the southern relief committee, but a more intensive effort must be put forth during "China Famine Week" if the 6,000,000 men, women and children who have been definitely assigned to America for relief, are to be saved from death by starvation.

YAARAB WIDOW'S FUND PAYS FIRST BENEFIT

Last fall Yaarab temple of the Mystic Shrine inaugurated the widow's fund plan that is so popular in practically all Shrine temples of the country, and the membership has grown rapidly in the months that have passed. This week the directors were called upon to pay the first benefit, the occasion being the death by accident of Walter S. Lowe, who was killed in an automobile accident. His death being accidental, the beneficiary drew the maximum sum possible, which is $1 for each member of the fund, and the secretary is now collecting an assessment, the plan being that the benefit sum is ready for payment immediately upon certification of death of a member.

FOUR MURDER CASES TO BE TRIED IN BACON

Wilcox on Trial for Henderson Killing—Mrs. Allen on Charge of Poisoning.

Alma, Ga., April 23.—(Special.)—Besides the case against Dan Wilcox, now on trial in Bacon superior court, charged with the killing of Lawton Henderson on March 20, there are three other murder cases to be called at this term of court. Floyd Dodge and D. Stanford, who were jointly indicted with Dr. J. R. Dodge for the killing of Judge C. J. Henders on July 10, last year, and Mrs. Aurelia Allen, who is charged with killing M. H. Dubberly by poisoning him with strychnine on July 13, 1920. It is charged that Dubberly, who had been engaged to marry Mrs. Allen's daughter, had broken off with her and was paying attention to another woman. This caused jealousy, the state claims. When Dubberly was taken sick, it is stated, Mrs. Allen and her daughter went to wait on the old man. Instead of giving medicine, which the doctor left for him, the state alleges Mrs. Allen gave him the strychnine.

Wilcox Charges. Dan Wilcox is alleged to have shot and killed Lawton Henderson, when he found Henderson asleep in his automobile, while the two were attending a funeral. He then, the state charges, dragged out of the car, drove to a nearby house, and informed the people there that he had killed Henderson. After exhausting the jury list, counsel for both the state and the defendant agreed that the man should be tried with ten jurors, all that could be secured. It is probable that the court will be unable to impanel a jury for the trial of Floyd Dodge and D. Stanford, as it would be difficult to secure jurors who had not served in the Dodge trial.

MISSISSIPPI BOY CURED

Booklet Sent Free to All Sufferers.

Doctors of Laurel and Hattiesburg, who walked on the son of J. T. Childers, gave him up to die. He had open sores on his face, hands and legs. His throat was inflamed and full of scabs. He suffered terrible pain in his stomach, arms and legs.

But the boy's parents heard of Baughn's Pellagra Treatment and decided to try it. Soon after the treatment was started an improvement was noticed. The pain was relieved and the sores started to heal. In a few months the patient was completely cured.

If you suffer from pellagra as this boy did, by all means investigate this treatment.

Baughn's Pellagra Treatment was discovered by a big-hearted man, living in Jasper, Ala., who is devoting his life to the relief of pellagra among his neighbors. Bad Luck and the Devil Pursued Him

"I don't think any one has had more bad luck and sickness than I have. In 1902 I had two ribs, an arm and collar bone broken in a railroad accident. Then I had pneumonia. After recovering I crossed a pasture when a bull chased me, tossed me over the fence and broke my right leg. In 1910 I had typhoid fever; since then severe stomach and liver trouble, which no medicine or doctor touched until two years ago I got a bottle of Mayr's Wonderful Kenoxy, which proved the first ray of light in thirteen years." It is a simple, harmless preparation that removes the catarrhal mucus from the intestinal tract and allays the inflammation which causes practically all stomach, liver and intestinal ailments, including appendicitis. HOUSER GOES AFTER PAIR OF MEETINGS

"Cousin" Fred Houser, secretary of the Atlanta convention bureau, has his lines out for two big conventions from which he expects definite action this week.

One is the spring convention of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers, to be held in the spring of next year, and the other is the annual convention of the American Farm Bureau federation, which is rapidly growing in membership throughout the country, and expects to have a very large convention of real national scope next year.

The convention, if held in Atlanta, will bring to this city from 2,500 to 3,000 of the leading members of this profession in the United States, and will rank with the largest conventions ever held in this city. The invitation of the Atlanta chapter of the society has been accepted subject to a report by the executive council that Atlanta hotel facilities are adequate to accommodate the convention. The members of the council were in Atlanta last week to investigate this point, and expressed themselves as being perfectly satisfied. There is to be a meeting of the full council in Mobile this week to take final action on the Atlanta invitation and other matters.

An interesting and important convention, from the standpoint of the subject to be discussed, will be held here next week, when the state and federal employees engaged in the eradication of tuberculosis among cattle and swine in eleven southern states will meet for a conference of three days.

Former Soldiers Confess Forging Name of Comrade

Forging and cashing government checks intended for an ex-soldier suffering from active tuberculosis in both lungs, the result of military service, two former soldiers are held in the Fulton Tower under bond of $3,000 each. They confessed to the forgeries, and pleaded guilty when arraigned.

The prisoners are Loy W. Frost, of Chaberton, and James Henry Williams, of Dalton, both ex-service men. They were arrested Friday by Knoxville, Tenn., by secret service operatives. In their confessions, they stated that in February, 1920, in Athens, they had obtained a check for $786.67, for war risk compensation, made payable to Ira Lee Bracewell, also a former soldier, and Frost confessed that he forged and cashed another check for $11, payable to Bracewell. Frost forged Bracewell's name to the large check, and Williams forged the signature of R. L. McWhorter, co-ordinator of the University of Georgia, as an endorsement, after which the Commercial Bank of Athens cashed the check.

W. V. Crowley Made Director of Life Insurance Company

W. V. Crowley, cashier of the Citizens and Southern bank and one of the best known young men in the Atlanta banking field, has been elected a director of the Volunteer State Life Insurance company, of Chattanooga, Tenn.

The announcement of his election was made last week by Z. C. Patton, of Chattanooga, president of the company, through J. L. McMillan, of Atlanta, state manager for Georgia.

Mr. Crowley's election to the board of directors comes as a deserved recognition of his rapid rise in the business world, and his present high standing among Atlanta bankers. Coming to Atlanta from Stewart county, Ga., about ten years ago, he was first with the American National bank, and successively manager of the savings department of the Third National bank, and assistant cashier of the Third National bank until his election as cashier of the Citizens and Southern, when the Third National was merged into that institution.

When Jack Frost was the only Ice Corporation

Going back over Time's path only a short space, we come to a day when ice, in the South, was a shipped-in commodity of very irregular supply. Jack Frost was the only ice maker and he operated on a very fickle schedule and woe to sweltering humanity if he took a notion to spend a Winter away from his job. Nowadays we take Jack Frost to school and show him how we make ice under a grilling sun.

The ice manufacturing industry finds its greatest single organization of developed strength in a southern company employing three to five thousand operatives, distributed among its thirty-four huge plants located in twenty-one southern cities.

This company makes a daily aggregate of thirty-five hundred tons of ice and has a storage capacity of one hundred and twenty thousand tons, capable of meeting emergency demands for huge quantities at instant notice. Its daily residence and store delivery service requires eight hundred wagons and motor trucks. The world's largest manufacturer of ice—the Atlantic Ice & Coal Corporation.

In 1920 this company paid out for bare delivery-to-consumer service over a million dollars, never relaxing its regardful attention to humanity's needs—delivering a five-cent piece of ice to the poor man's door or filling an order for a solid train load with equal promptness and carefulness. And in order that ice may be unfailingly supplied for the warm months the entire mechanical service is maintained throughout the year, resulting in a non-profitable period of about half of each year.

The tremendous train loads of delicious fruits going north from Florida or coming east from California—the peaches that carry the glory of Georgia to the tables of delighted northern families—the luscious, dew-kissed strawberries of Tennessee and Alabama—the early vegetables and the wonderful melons that reflect nature in her most lavish moods—these are all transported and reach their distant destination with freshness, flavor and attractiveness unimpaired, only because of the immense ice manufacturing plants maintained throughout the Southeast by the Atlantic Ice & Coal Corporation.

Despite the immense industrial strength of this company it is inspiring to know that it is not a capitalistic fortress commanded by a few, but that its majority stock is held mostly by salaried people and in small blocks. The directors and managers of the company feel that it is their high privilege to serve as trustees for the eleven hundred stockholders, to so guide this beneficent industry that it shall fulfill a mission of great usefulness.

Stockholders and public alike, are cordially invited to call at our plants and learn how public health is safeguarded at every step in our process of making pure ice. Advantage is now being freely taken of this invitation by many of our leading educational institutions. Your visit will be made both interesting and profitable to you and we shall take a genuine pleasure in meeting you personally and having you leave our plants with a better understanding of how sincerely we try to serve you, whether you use much or little ice.

Astonishing Things the Imagination Will Do

Scientists Are Deeply Interested in the Case of Miss Kathleen Foley, Who Only Dreamed She Had Been Poisoned and Then Expired Manifesting Symptoms of Poisoning.

EMINENT psychologists and other scientists who are making a special study of psycho-analysis and the curious influences varying emotions have on different minds, have evinced tremendous interest in the extraordinary case of Miss Kathleen Foley, who lived at 1278 Lane street, Topeka, Kansas.

Newspaper readers may recall that on the night of Friday, Feb. 18, Miss Foley awoke very suddenly from a realistic dream and ran into her mother's bedroom with her hand pressed to her throat.

"Mother!" she screamed. "I have just been poisoned!"

A few minutes later, after going into acute spasmodic convulsions such as a poisonous drug would produce, the girl died.

But the autopsy, performed by experienced and skillful physicians, revealed the startling and almost inexplicable situation that Miss Foley had not a trace of poison in her system. And the same inquest absolutely determined that the girl died of organic convulsions such as would be caused by the reaction of poison on a human system.

This, in a paragraph, sums up the case of Miss Foley, who, according to profound students of psychology and psycho-analysis, was killed by her own imagination. In other words, it is asserted that so realistic was a dream the girl had of being poisoned to death that her mind, under the working of the subconscious influences, actually caused her vital organs to experience the very spasms that a drug would have produced. Unable to throw off the belief that she had had poison thrust down her throat, her physical self completely under the control of her disordered and afflicted mind, death occurred to her. Plainly thought-suggestion, say those who studied the case.

"Kathleen Foley met her death as a result of involuntary psychic suggestion, a dream accident.

"The fact is bizarre only because of the infrequency of its incident, the unfamiliarity of the general public with psychic fact and in the field of psychic research and the very completeness and detail of that corollary of incident which so specifically and definitely indicates the true cause of her death.

"In the instance of Kathleen Foley we have a woman of highly nervous temperament, easily subject to psychic suggestion and addicted to extraordinarily vivid dreams. Previously she had dreamed of an assault, also in her home, a dream so vivid and so impressive that its impression upon her was of 'fact incident' rather than of 'dream incident.' And so, on the night when she staggered, gasping and choking, into her mother's room and insisted that she had been assaulted and poisoned, there can be little doubt but that she had just awakened from a dream of such incident, a dream so vivid, so realistic that it left its impress upon her subconsciousness as an incident of actual fact, an impress so vital, so conclusive that the pathological reaction to the psychic suggestion was the precise symptomatic reaction to the poison her subconscious intelligence insisted had been forced upon her. Her subsequent death was the logical conclusion of the psychic suggestion even as it was of the pathological condition created by psychic suggestion."

Remarkable as the case seems, there have been instances, time without number, where the imagination of the subconscious mind has produced just such strange effects. At the root of it all is pan-psychic hylozoism, one of the bedrocks on which the Christian Science belief is said to have been founded. Mind is superior to matter and absolutely controls it, according to this theory, which is undeniably and irrefutably proved in such cases as that of Miss Foley. Mary Baker Eddy taught that it is possible for the human mind at all times to control the body, just as Miss Foley's mind momentarily and so unhappily controlled her body under subconscious impulse.

Some years ago, in order to prove the theory that the mind can be forced to exert such power over its fleshy envelope, scientists experimented with a prisoner condemned to death on the gallows. He was told that instead of being hanged by the neck until dead, he was to be put to death by bleeding. His informants assured him that it would be quite painless and that the end would come as peacefully as sleep.

His eyes were bandaged, he was divested of his clothing, and, covered with a sheet, he was placed on an operating table. Further to heighten his imagination armed guards walked up and down the room, occasionally allowing their rifle butts to touch the floor with a hollow sound. Then his arm was pricked and as the needle was withdrawn from the puncture, a tiny stream of warm water, heated to blood temperature, was released and permitted to run across his left wrist where the artery supposedly had been opened. Running over his arm the stream of warm water fell on the table and then trickled down into a basin so that, in the sepulchral quietness of the room, the drip, drip, drip was terribly audible to the man who thought he heard the sound of his life's fluid escaping.

As the moments passed the prisoner's heart showed a change in action. Within ten minutes there was a greater change. As the drip-drip-drip continued he became more agitated and his heart action more irregular. Eventually, after an hour, he died. And when an autopsy was made it was discovered that his blood had practically changed to water. When the announcement was made at the time the incredulous pooh-poohed. But the facts had been proved to the satisfaction of the scientists.

Mr. Page, in explaining the Foley case, gave a similar episode in the following words:

"Death through involuntary psychic suggestion is not without precedent. One of the commonest known instances occurred but a few years ago during the initiation of a man into a fraternal organization. In the course of the ceremonies the novice was charged with some mythical offence and sentenced to death by decapitation. In gressome and impressive procedure, escorted by black-robed figures, he was brought into the execution room, beheld the executioner, red-robed and bearing the sanguinary axe, was forced to kneel with his head on the block and then, at a spoken word the executioner raised his axe and brought it down almost to the neck of the victim, while at the same time another individual slapped a cold, wet towel down on his neck. In this instance the suggestion was too much for the victim, who expired with his head on the block."

"Again to the student in the fields of psychic research, it is recognized that there is no known instance wherein an individual who dreams of falling terrific distances ever reaches the end of the dream, the conclusion of the fall where, logically, he would crash at its end. The argument advanced presumes that where the dreamer dreams the conclusion of his fall the shock kills him. While this is a negative argument, the fact remains that there is no known instance recorded of anyone reaching the end of a dream fall."

The effect of mind over matter is often seen in the so-called "birth mark" which mothers almost universally proclaim is caused by pre-natal influence. Thousands of persons can exhibit these remarkable marks. Most can't explain how they got them. But there seems to be a logical explanation to a birth mark the writer has on his left arm, midway between elbow and shoulder. It is a perfect pattern of a leaf. It "blooms" in the spring and "dies" in the fall. He was born Feb. 26, 1868. Did the fall of a leaf in the preceding autumn so startle his mother that the natural phenomenon resulted, or was she so impressed with the beauty of a new leaf the preceding spring that she handed to him this strange heritage?

Scientists have proved that everything, the human body included, is nothing but a mass of vibrating particles as tiny, perhaps tinier, than the electron. With the cardiograph science has proved that a thought actually has power of imparting electrical energy. The beat of a heart registers about 1-1000 of a volt. This may be increased by an excitation of the heart caused by a thought.

Thomas A. Edison recently advanced the theory that perhaps the human body is composed of millions of living beings, each with an individuality subject only to the mind of the body controlling them. Does this explain why some men, refusing to admit they are old, remain young? Does it offer an explanation why everyone, in fact, dies? Does it indicate that "growing old" may be psychological, after all, a process that takes place among these atomic bodies because the controlling mind, knowing the span of human life, subconsciously directs them to grow old when a certain age has been passed?

There is much food for thought in the question.

WHAT SCIENTISTS SAY ABOUT OUR IMAGINATIONS

"It is strange to notice that men of the most sober minds in regard to all other matters usually approach the study of psychical phenomena with an obvious prejudice and foregone conclusion which tends to falsify their judgment."—Dr. Paul Joire, eminent French psychologist.

"A dream is a series of images, which are apparently contradictory and nonsensical, but arise in reality from psychologic material which yields a clear meaning."—Dr. C. G. Yang, University of Zurich.

"A sick person may be cured by suggestion."—Bliss and vesication have been procured by suggestion.

"We ought only to regard as scientifically impossible that which is absurd, that is to say, contrary to geometrical truths, the only ones which are immutable. Even opposition to physical law should not suffice to make us deny a fact. Physical laws may be momentarily suspended or have their effect destroyed by other laws; whether we know those other laws or whether we do not."—Dr. Paul Joire.

"Therefore, theory, which gives to facts their value and significance, is often very useful, even if it is partially false, for it throws light on phenomena which no one observed, it forces an examination, from many angles, of facts which no one had hitherto studied, and it gives the impulse for more extended and more productive researches."—Guglielmo Ferrero, famous Italian scientist, psychologist and author.

By Joseph H. Appelgate

JAMES ROBERT VAN D'LOYE! The name thrilled her. It was something formidable, something from which to conjure a spirit. It transformed the bit of pasteboard into a writing of great power and—possibility. Lillian Geraldine Leitch, Virginia beauty visiting San Francisco for the first time, permitted, in fact, could not prevent, her heart's rising in her pretty throat.

Also, the manner in which he had thus made known his identity was so unique that it almost took her breath away and appealed most strongly to her generously romantic nature. And to have happened in a tea room added much to the incident. She had entered the place without a thought of a man or things masculine. To be sure, the very absence of thought about the so-called stronger sex may have had much to do with the impulse that caused her to select the peculiarly feminine place for her luncheon.

She hadn't more than seated herself and picked up her serviette when she became conscious of an interested stare. Expecting to see a girl friend, she looked up. She was quite astonished to find herself looking at a man who was fixing on her an X-ray look. She flushed and lowered her eyes.

A Colorful Flirtation

For a while she simulated disinterestedness and unconcern. But, as a matter of fact, she was mightily interested and much concerned. For, the truth was, she never had seen a man quite so handsome. So, although she knew it wasn't quite proper, quite the thing to do, she decided to give him just the least bit, a very wee bit, of flirtatious encouragement.

She felt his glance still on her. So she looked up again, a look as swift, as fugacious as the passing of a swallow. And she allowed the faintest smile to play about the corner of her pretty mouth. She felt quite satisfied, triumphant, if you will, when he acknowledged it with an almost imperceptible widening of the eyelids.

The tables he and she sat at, set for two, were in line and against a wall of the room. He faced her. She was sitting with her back to the rear wall, practically in the corner of the room. Presently a waitress went to her table. After she had left and was passing by him, so that she observed from other diners the corner table at which Miss Lillian was eating, something flickered through the air and dropped into Miss Lillian's lap. She picked it up, slyly. It was his crumpled calling card, handsomely engraved. They met. But not that day. A few days later, while dining in the same tea room, which, after the flirtation, seemed to hold an attraction for her, Miss Lillian found there a girl who had become acquainted with Mr. Van D'Loyle and who formally introduced them.

"It seems to me," said he, in a rich and well modulated voice, as he held her hand in a lingering clasp from which she wasn't particularly anxious to withdraw, "that I have seen you before, somewhere, Miss Leitch."

"Quite possibly you did," she retorted, with equal composure.

The introduction was an excuse for an invitation to the theatre, and during the evening they passed together the two became quite chummy. Similar parties followed swiftly, and then, one evening, across the napery of an after-theatre supper, he said to her:

"I have something very important to say to you tonight. But before I say it I think you are entitled to know a bit about my people. My father is James Robert Van D'Loyle, after whom I was called. I rarely use the junior, going under Dad's full name. No doubt you have heard of him? He belongs to the exclusive Knickerbocker Club of New York City. Yes, of course, you know him. Not boastfully, mind you, but of necessity, out of a sense of fairness, in view of what I am about to say to you, I tell you now that he is a millionaire. Yes, I was born with the golden spoon in my mouth." He smiled, showing his beautiful teeth. Then he continued: "I'm a sort of wanderer, nomadic spirit, you know. I only happened into Frisco in search of fun and frolic. Dad became so exercised over my wanderlust that he has just slashed my income down to $100 a week."

Building Air Castles

"Now that is just where you come in, Miss Leitch—Lillian." He reached across the table, one of those pedestalled boards set in a stall quite apart and secluded from the rest of the eating place, and took her hands in his. "I want you to be my wife. I love you, love you dearly. I fell in love with you when I first saw you in the tea room. That's why I so rudely stared at you. It was rude, and yet I just had to do it. If you say the word we will get married, and as soon as Dad's anger cools a bit we'll return to New York City and live in the Van D'Loyle Fifth Avenue home. Until then I think we'll be able to get along on this paltry allowance of $100 a week, don't you?"

Her "yes" not only answered that question, but the more important one, and so that epoch in their lives had been reached. And he sealed it with a kiss by leaning right across the table and placing his eager lips on her willing ones.

For her part the rest of the evening was just a jumble of hazy happenings. She figured she had played her part well. She had not been backward in telling him of her father's plantation in Virginia and of the style with which she was entertained at her chum's home in Memphis, Tenn., whence she had come to Frisco. She believed she had persuaded him that she was wealthy, quite wealthy, although not in the same financial class as a Van D'Loyle. As for his part—her story of that rich Virginia plantation and her friend's social status and—well, that's getting ahead of the story!

In a fortnight they were married and went to live in a costly furnished apartment. James Robert Van D'Loyle began, immediately, to play the part of a lavish and model husband. He announced to his bride a week after the wedding that he had secured a position. "I want to have some sort of employment just to feel independent," he explained. "Anyway, it will help supplement my allowance from Dad."

The first morning he went to work he started from the apartment with "Rags," his pet poodle. She called him back and reminded him that his dog was at his heels. "Perfectly proper," he laughed. "I think so much of him that I always take him with me when I go anywhere."

So, every day, when he went away to business, "Rags," at his heels, climbed into the limousine and barked a joyous farewell as his master waved adieu to his bride, and went away with him.

The young couple got along handsomely. He did not permit her to want for anything. Once he did suggest it might be fine to take a trip to see her parents on the old Virginia plantation. But when she did not enthuse over it he passed it by. If he was eager she did not detect it in his looks.

He was a good provider. Everything she wanted she got for the asking. In addition, he fairly showered her with flowers and sweet dainties. He seemed never to tire of pleasing her. His money seemed inexhaustible. She used to wonder what his business was. He never told her. When she questioned him he would laugh her off or say, "If you knew it would be a surprise."

One day, a month or so after their wedding, she went on a shopping tour in the "curbstons the section and then, dismissing the cab, went afoot in search of bargains.

All at once, as she rounded a corner in the heart of the busy section, a perfect babel of noise and confusion, a dog jumped against her skirt and, with tail wagging furiously, entreated attention. With a start she recognized "Rags." Instinctively she looked for her husband, but did not see him.

"Why, Rags!" she exclaimed, stooping and patting the head of the intelligent little dog. "What on earth are you doing here?"

Then her eyes followed the chain attached to the animal's collar until it came to the hand that held it. The hand belonged to a very ragged individual on whose breast was a placard reading:

I AM DEAF, DUMB AND BLIND

She also noticed that the man—a beggar—had quite a number of dimes, quarters and even some half-dollars in a little tin cup he held. He held it now toward her, appealingly, looking at her through great blue goggles. A huge white beard flowed to the top of the placard.

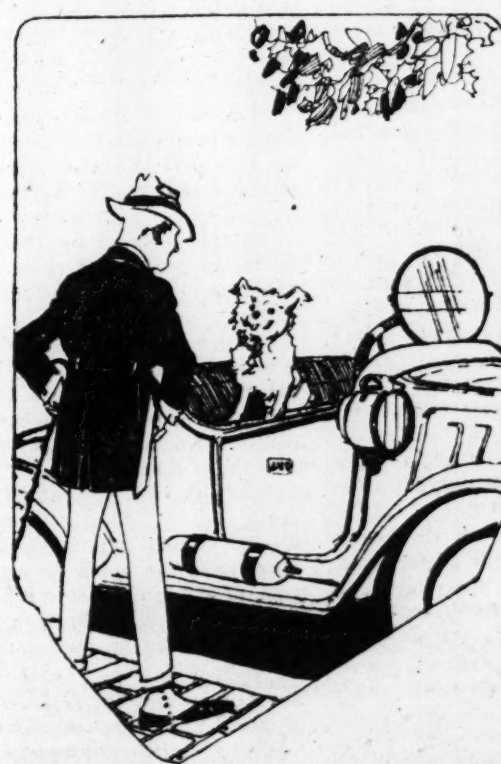

"Rags" continued to prance around her and to paw her skirt. She was beginning to wonder how this beggar came into possession of her husband's pet, when an idea struck her simultaneously with what she thought was a familiar look about the ears of the beggar. She stared and stared, scrutinizing the beggar closely. Then, in a moment's decision, on a dreadful chance, she seized the beggar's whiskers and gave them a hearty yank.

Off came the whiskers and off came the goggles and there, revealed before her eyes, was—"Horrors! My own husband!" she gasped, while the little dog, who used to lead his "blind" master from the office where he changed his gentleman's apparel to the mendicant's garb, to the street corner where he begged the rich offerings of the sympathetic San Franciscans, barked in great glee.

Faint? She did not. She was too indignant to do that. She was too disgusted and horrified to learn that she had married a beggar to permit her emotions to overpower her. The feeling that she possessed was one of unutterable anger. She considered that she had been so grossly deceived that nothing could ever placate her outraged feelings.

"You beast, you deceiver, you hypocrite, you beggar!" she said, while a throng gathered about and mocked the fake panhandler. "A millionaire's son, hey! Well, I am through with you forever!"

She turned and walked away, engaging another taxi which whisked her home, where she showed such celerity in packing up her belongings that she succeeded in getting away before he had time to change his costume and return. She lost no time in finding a hotel room, from which she began proceedings asking for an annulment of marriage. In the course of time, as if piling Pelion on Ossa, she learned his real name—J. Leslie Sheldon. And now she often compares the two, her friends say, wondering if the real one does not sound quite as pretty as the fictitious one. After all, what's in a name?

market" of Frisco. She was actuated more by a spirit of curiosity than economy. She wanted to see if the bargains of the pushcart peddlers were as gossip said they were. So she taxied to

Mrs. Florence H. Leeds, Former Chorus Girl, Named by Mrs. James A. Stillman in Answer to Her Husband's Charges.

PERSISTENT usage has made of "Blood Will Tell" a veteran phrase of the English language. Like so many of its shopworn fellows, however, it has never been more than half true in the sense it was meant. From the lips of a favored class it was taken to mean that the peculiar virtues of the father were handed over intact to his offspring. But as each generation has provided a large number of glaring exceptions, the matter continues in controversy.

Now comes a man of science, Dr. Albert Abrams, the San Francisco diagnostician, with the same phrase on his lips. "Blood WILL tell," he says, slightly shifting the emphasis and he offers a machine to prove his contention. Dr. Abrams is no spokesman of the social Brahmins; he speaks as a scientist. And as a scientist he has demonstrated to the satisfaction of a California Superior Court that deep down in those minute eddies of the human blood, Nature has placed the hallmark of every man's heredity. In his blood cells is bound up the unmistakable record of his fatherhood. John Smith's son, by the inescapable similarity of registered blood vibrations, is proved to be the son of John Smith and none other.

Through an invention known as the "oscillophone" Dr. Abrams saved the birthright of little Virginia Vittori of San Francisco, the disclaimed and unlabeled daughter of Paul Vittori. These same resources were offered to banker James A. Stillman and his wife, the former Fifi Potter, on behalf of that pathetic scapegoat of their mutual fury, Baby Guy Stillman.

The millionaire charged that the child was not his, but the son of Fred Beauvais, an Indian guide. Mrs. Stillman denied the charge.

Why this offer was not immediately accepted has never become known. In all that welter of charge and counter-charge that followed the projection of the Stillman case into the courts, the one person to whom no blame could possibly attach, was apparently unrepresented by counsel so far as his real interests were concerned. That Guy Stillman's right to know his own father was a right superior to that of any other litigant, never seemed to be admitted.

Despite the apparent skepticism of the Stillmans and their representatives, however, both the legal and the medical authorities who witnessed the submission of Dr. Abrams' testimony in the Vittori case, have agreed that its effect will be revolutionary, and Judge Thomas F. Graham, the judge of the court which decided the case, says it was one of the biggest things established by medical science in years.

If they are correct, the submission of all cases such as that of Guy Stillman, to the Abrams paternity test will become routine; these methods will grow to be commonplace accessories of the courts. A theme used impartially by life and art is lifted from the realm of the purely speculative. "Blood will tell" becomes an axiomatic truth of science along with the propositions of Euclid.

Life and art, in fact, have vied with each other in building problems around the fact of obscured paternity, since the earliest recorded history of man.

King Solomon had much the same problem that came before the San Francisco judge who decided the Vittori case. Solomon, however, had no Dr. Abrams among his minions so he was forced to fall back on his native understanding of human nature. When the two women, both claiming the babe, appeared before him, the King offered to slice the babe in two and give each a half. One mother agreed; the other protested in horror. The latter got the child.

The ages have ratified the wisdom of Solomon in this decision, but as a Georgia student of hereditary tendencies recently pointed out, he may have made a mistake at that.

"Unquestionably he gave the child to the woman best fitted to rear it," says this scientist, "but she may not have been the child's mother." Sentiment applauds the wise old monarch, but Science is in its habitual attitude of doubt. There was no blood test; no Abrams oscillophone demonstration; so the question will probably remain in doubt until the end of time.

Turning to the pages of fictional letters one finds it universally accepted that a child's paternity is an unprovable fact. Goethe said we must accept our children on faith. This is made the premise of a play by August Strindberg, the Swedish dramatist, called "The Father." By deliberately planting a doubt as to the legitimacy of his own child, in the mind of her husband, the heroine of this play succeeds in driving him crazy. A physician, one of the minor characters, is made to declare that science has no way of authenticating the claims of fatherhood.

A variation of this theme is found in "Useless Beauty," a short story by the French master, Guy de Maupassant. Here the Comtesse Mascaret, through motives of revenge, tells her husband that one of her seven children is not his, but she refuses to say which one. Mascaret, who had been devoted to all his children, now finds himself, because of this doubt, unable to love any of them. The science of his day knew no blood test to apply, so Mascaret found his whole life embittered.

In one of Thomas Hardy's Wessex Tales, "The Imaginative Woman," a father casts off his infant son after discovering a supposed infidelity of his dead wife which took place in the year that the child was born. The mixing of babies in the cradle has served the story writer's purpose an unaccountable number of times. Witness "Pudd'nhead Wilson," "Little Alabama," etc., etc. No doubt it was one of the original seven plots.

The whole implication of science and art, in fact, was that while the blood corpuscles of a man would differ from that of a dog or of any other species, the blood of two men would be alike. There could be healthy blood and unhealthy blood, but the properties thereof would be the same.

During the war, however, a group of army surgeons came upon certain facts about the blood of a human being hitherto unknown and which seem now to have been a forecast of the discovery that Dr. Abrams was ultimately to make.

The transfusion of blood from the veins of any one man to those of another was considered feasible and safe. The only condition was the person losing the blood should be healthy enough to stand the loss. True, deaths resulted from time to time, following transfusion, but they were attributed to outside causes.

Surgeons in charge of the analytical laboratory of the army hospital at Fort McPherson, Ga., discovered that certain bloods wouldn't mix; they were hostile elements, and the war that followed an attempt to unite them in the same channel, resulted fatally to the patient concerned. The result was that all transfusions after that were made between persons whose blood was found to have similar qualitative properties.

Since that time there have been no deaths in the army directly traceable to blood exchange.

Dr. Abrams, no doubt, would have said that the rhythm or rate of vibration should be approximately the same before transfusion was attempted. In any event, the point of difference between the blood of two persons, according to his discovery, lies in their vibration rather than in their chemical content.

It was the Vittori case that lifted Dr. Abrams to nationwide prominence, but among scientific people he has been known as a sound and gifted pathologist for many years. A graduate of the University of Heidelberg, a fellow of the Royal Medical Society and for 12 years professor of Pathology at Stanford University, his researches were responsible for the law of electronic reactions which is being used now by pathologists all over the world.

Under Dr. Abrams' instructions, Samuel O. Hoffman perfected during the war an invention called the thermophile with which it was possible to detect invisible objects. Mr. Hoffman used these same principles and perfected under Dr. Abrams' guidance another instrument known as the "oscillophone." It is this device which Dr. Abrams uses in determining the rate of vibration of a drop of blood.

Called into the Vittori case in February of the present year, Dr. Abrams was asked to adduce proofs which would definitely fix the parentage of little Virginia Vittori, the three-months-old daughter of Rose Vittori, with regard to the man whose name she bore. Rose Vittori was suing her husband, Paul Vittori, a San Francisco motorman, for the support of the child, but Mr. Vittori contested. He said: "The child is not mine."

The presumption of the law was nullified by certain circumstantial facts and the burden of proof was shifted to the mother. Science had shown that mere outward resemblance didn't necessarily prove the fact of fatherhood and science so far as was known, had failed to develop any other test more definite and satisfying. It was at this juncture that the attorneys for Mrs. Vittori approached Dr. Abrams.

A drop of blood from the veins of the father and a drop of blood from the veins of the 3-months-old child were obtained. They were submitted to the action of the oscillophone. After completing the test Dr. Abrams announced that Paul Vittori was without question the father of the girl. Superior Court Judge Graham accepted the proofs presented and ordered Paul Vittori to pay his wife $25 a month for the support of the child.

This action constituted a precedent which lawyers believed would revolutionize legal practices involving missing heirs, disputed wills and all cases into which the question of personal identity might enter. It was only natural, therefore, that pressure should be brought to bear upon Dr. Abrams for further information regarding his discovery.

He then made known for the first time the theory back of the oscillophone. It was an application of the principle in physics that while like vibrations repel, unlike vibrations attract. Man, he said, was merely an electric machine in which the smallest determinable unit was not a cell but an electron.

The test, as in the Vittori case, is performed as follows: The "radio-active energy" of the blood is tested and confined to a capsule. This capsule is kept in motion on a specially contrived pendulum. Like a tuning fork, this pendulum is sensitive only to influences that have the same rate of vibration. Into close proximity with the capsule is then brought a drop of blood from another person. If the two rates of vibration are identical—as was the case with the blood of Virginia Vittori and Paul Vittori—the vibrations of the capsule are halted. The rate of vibration of the blood of a known father and child having been determined similarly by previous experiment, the relationship is proved when the oscillophone shows an affinity between the two drops.

By the same method, according to Dr. Abrams, the sex, race and state of health of an individual can be determined, his emotions and sex-impulses can be measured and the approximate time of his death can be fixed many years in advance. The scientist referred to a number of experiments already made. A man in St. Louis was told that he was Dutch, Italian and Swedish on his mother's side and Irish and English on his father's—all from a drop of blood on a postcard. And the diagnosis proved correct.

When Dr. Abrams' attention was called to the Stillman suit, he made the remark as previously quoted, that a simple set of blood tests would settle the question of Baby Guy Stillman's paternity just as it did in the Vittori case.

The pivotal point in this case, as in that of Vittori's was the same question of denied parenthood. But when life decided to mimic art in this instance, it added a dramatic flourish that would have done considerable credit to the imaginative gifts of even de Maupassant. Not only were the principals in the suit and counter-suit drawn from the upper reaches of America's moneyed plutocracy, but a final touch of drama was injected in the person of a man from another country and another race. The blood that flowed in the veins of Baby Guy Stillman was not his, declared James E. Stillman, president of the National City Bank of New York, but the blood of Fred Beauvais, an Indian guide.

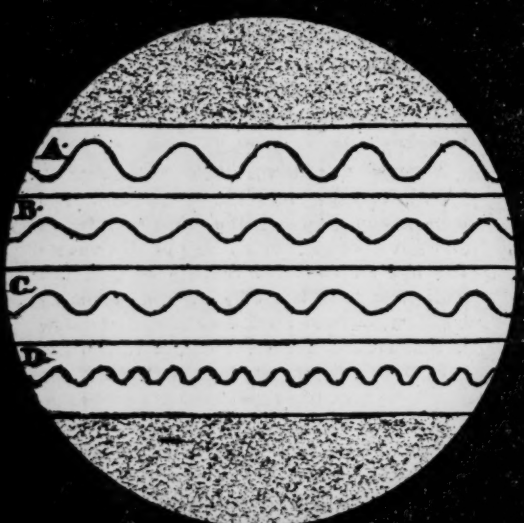

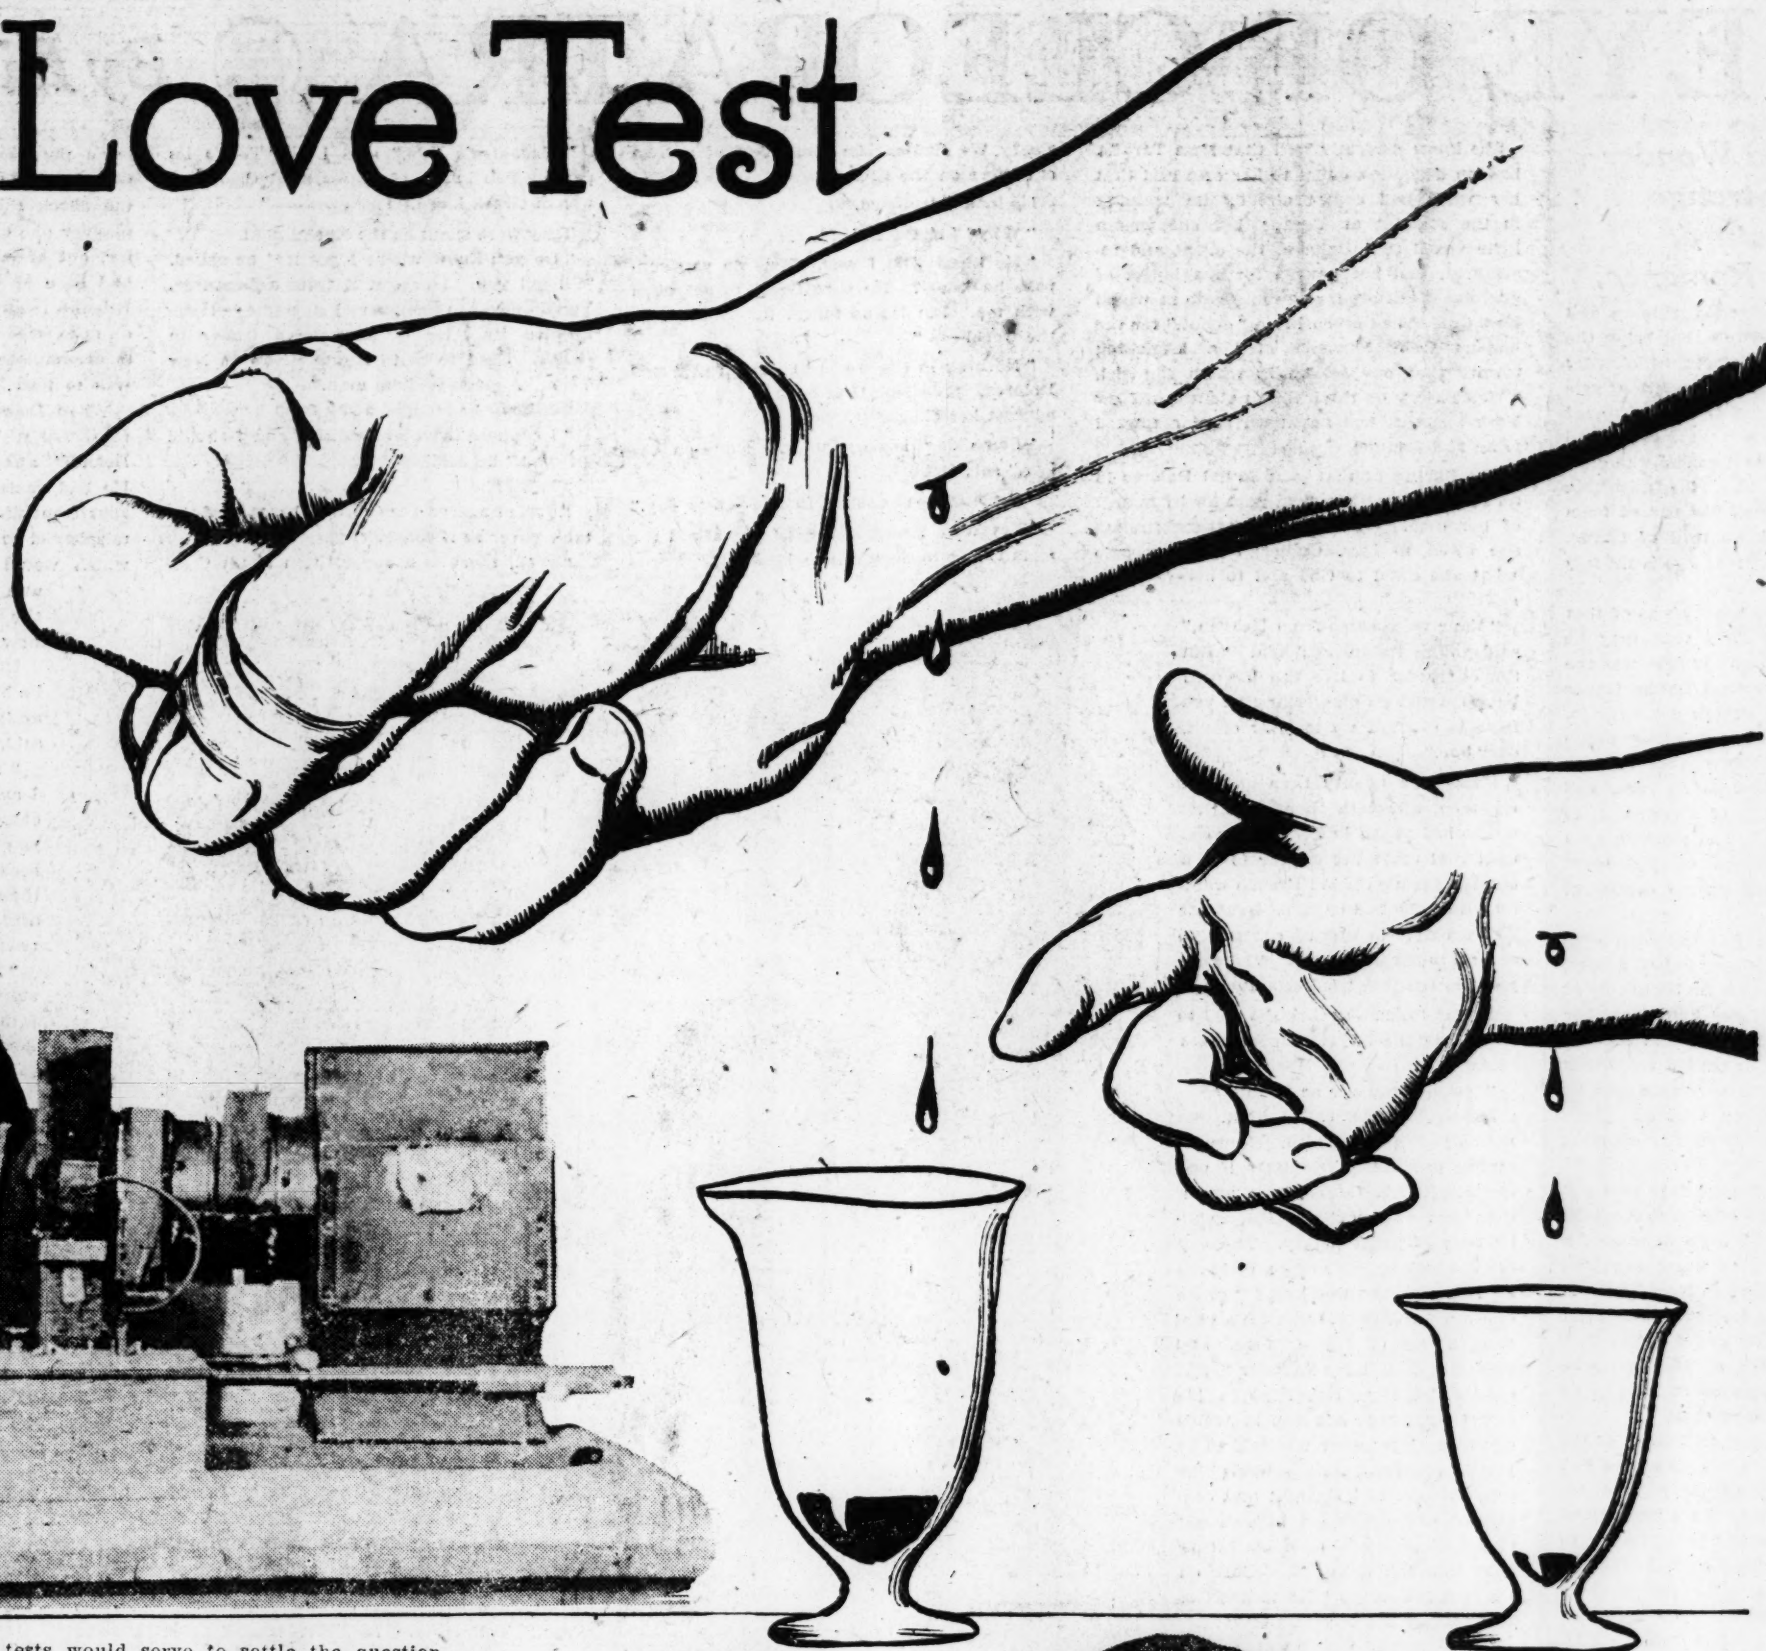

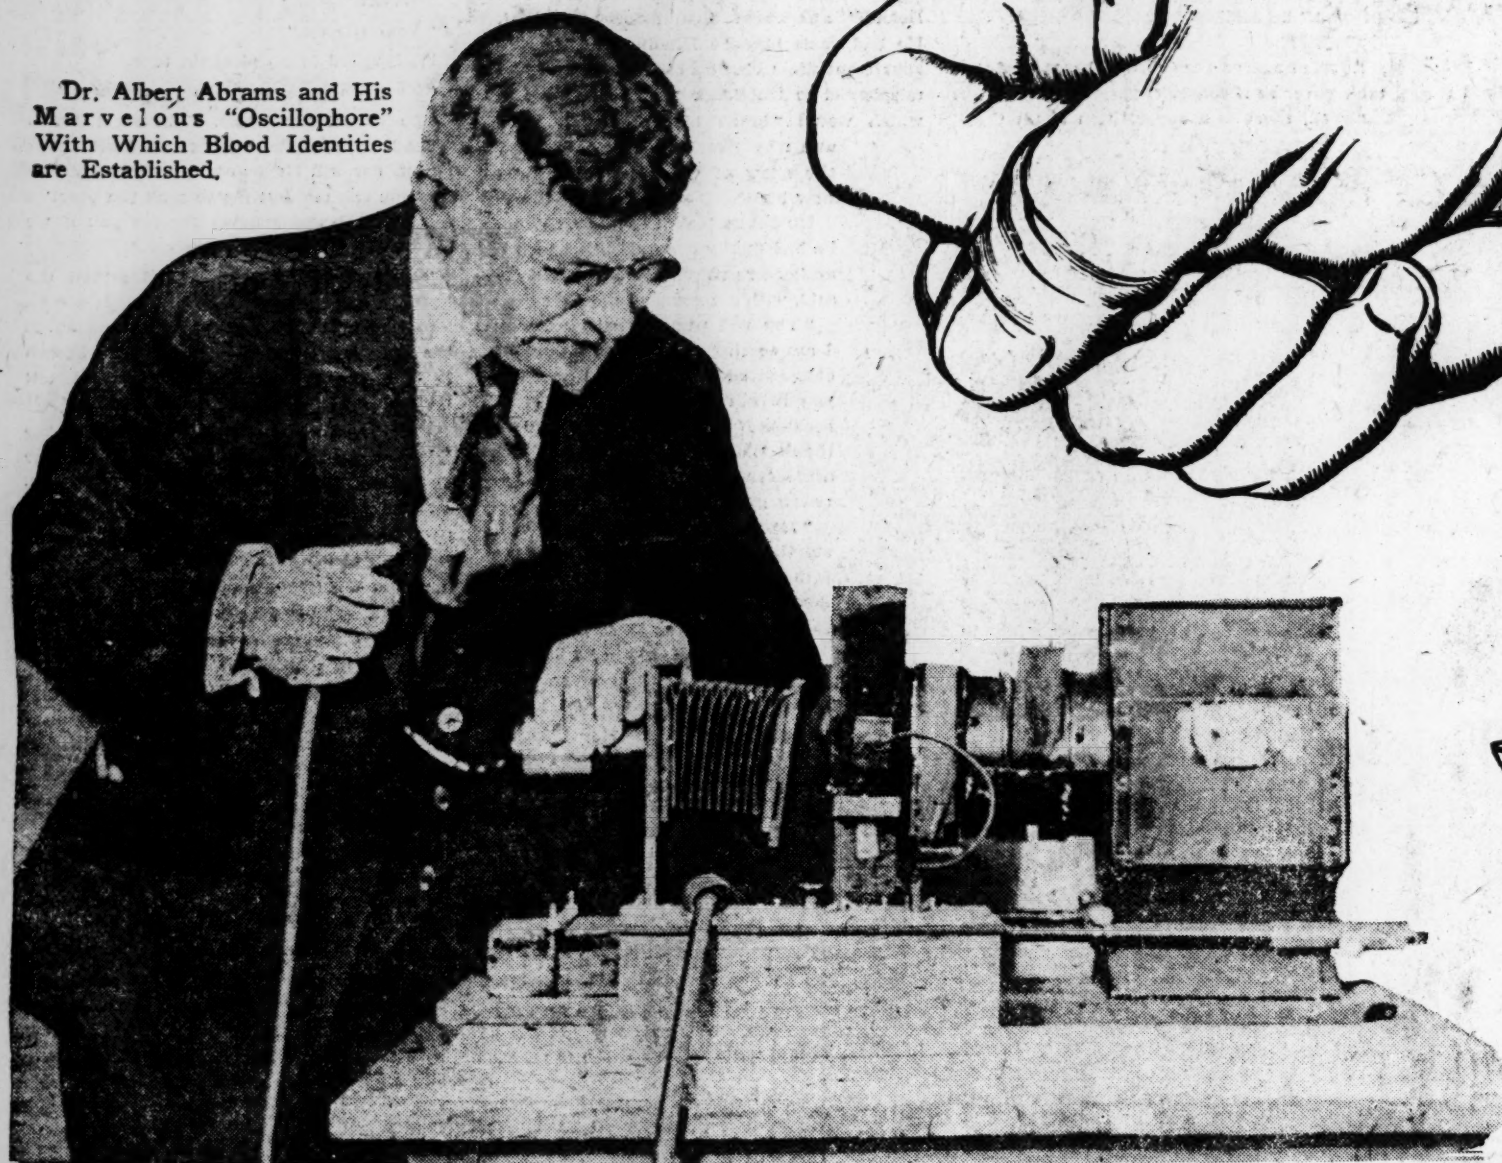

Incorporated in the suit for divorce which the banker filed against his wife in a Westchester county court was a detailed charge of infidelity alleged to have been committed with this Canadian Indian.

The Stillmans, it seems, owned a lodge in Canada where they frequently went on hunting trips and vacations. It was while Mrs. Stillman was living at this place called "Stillness," 60 miles up from Three Rivers, Canada, that she met Beauvais, then in the employ of her husband.

In reciting the alleged tale of the relationship between this copper-colored wooer and his wife, Banker Stillman invoked not only circumstantial evidence, but the sworn testimony of various woodsmen and servants. These people were brought to New York and their testimony taken. They spoke of peeping through keyholes, of casting furtive glances down darkened hallways and of climbing ladders to peer over transoms.

they swore they saw, it could make the matter of a divorce a mere question of legal routine, according to Guy Nicoll and Cornelius J. counsel for Mr. Stillman.

Stillman's battle, they concluded, be purely defensive and unsuccessful. Mrs. Stillman filed a counter-suit.

girl began to call herself Mrs. Leeds, according to user, when Banker Stillman took her up and began to ride her with such trifles as limousines, yachts and pendants. And as she was "Mrs. Leeds," the in and about their apartment, in the New York either through ignorance or tact, began to refer to Stillman as "Mr. Leeds."

A number of people had Mr. Leeds both in New York and in Miami, where Leeds maintained an expensive winter home. It re-ferred Mrs. Stillman to declare that "Mr. Leeds" and Stillman were one and the same.

Dr. Abrams was approached regarding the contested of Guy Stillman he said:

"Either of two tests would serve to settle the question at issue in the Stillman case concerning the parentage of Baby Guy. A test of the blood of James A. Stillman and that of the boy would establish whether they are father and son. Similarly a test of the blood of Fred Beauvais, the Indian guide, and that of the child, would establish whether there is any basis to the apparent charge made by Stillman. The latter test would be just as positive as the former, although of negative nature, if the charges of Stillman are unfounded."

Dr. Abrams added that it would be unnecessary for either person to come to San Francisco. The drops of blood forwarded under proper conditions in a capsule or deposited on blotter or filter paper would be sufficient for his purpose, he said.

Guy Stillman presented the spectacle of a son without an acknowledged father. In the case of Louise Madeline, a baby born May 22, 1919, in the Grady Hospital of Atlanta, Ga., two full sets of parents are claiming that she is theirs. Mrs. John C. Garner and Mrs. Daniel L. Pittman, both of Atlanta, entered the maternity ward of the Grady Hospital at about the same time. A baby girl was born to each of them. About three days after the birth of Mrs. Garner's child, a nurse brought a small, palpitating bundle and placed it in her arms.

Mrs. Garner drew aside the covering and looked at the baby's face.

"This is not my child," she exclaimed. The nurse remonstrated with her. All the babies were tagged, they said. A mistake was highly improbable. Mrs. Garner insisted that she knew her own baby. The nurses admitted that a mistake was possible, but highly improbable.

Later, when the case was brought into court, testimony was introduced to show that such mistakes had been made at hospitals.

The nurse carried the baby away, but shortly after brought it back. Mrs. Garner still insisted that the baby was not hers. She then pointed to another baby—a baby at the breast of Mrs. Daniel Pittman.

"That is my baby!" she cried.

"Oh, no," Mrs. Pittman exclaimed. "This is my own Louise Madeline. I know my own baby."

And as Mrs. Pittman held to her contention, the hospital authorities, having given her the baby in the first place, allowed her to take it with her from the hospital. The Garners took the other baby—the unwanted child—and cared for it solicitously. They loved it, they said, but "not like our own child." For though Mr. Garner was inclined to pay scant attention to his wife at first, her persistence in the belief that the children had been changed gradually compelled his assent.

The Garners instituted court proceedings for possession of the coveted baby. Meanwhile, the unwanted child grew weak and sickly. The Garners made every effort to restore its failing vitality. Mrs. Garner nursed it at her own breast. She loved it for its own sake, she said, but it was not her child. But finally, three weeks after its birth, the unwanted child died.

The Garners and Pittmans met over the tiny grave. The Garners, saddened by the death of the unsought baby, withdrew their suit. In the course of time another baby was born to Mrs. Pittman, but she remained at home this time

Meanwhile, Mrs. Garner secretly mourned for Louise Madeline. She never became reconciled to her loss—she could never be convinced of any other possibility but that the child was hers. She claimed to see herself and husband written in every line of the tiny face. New habeas corpus proceedings were accordingly begun last fall and William E. Arnaud, counsel for Mrs. Garner, declared that scientific proof would be brought before the court of trial. Reference was made to the discovery made by Dr. Abrams, but no effort was then made to get in touch with the San Francisco scientist, though Mr. Garner overlooked none of the local scientists in his efforts to strengthen his case.

In fact, the attorney for the Pittmans, who had the child all along, refused to allow the test, but Mr. Arnaud stated that the court would ultimately demand it.

Local students of hereditary tendencies started an agitation with the idea of getting the courts to apply the theories of George Mendel, the first scientist to recognize the hereditary tendencies in a human being. Under this theory the odd numbered children of a family are supposed to be dominated by the parent whose sex is their own and the even numbered children by their opposite parent. Where the dominancy exists science is declared to have shown that there will be close resemblance, not only in contour and general characteristics, but that the finger prints will be practically identical.

The court failed to say, however, that it would recognize the validity of proofs advanced on the basis of this theory, so interest in the Mendelian hypothesis waned so far as the case of Louise Madeline was concerned.

The probabilities are that Louise Madeline herself, when she grows to maturity, will always carry a doubt in her heart no matter what the ultimate decision of the courts. The same thing has been said of little Guy Stillman.

In the course of time, if the California precedent means anything, extended controversy over the possession of a child or the responsibility for a child will not be possible. When faced with such a problem, the court will simply say: "The oscillophore declares that John Doe is the father of the child—and what the oscillophore says is law."

The EYE OF CLEOPATRA

By Richard Washburn Child

The Story of a Wonder Pearl and Its Strange Trail of Adventure, Tragedy, and Romance.

ENDLESS are the legends, rumors and stories of famous jewels that bring the possessor ghastly misfortunes. Among them all none but the record of one notorious pearl yields the true solution of the mysterious influence that lies behind the flash of some priceless diamond, the glow of a world-renowned ruby, the glittering lights of an emerald which has passed from owner to owner leaving its trail of terror. Perhaps the story of the great Eye is the key to them all.

Dolores Taraffa, whose beauty was of that warmth, brilliance and light that may be found in a flower of a tropic jungle, was the sole offspring of a pure-blood Cuban father and the daughter of a Scotch sea captain. A convent had given her an education which contributed to her character that strange calm and poise that now is so rare, and nature gave her the voice of a nonpareil as clear as crystal and as full of warmth as a Caribbean sunrise reflected in the beryl green shallows and dark purple depths of the Gulf.

From her mother she had inherited eyes that were the color of those green waters, clear, holding out the same invitingness, fit to reflect the sunlight of her hair; from her father she had inherited a skin and contour as smooth and delicate as carved ivory, but of that tropic tint that is only produced by marble white transparency through which glows the olive and pink of swiftly coursing blood.

Were it not for the strange fate that put into this little body a size of soul that might have been found in a Viking's daughter, it would not be necessary to know anything of Dolores before she came to New York. A mere accident of chance furnished that brief picture of her early life; one Thomas Safford, a sugar speculator of Havana, who happened to be the employer of Taraffa at the time Taraffa died, says this:

"I had her father as superintendent of the Los Banos Plantation. His health was bad enough, heaven knows. It may have accounted for their poverty. As I understood it he was an outcast son of some family in Madrid. His wife had been named McLeod. What a mixture! Everybody frowned on them. I never knew why. They produced this miracle of a child. But squallor! Always behind; always broke. Then he died and the girl came back to her mother."

"She was beautiful and silent! That bodes no good. If one is to be beautiful let them be talkative. Her beauty was a positive load to carry. You know how it is? But her voice! Naturally enough such a voice—such a singing voice—such a contralto! Her mother took her to Havana. Then the mother died. God knows how Dolores got to New York. Probably some theatrical man. No doubt he tried love-making. That would account for the girl fleeing from him—being adrift."

She was adrift. The first time any of our particular set heard of her was when Mrs. Tremayer Collier picked her up in that very imitation Bohemian place called The Belfry.

The Belfry was a coffee house of a sort—a smoky, tobacco-forged, candle-lit atmosphere little bird house over a plumber's shop. They make a great to-do over the cobwebs that hang down from the beams there. A gray-haired poetess keeps the place; she makes ten thousand a year selling coffee and rice cakes to a mixed group of young and penniless graduates of Western co-educational institutions who are in New York to write or play or dance interpretatively and to grand people from the land of social prominence uptown, who try to hide, when in The Belfry, their white shirt fronts and white shoulders under coats and wraps.

The poetess, who gave up verse for victuals, apparently made a great gesture of being kind to the down-and-outs. She was generous enough to furnish a few fried eggs from time to time to Dolores Taraffa; the reason may have been that Dolores was a picturesque little figure in her raggedy attire, her penniless respectability, and her beauty. The girl could talk English, of course, and above all when the mood struck her she could croon Spanish gypsy songs in a way to make the riff-raff guests float off into dreamland.

Mrs. Tremayer Collier was there one night with Bobby Durant and two of her other well-to-do admirers. Dolores had a cigar box banjo—literally made of a cigar box and a few strings on pegs, and lolling back in a corner she heard the lull in the chatter and struck a note. She struck a note with her fingers across the strings and with her voice across the world. It might have been, said pretty Mrs. Collier, the keynote of all human reminiscence and human aspiration.

It was only the beginning of a soft, low, almost whispered melody that took the eyes of those who were there far out into space. It was a magic. It was a spell. When the lady from uptown had recovered the consciousness of herself as a rich patron of the arts she said:

"Suppose that she could let that voice out into power. Great Scott, Bobby Durant, I intend to capture her and put her in musical circles!"

"Musical circles?" said Durant, who is an amateur composer as well as a scientist, "musical circles! That girl can cut figure eight all over our musical circles!"

That was the way, in brief, that Dolores was "taken from the gutter," as the widow of Tremayer Collier put it before she went off to Europe.

She knew perfectly well that Miss Taraffa had an education equal to her own and that her voice had begun already its training in the convent at Vedado, but she was a little vexed that Dolores, the silent and restrained, had not poured forth a lapful of gushing gratitude for the musicale at which Mrs. Collier had given her a "debut," for the lessons from Paraneili, for a launching toward that one season in which the girl, whirled away on the brilliant chariot of New York success, had advanced so far toward fame and fortune.

The Spring of that year found Dolores in an apartment of her own, paid for by money of her own. She knew what thankfulness, she owed to Mrs. Collier; she knew also what she owed to God and to herself.

"Your voice came from Heaven," said young Robinson Slade. "But the character to live the life you have led and go on working as you have is chalked up to your credit, dear one."

Slade was twenty then and she eighteen, although there was that untouchable youth in her deep green eyes that made her appear to be a child and made the old French woman whom she had engaged treat her like a child—in absurd contrast to several musical managers who competed in treating her like a queen.

It was ridiculous that she said to the son of the largest export house in America:

"Robbie, you are so young!" Robbie, as she called him, was not so young in the soul. He was a strong product, particularly if one considered his father, who was a case-hardened, steel-jacketed, metallic man of great ability. The boy did not look unlike him—a little too short, a little too well knit for grace or even for dignity, but with a vital forcefulness of figure, face, and movement. But the younger Slade, as Durant once remarked in his smart way, was a sheep in wolf's clothing. His father was said to be wholly practical; Robbie was philosophical and had thought and considered and meditated himself out of practicability. When his father gave him ten thousand dollars on his twenty-first birthday to practice investments the boy said this:

"You mean you want to see whether I can make this yield a great return?"

"Yes," said the elder Slade. "I will," Robbie answered, knowing the extraordinary thing he would do.

Perhaps the reason that he had never told his father about his visits to Dolores or of his excursions with her, that knew no sense other than propriety, and often ended up in such absurdities as sitting together on a park bench at the Battery waiting for a fog to lift so that they could see the Statue of Liberty, or of his increasing love for her, was that sense of sacredness of relationship which shrinks from discussion with third persons, particularly if they are unsympathetic and lacking in understanding. Certainly it was not because he had fear.

He was fearless enough—inexperienced and fearless, and with an exaggerated notion of the value of honor and knightly behavior and gallantry as abstract ideals that he had never had the opportunity to apply to life.

If there were anything secretive about his attentions to this beautiful young singer, whose convent-bred poise and calm and silent moods and aloofness from that brilliant and lively world into which she had climbed so swiftly, that secretiveness came not from a sense of impending scandal, though he may have recognized its possibility, but rather from his joy in the world apart which he was creating with her and which might be smashed by the vulgarity of gossip.

Perhaps it was because of the absence of any critic of their high and finely felt relationship of youth that, with the fruitless disapproval of Annette, the French factotum, he came and went in and out of that luxurious little apartment that Dolores' increasing earnings had made possible.

A few weeks before his father had made him the gift of money Robbie was stretched out in the window seat of the little blue and gold living room when Annette brought to little Miss Taraffa a card. The effect of this card was quite miraculous and alarming. Dolores, gazing at it, lost color, dropped it onto the table, and with her small hands clenched stared at nothing, her pink lips twisting as sometimes her Spanish blood made them twist with emotion.

"Who?" asked young Slade. "Stuart Hotchkiss,"

"And who is Stuart Hotchkiss?" he asked. "The man who brought me to New York," said Dolores.

Robbie had never asked who the man was who brought her from Cuba. He knew that he was a mongrel soul who had supposed too much.

"He has been here often in the month," she said, wearily. "He says I owe him my success and that the least I can do is to reimburse him for his investment in me."

"Does he?" asked Robbie, climbing down from the window seat. He whistled. He looked at the card and strolled out to the hallway. Dolores heard voices and then the closing of the apartment door. When Slade returned, rather flushed, she said, "Well?"

"I thrashed him," he answered. "What else? We had rather something of a time out there on the tiled floor."

He looked troubled. "Why?" she asked.

"He knew who I was. How do you suppose he knew? He threatened to get even with me. But let us forget it. Nothing in the world—"

"Nothing in the world can harm us," said Dolores, pressing the back of his hand against her cheek.

"Some day I want to kiss you—on the lips," said Robbie.

"Some day—of course, Robbie—some day." They were young and neither realized the significance to them of this incident.

Within a month he brought to her the Eye of Cleopatra.

She had been singing—three short folk songs of Andalusia—at some Fifth Avenue evening affair. The place is of no consequence to this account. He found her some time after ten in an evening gown of black relaxed against the vivid orange silk lining of her wrap in her favorite wicker chair.

"You will think I am a fool," he said.

"Of course," replied Dolores, "of course, Robbie. It is because you are so sweet and clean, and so far from these dressed-up males who are always out of breath chasing the nasty little dollars, that I love you."

"You never said that before," he replied.

"What?"

"That you love me."

"It went without saying," said she.

No doubt he felt a brimming in his eyes; it would be quite like him. He is a whole package of assorted and fine sentiment.

"Well, if you can understand how little I ever trust my ability to express myself—my real feelings—you will understand this. Something in the beauty and rarity of this will tell you," he said.

"And what is the thing you call this?" she asked.

Robbie, taking from his pocket a handkerchief of heavy Habutai silk, spread it upon the black of Dolores' lap. In the center of it reposed that extraordinary jewel which pearl experts have known for half a century as Cleopatra's Eye.

"Robbie!" exclaimed Dolores.

"It is for you. It is set into a pendant for you. If you can understand that it comes as a materialization of things I can't ever say myself! If you can understand that its beauty is a message from me!"

"I can, Robbie," replied Dolores with something like a whisper of reverence.

"May I kiss you?" he asked.

"I never forbade you, Rob. I never forbade you from the first time we sat on the stairs at Mrs. Collier's dance. I love you, Robbie, and I think I will never love any one else. But it is so strong now when all the rest of the world are worldly figures who would never miss me if I ceased to sing or ceased to be pretty!"

He kissed her.

"Wasn't it terribly costly, Robbie?"

He dismissed the question with a gesture. Together, cheek to cheek, they looked down at this marvelous piece whose reputation and value comes from the fact that it wears upon its surface the going coming of a Mediterranean blue through which the rose of a Spring day thrusts its lights.

"Cleopatra's Eye," said he. "That's its name. You know, of course, that Cleopatra was of Greek blood. Her eyes—"

They were silent as the Eye glinted.

"Do you know where I got it?" he asked. "I'll tell you. I bought it from a Japanese. You'll never remember his name—Hidebushiro Ito. He is famous—a trader in pearls. Used to be in Kyoto. Now in New York. A gloomy, silent man."

Suddenly he stepped away from her.

"I suppose there's something else I should tell you," he said.

"What?"

Robbie fingered the Oriental brocade of the table cover as if considering.

"Well, there is a superstition about Cleopatra's Eye," said he. "That's its name. You know, of course, that Cleopatra was of Greek blood. Her eyes—" boy's purpose to make a lifelong alliance with her, he was all the more convinced of the shock this would be to a hard-headed planner like old Slade. He was in no hurry, for, but of luck and money as he was, he had been able to afford enough to corrupt Etienne, the worthless son of old Annette, and all tales were brought to his ears. He wanted to accumulate all the details of the tale he was to hear.

When Dolores saw him he had not come particularly to see Robbie emerge from Dolores' apartment just before midnight. He had come because Etienne had left the apartment after visiting his mother and had telephoned to Hotchkiss that he had a tale which would "break his eardrum." That was why Hotchkiss had come, and the story of Cleopatra's Eye was now his!

Hotchkiss took it to Slade. When he had finally been admitted to the millionaire shipping man's office he said, with a gesture of nobility:

"You will wonder, perhaps, why I am coming to you in a matter of confidential disclosure. I will tell you in advance, Mr. Slade. It is because if I were a father I would thank the man who would do the same for me. It is a matter between gentlemen."

"My son?" exclaimed Slade, in a startled, anxious voice, for the father had as much faith in Robinson as he had in the South American trade. "What about my son?"

Hotchkiss told him. "I have a friend in the jewelry appraisal business," he concluded. "And I confess it was something of a shock to me to know the value—the price—of Cleopatra's Eye."

"What was that price?"

"Ten thousand dollars."

Hotchkiss had made good his promise to get even with Robinson Slade.

The export man did not go to see Dolores Taraffa to beg her to give up his son. "I have a distaste for Camille scenes," he said afterward. He merely wrote a letter. It was a brutal letter; not brutal in the sense of its phrases, for it was written with a fine manner of mock gallantry, but brutal in the exquisite thrusts he gave her.

He spoke of the shock it had been to him that his own son had not expressed to him the pleasure he had taken in her acquaintance; he said that it must be indeed only a persuading personality like hers that could make his own son spend the last cent he would ever get from his father upon a trinket for her to wear over her heart.

In Dolores there was fineness of metal, well tempered, and under injury it could whip up like a broken hair spring. Robbie had no way of knowing the hours she had spent in bitter tears; she had effaced them and their traces with ice and many bathings before he came to see her one that memorable night.

At first as he came in he did not know she was in the room. She was standing by the heavy curtains in the shadow, and only after she had come forward, with her small head erect and as white as a marble bust into the light, did he realize that something was wrong.

"I have received a letter from your father," she said. "Here it is."

He read it, aghast.

"You might have told me how much this pearl cost," she said, with her fine teeth tightly closed.

"It was nothing—the cost."

"I did not know. I should have refused such a gift. Not only have you made yourself a fool, but you have made a fool of me. This is the thing you call love—this madness."

"It may have been madness," said Robbie, in a trembling voice. "But such madness I could afford. It is such madness as never comes a second time."

Dolores appeared a little shaken, but the fire of wrath, the blood of her father, was in her temples. She clenched her hands and her eyes lit with the lights in the eyes of a tigress about to spring.

"You did not tell your father you knew me—that it meant anything to you!" she burst forth. "That is enough—that in itself."

It was impossible now for him to tell her his reason. To have told the truth would have seemed to be framing a weak lie. He merely said: "I would have told him soon."

"Oh, well," she said, with a magnificent coldness. "I might have known. You are like the rest—bold as a lion in your self-indulgences, but a craven coward in facing the obligations of life. What is the expression? Oh, yes—you are a little yellow, Robinson Slade—like your father's letter to me—a little yellow. It is so fortunate that I have found out before it was more serious, and it is too bad that I did not find out sooner."

Do you know what it means to be a girl without a single friendly hand—alone—eternally subject to the assault of men's conspiracies and women's poisoned tongues? Do you know what you have done to wrong me? So much! Well, it is over. I look upon you for the last time, I hope."

Do you mean that without knowing more—without hearing me you would send me away as all our world we have made together—all our plans."

"You better go," she said, with a curling of her lip. The devil himself was putting the words into her mouth. "If you ever come here again I shall know better than ever that you are without self-respect or pride or decency."

The younger Slade was not without pride and passion of his own; he seized his straw hat, and with reddened face started toward the door.

"Wait!" Dolores commanded. "You have forgotten something."

"What?"

"Your trinket."

He laughed in no pleasant tone.

"Then I shall send it to your father."

The threat fired him. He burst forth. "The things you have said to me I will never forget, nor will I ever come back to you unless you ask me; but if you send the pearl to my father I would never forgive you if we lived to be a thousand years old."

"Here—then!" she said, and tossed the Eye of Cleopatra across the table. It struck him on the mouth and fell clattering on to the hardwood floor between two Turkistan rugs. He turned away and passed out through the hangings at the door.

She stayed motionless, breathing hard, her lips pressed tightly together until long after the door had closed. Then suddenly the realization of his going came to her, and she sank on to her knees and buried her face in the cushion of the wicker chair.

"Robbie! Come back!" she cried out. "Robbie, come back to me. I lied to you, Robbie. I love you. Come back to me!"

When she had caught her breath she listened and heard only the cough and purr of motors on the asphalt street below the window. She picked up the pearl and stared at it a long time. It was in a gay mood—this gem; it was filled with life and flash of rosy light.

"It is the only thing—the only thing he ever gave me," she said, holding it in her palm. "But I will send it back to him—tomorrow."

Then suddenly, as she looked at it, she saw the lights in it fade out; it lapsed into a miserable gray. Perhaps it was saying to her that she should not so easily get rid of it. Two days later she learned that Robbie Slade had gone on one of his father's ships on a voyage to the West Coast of South America.

If with the ownership of the Cleopatra's Eye there went a strange and sinister influence, surely it had made a good beginning. Annette, to whom the story of the pearl had filtered, counseled the earliest riddance of it.

"Be still!" said Dolores. "Never speak of the pearl to me again. I do not wear it. It is gone—into a safe place. It is not mine, anyway. It is not mine. I'm not the owner. Besides, the superstition is nonsense—plain nonsense."

Annette was incorrigible. She replied, "Well, it came into our home over two months ago. Already the stock into which you put most of your savings of this winter has lost all its value because of that law suit. You have lost all your best gowns by burglary, have you not, Mademoiselle? How is it that Mrs. Tremayer Collier turned her back upon you and went off to Europe? Do you have any more engagements offered to you—who can sing like her or not?"

"But it is spring, Annette. The musical season is over."

"Hal Over, eh? Did not Madame Orzicka take your place at—"

"Hush!" commanded Dolores. "It is absurd."

"Absurd? I wonder," Annette persisted. "Even you—Mademoiselle, you are not the same. So much of irritation. Ah! I tell you bad temper makes enemies, and enemies will gossip about a beautiful young girl who has no one to protect her. What have you? Your voice. That is your only true friend—just as my pretty face was once. But if bad luck comes even your voice you may lose. Perhaps a sneeze—a cold—a cough, Mademoiselle, and it might be gone forever. Better sell the wicked thing while there is yet time!"

"I love it," said Dolores, passionately.

"Then you love your ruin!" Annette mumbled, and went on with her dusting.

She was not present for long, to haunt the girl with her warnings and her imagery of evil. Before six weeks had gone, and when the hottest days of July had come, Dolores told the old woman that she could employ her no more.

"I love you, Annette," she said, wearily.

"But I have had no engagements. There is no money with which to pay you."

The old woman stared at her young mistress resentfully. She said, without any sign of regret, and insolently:

"You never would listen to one older and wiser than you. Take care of your health. You are pale. You have come from the tropics. I knew a girl who came from Brazil—a dancer—a girl like you, meant for sunlight. The damp, cold air here struck into her chest, and she passed away. That is what happened to her. And she did not have that wicked pearl!"

Dolores spent her summer practicing her singing. No one came to see her. Her restraint, her aloofness, had made her no friends. The men she had known sooner or later had to be sent about their business; the women who had patronized her had done so a good deal as they would patronize a canary, and they always demanded a subservience that her proud spirit could not give.

Because she was so lonely she allowed an

THE "BLACK SHEEP" AND HIS INHERITANCE

"A man may be down—"
I didn't catch the rest of the line, as Captain Braun led me out of the office in the Salvation Army Industrial Home in Atlanta a few days ago. We had been sitting in a bedroom discussing his experiences with the Salvation Army for the past thirty years, and some of the characters which had passed before his official vision.

There were many men about the building, but all were busily engaged. There was one fact evident. The floors were so spotless that they reflected clean minds.

There's one man out there, for instance, who was worth considerable of a fortune until he gave it all to "The Army" which had picked him up when he had a broken leg and crushed foot one morning after an all-night brawl. His story is rather interesting.

He was born in Pennsylvania, one of four sons of well-to-do parents. He was the youngest child and what is popularly called the "black sheep." His story is like a great many of the same "black sheep," which has been applied to some very intimate friends of the writer. Anyway, he was disinherited and then he didn't seem to care what became of him.

He hadn't been home sober in years. His brothers told him to get out. His mother disinherited him and he became a human derelict, tossed on the shifting tides of inclination—a follower of the line of least resistance.

To Share in Estate.
One night his mother lay dying. She had not heard from her "baby" in years, but as she entered the river for the long journey she told those at her bedside that she had a vision of the wanderer at last at home in the arms of Jesus. And the last thing she did was to change her will so that if within five years he should "come to his senses" (as she expressed it), he would share equally in the estate.

But the boy didn't know about this.

About three years later "the bunch" gathered in one of the dives for an all-night blowout. Some mean whisky roused the devil in them.

The boy had a fight in which he was worsted. He was thrown down the stairs and a heavy piece of furniture fell on top, crushing his foot and breaking his leg.

It was thus that "The Army" found him. They didn't ask him what caused him in such a condition. They accepted it for a fact, furnished a doctor and a bed and soon had him back in good shape. He was first placed in the kitchen where he stirred the stews and baked the pies, but his eyes sought the freedom of the skies longingly. Finally he got his chance and became a driver of the wagon which picks up old newspapers and obsolete furniture. Soon he was head of the various wagons and trucks which gather this huge amount of waste and send it again into the channels of commerce.

Up in Connecticut one day, where he had been transferred, he was ordered to carry a truck to New York for repairs. When he arrived in the city he found that it would require several days for the repairs to be completed. And so he asked permission to visit his old home town during the interim.

Greater Work to Do.
It was granted and then he learned of his mother's death and that her last thoughts had been of the prodigal who hadn't returned. His brothers urged him to settle down and assume his share in the business which they had inherited. But he told them that he had a greater work to do and that was to help some other poor fellows come back into the paths of right. And so he took his inheritance and passed it into the work of "The Army." Today he is assistant to Captain Braun, who can introduce you to the thirty inmates of the home, any one of which will have a story as interesting to tell.

We went through spotless dining rooms and kitchens and then back through a little hallway into the sitting room wherein a player-piano and a victrola provide entertainment in the evening and which is converted into a chapel on Sunday where men who have tasted of the drugs state in plain and humble language of how they were rejuvenated and then the simple psychology of the human mind comes into play and seldom does a man leave the institution but to return to his duty as head of his deserted family or into the various channels of life.

There was another case which interested me mightily. We found him over in the baling room where he was assisting in sorting papers and then baling them in accordance with the different grades of paper. They ship a carload of this away every week.

This man is passing middle age.

His hair is iron-gray. "The light from within" has not succeeded in erasing entirely the wrinkles once brought by frowns, but it is the bright blue in his eyes which shows you that here is a man who was once somebody!

When we had passed into the furniture repair shop Captain Braun told me about him. Once he had been a Wall street broker and within a week had lost his fortune—running beyond $100,000—his wife and two daughters through sickness. From that day until the time when, down on the harbor front one night in December the man was half demoralized, lost to all ambition and finally was seeking the oblivion which would not come unassisted, is easy to understand.

On Brink of Eternity.
The little Salvation Army lassie took him by the arm and led him from where they stood, two shadows between a silver moon and the dark murky waters, into an evening prayer service in an army chapel not far away. And kneeling by his side she fought the evil intentions inside him all night. Her recompense was when long after daybreak he knelt at the altar, humble and determined to fight his battle as long as he was destined to remain a bobbing cork on the sea of life.

We then walked back into the main building and upstairs where clean beds invited sleep. A clock somewhere downstairs struck 12 and we stood and watched through a window as "The Boys" walked across the vacant lot and into the house for dinner. There were thirty of them—the home is overtaxed—they talked of the day's work and Mike, the waiter, who is going home to support his wife and children as soon as he is sure that he has conquered his craze for the bottle, dealt generous portions of hot food to his hungry companions.

We walked back into the office and while Captain Braun was inspecting his books to furnish me statistics of the home, my gaze wandered absently to the sign on the wall. This time I read it all the way through. It read—
"A Man May Be Down, But He's Never Out!"

Dr. Louise Mellroy, who has obtained an appointment on the staff of the Royal Free hospital, in London, has the distinction of being the first woman in England to secure an appointment open to both sexes at a salary of $10,000 a year. Dr. Mellroy is a striking example of the brilliancy of modern women. During the world war she acted as chief surgeon in France and at Salonica.

Jurywomen are very quick in taking up a point, according to one judge.

Saved from being a down-and-out himself, the chef of the Salvation Army home, on coming into his inheritance, turned it all over to the army and is devoting his life to helping others as unfortunate as he once was.

The EYE OF CLEOPATRA

By Richard Washburn Child

apoplectic man, who lived on the same floor and whose hair was still red, and whose age was uncertain, to make her acquaintance. He said that she reminded him of his daughter, and he came and sat in the evenings, droning on about his past in the dullest manner, until she felt like screaming at him to go away. Sometimes she prepared her own meals; sometimes she went out over the hot brick pavements to the cheapest restaurants she could find.

Early in September the agent of the apartment house notified her that her lease had been ended.

"Already you owe us for two months," he said. "Besides, there is to be an increase in rent. You can go within a few days."

He paused.

"Who paid for all this?" he said, sweeping his fat hand around.

"I did," she said.

The man smiled. "Well, I will send a moving van around."

When he did he connived to take possession of her piano. It was sold for what it would bring. Dolores did not have any spirit for a controversy. Somehow an evil, subtle conviction had come to her that protest and battle was useless, and that an unchangeable fate was at her heels, driving its talons into her helplessness. There was tragedy in not having a piano; she could practice no more. She often sat for hours in the boarding house room staring at the terrible wall paper.

At these times she would usually end her meditation by unbuckling the front of her dress before the mirror, and there, upon the white expanse of her bosom, was the Eye of Cleopatra!

"I couldn't afford to keep you, dear, in the luxury of a safe deposit box," she would say. "But you do not mind? Why don't you brighten? You look so dull—as dull as you look when some one is ready to plunge a knife into their own white flesh."

A long rainy spell came in early October, and one morning Dolores awoke with a headache and a sore throat. As she lay staring at the ceiling, a little away with fever, she thought of the words of Annette. She knew that if this cold were to last she would think of these words sooner or later; but it appeared to her extraordinary that she had thought of them at once as if they were interwoven with these swollen glands in her throat, and could not be untangled from the infection that had set her. When she got up, however, she took off the Eye of Cleopatra, and hid it in the lower drawer of the hideous golden oak bureau. Then she laughed a little hysterically at herself. She had yielded to the superstition; she had definitely said to herself as she had put the pearl away:

November came. The season in which she had promised herself better days had begun. In the absence of other circumstances she would have been seeking bookings for recitals. Somehow she could not bring herself to go. Her clothes, those that were left, were undoubtedly shabby. Furthermore, a great weariness had come upon her. She wanted to sit down always. Try as she would to go through the day, the weariness would go creeping through her body until late in the afternoon, when a restless warmth would follow it through her veins. The cold had not left her. She did not throw it off. But the thought that her voice, which had now broken up into hoarse responses, would never return was one that she thrust away constantly, as one might brush aside an ever increasing web of filaments. She dreamed once that the fine entangling strands of fate were being spun by a bright glowing spider, and the body of the spider, when she looked at it closely, was the Eye of Cleopatra. She asked herself if resistance were worth while.

One day she went to see a physician—a business-mannered New York diagnostician, who listened to her story, looking at the ceiling with an air of boredom. After that he listened through a stethoscope, pressing the cold metal against her beautiful neck and across her chest, marking dots upon her white skin with a blue crayon.

"Do you lose weight?" he asked.

"Yes."

"I find two spots up here in the right lung, Miss Taraffa," he said. "You need not let that shock you. You can be cured. Once really cured, you will be more immune than I am."

"Tuberculosis?" she whispered.

"Yes," said he. "I want you to go to some place where it is high and dry—some place, however, in this region, so that you will recover under the conditions in which you will live. Can you afford—"

"Nothing," she said.

"I will give you a note to Albers. He has a sanitarium near Lake Placid."

Perhaps it is useless to give an account of the fight that Dolores made. Such battles are without the slightest romance and are made of monotony. Emotion and drama are smothered by routine and the brave soul that bows to that routine and the virile will that goes forward yielding nothing to the enemy day after long day will prove the character of a being and will exult it.

Dolores in a six months' span cured herself of tuberculosis, but her voice had gone forever. She had learned that human beings when driven to the test are mostly brave and true and kind, and can even die with considerable dignity and make of death a kind of noble event. Again, as when six months ago she had faced the necessity of getting some common job at a few dollars a week, she now faced that long prospect of being a working girl forever. One had to have clothes. Her own were falling apart, as one of the nurses said, and she had only enough money to buy a ticket to Detroit to get the position that had been offered to a professional waitress who had not left the sanitarium and now never would leave the sanitarium to take it.

The pearl was hers. The ten thousand dollar pearl! The pearl with its evil history! The pearl with its baneful influence! She could sell it if she would! But it was the one thing left of Romance, of love, of Robbie. And then there always seemed to be an undefined reason why she should not sell it—why she should never part with it. Why not? It was a fortune! And yet there was a reason. She hung the thing about her neck again before she left for Detroit. It had grown so lustrous and dull.

The job in Detroit had gone out of existence. It had been waiting for her—a position as caretaker of all the linen at a hotel. Unfortunately the hotel had been bought to clear the site for a new office building. The manager told her with brightening of his expression, "Why, there was a hundred thousand dollars for me in this big deal," he said, looking into her startled green eyes, that were still clear and large and beautiful.

Dolores found it difficult to realize that real extremity is real. In luxury and under protection of a kind life one reads of those who cannot pay for the three weeks of lodging house dues after looking about for a position and one reads of going superfluous. She could not believe it when it was happening to her. She wrote back to her friends at the sanitarium, unable to believe that the facts she put into the letter were so. If things like this happened to one they were all the more unreal when they happened in the soft and indulgent springtime.

It was Spring! Neither the dingy rows of brick lodging houses nor the smell of the metal works could suppress Spring. It was there with its hurdy-rurdies and the shouts of children in the dusk, and from somewhere the faint whiffs of warm, moist loam from which bright green shoots were sprouting forth.

Dolores saw the arc lights come snapping on and later a man whose feet made strangely emphatic beats on the pavement like the marching of Time over a sounding board, came and looked up at her lodging house. She was joyful when she found he had come for her; she thought he had come to give her employment.

"I am Mr. Mondell's secretary," he said, leaning at her satanically.

"Mr. Mondell?" she inquired.

"You might not know him," he said contemptuously. "He is known well enough usually. He is one of the largest traders in pearls in the world."

Dolores gasped.

"I tell you we have had a time of it hunting you up," the man said. "A chase from one address to another. And frankly we expected every day since we began the search that we would hear that the Eye of Cleopatra was on the market again. It was desired by a special client and the Japanese dealer put us on the track."

"Well?" said she.

"Well, where is it?" he asked.

Dolores at once was suspicious; she was not going to tell that it lay upon her white bosom.

"I have it in safe keeping," she replied.

"Hal!" said the other with a sigh of relief. "We are leaving town tomorrow. Can you come with me to our suite at the hotel?"

Dolores, for the moment, felt that she had come to the end of her rope and now at the end was freedom from this bane of the evil Eye and ten thousand dollars beside!

"I will go with you," she said.

They went in a taxicab.

Of the risks she was taking she was well aware, but she discounted them by saying to herself that nothing mattered much now in any case. She was at the end of her rope. She was relieved nevertheless to hear Mr. Mondell's voice as she was shown into the parlor of his suite at the hotel.

"Sit down, Miss Taraffa," he said, indicating a chair on the other side of a French gilded table decorated with hand painted flowers.

"You can go, Nelson."

They were alone. Dolores and he faced each other under the light—a strange contrast, she thought, because in the long mirror between the windows she could see how poverty stricken she appeared compared to this well dressed, well kept figure before her.

He was a man not tall of stature and with the look of one who in younger days had been stouter. Now he had a little of that wizening of years and austerity which appeared rather pleasant than otherwise. His lips were thin, perhaps a little cruel, but there was a rather kindly and quizzical look in his gray eyes as he sat there calmly enough, studying her and waiting for her to speak.

She felt as if she had come to the end of a long journey; she said nothing.

"If you do not mind my asking—where is the Eye of Cleopatra?" he inquired at last.

She felt that he was not a man to be trusted. With her small right hand she reached down below her collar, undid the chain, and put the pearl upon the table.

"Ah!" said he, bending over it eagerly, and then after a moment of admiration he inquired:

"What is your price for it, Miss Taraffa?"

"I do not know," she said.

"Do not know? Do not know?"

She shook her head.

"Of course one does not trace a person as we have traced you in these few weeks without finding out—well, how shall I put it?—without finding out the course of circumstances under which you have lived for many months," he said. "It has not been a very—well—prosperous course, has it, Miss Taraffa? It is a most astounding thing that you have not sold this pearl—astounding! Why?"

She shook her head.

"Its sale would rather relieve you from further difficulties, wouldn't it? Say ten thousand dollars in the form of a certified check."

Dolores was staring deep into nothingness. The other touched the Eye with his fingers. He said at last: "Well? What is your decision?"

"I shall not sell it," she said dreamily.

"Not sell? You must have some reason. Is it a sentimental reason?"

"Perhaps—partly—a little—but just now I have thought of the real reason that I will never sell it."

"And what is it?" he asked anxiously.

"Do you know the superstition about this pearl?" she inquired.

"Why, of course. That is nonsense. I would not be buying it for a man to give his beautiful young daughter if—"

Dolores covered her face with her hands.

"You do not mean that you would refuse to sell it for that reason?" the man said with unbelieving, doubting tone, and spacing his words slowly.

She nodded.

"Because you think it would bring misery to some one else?" He was astounded.

She made no comment.

"But in that case you would throw it away," he suggested craftily.

She picked up Cleopatra's Eye and gazed down at its wonders. "Yes, I will throw it into the lake!"

"You can't mean that you would throw away your chance to save yourself because of the harm the pearl might take to some one else," he said.

"Yes," said Dolores wearily. "I never quite knew, but that is it."

"Is it?" he snapped. "Let's see if it is. I've an idea." He arose, walked swiftly to the door, and called: "Nelson!"

"Yes, sir."

"Give me a piece of paper. That scrap will do. Go down to the drug store and get that. Pour it into a glass and bring it to me."

"Yes, sir."

"Now we will see!" he snapped in a challenging voice.

He paced up and down the room, now and then glancing at his visitor as if to be sure that, like the vision in a dream, she had not vanished; only when his secretary knocked at the door did he cease his pacing to take from the other man a glass half full of a clear liquid.

"If we are to have a romantic moment, let us have it romantically," he said, putting the glass before her. "If we are to test sincerity, let us do it with due regard for historical precedent."

She looked up at him, puzzled.

"You said you would destroy the pearl," he went on. "In all my peculiar set of experiences I have never seen one quite like this. It is not often that one in your circumstances will do as you say you will do. And will you?"

He paused.

"I say, will you? Cleopatra, it is said, destroyed a priceless pearl by dropping it into vinegar. She could afford that piece of bravado. Can you? The glass before you does not contain vinegar. It contains a much more powerful acid. If the pearl is dropped into it, it will foam like an effervescent lithia tablet, and it will dissolve like one."

Dolores smiled.

"Well?" said he. "Come, now. Isn't it rather too much to pay—too much to pay for insurance that no one else may suffer from its possession?"

He laughed. At the end of this short, derisive laugh he heard the little splash as the pearl, twisted out of its setting, dropped into the glass. With an exclamation he came and, like Dolores, bent over the table, resting his weight upon his straightened arms, gazing down.

The Eye of Cleopatra, untouched and unmovable, giving forth no bubbles of disintegration, lay at the bottom of the glass, its blue haze and its pink light emphasized in its immersion. The acid had no effect upon it.

"You have deceived me!" exclaimed Dolores. "It was a cruel trick."

"Perhaps," said the other. "I have a reputation of being a cold-blooded man, Miss Taraffa. They say that of me. But you may think I am not without my romantic side when I tell you that the evil that you thought was in a pearl was the evil of fear—that dwelt only in your own mind. You will not think I am lacking in my romantic side when I tell you who I am."

"Who are you?" asked Dolores. "I believe you are the devil himself!"

"No," said he. "But my name is not Mondell. My name is Slade. I am Robbie's father. He has come back from a long journey, and he has sent me to look for you and take you back to him."

"It is not so!" she exclaimed in her disbelief. "It couldn't be so! It couldn't happen to me, to the owner of Cleopatra's Eye!"

"Perhaps not," said Slade, with his face suddenly drawn into grave, hard lines. "But this isn't the Eye of Cleopatra. You never have been its owner. This thing in this glass is only a clever imitation by a Japanese skilled in such work."

"And there was no evil—?"

He answered after a moment's deliberation. "I said, only in the mind. Hidebushiro Ito was discovered over a month ago with a bullet hole in his head and a revolver in his hand. In his other fist they found the real Eye of Cleopatra."

Smart Frocks That Iron Out Flat

PRACTICALLY every woman, and surely every practical woman, chooses her summer clothes and those of her children with one eye on her laundry list.

Now there are a great many frocks this season which can be "run thru" the same ironer at the laundry which sheets and other flat pieces are taken thru. And as they can thus be ironed out flat, what a relief when one has to do one's own ironing!

Little girls wear bloomer suits almost entirely. Certainly all the new-cut garments for little girls are of that type.

The smart little garment in the extreme left of the sketch is simply a straight kimono-sleeved affair, with a wide band of the skirt and straight little trousers underneath.

Chambray and gingham offer the most pleasing possibilities for making it up, using chambray, say of jade green, for the frock with trimmings and hat of green-and-white-checked gingham. Of course the two materials might also be used just the other way round.

Don't forget that slit pocket. It adds trimness to the frock as well as untold value in the eyes of the little wearer.

The other little girl's dress makes clever use of very simple embroidery. Of white cotton crepe, this frock could be bound about the bottom with red-and-white-checked gingham, using red worsted for the embroidered arrows and the darning stitches below them.

Blue chambray, with a blue-and-white-checked gingham band about the bottom, could be embroidered in either red or white floss with smart effect. The front of this frock is like the back.

We have spoken before about faggoting, and we shall speak of it again many times during the season, for it is so fashionable.

Likewise the waistline is again wandering from the normal.

These two style features are combined in the model in the extreme right of the sketch. The kimono-sleeved jumper is joined, without any fullness, to the rather narrow skirt by means of faggoting. Deep cuffs similar to the set-in vestee are added to the three-quarter bell sleeves.

A white linen trimmed with Chinese yellow faggoting, a Harding blue ratine trimmed with self-color faggoting, or a tan chambray trimmed with brown faggoting offer suggestions which will make this frock a popular one for summer vacation wear.

Sometimes frocks have no waistline at all, in spite of all the prophesies concerning the same which appeared earlier in the season. The dress in the center is very frankly cut "all-in-one" with sashes which loop on the sides coming out from two large eyelets. These sashes, of course, will be taken out when the frock is laundered and afterward fastened into place by means of snap fasteners.

A blue chambray trimmed with white cotton braid and given a white or-gandie sash, or a green chambray trimmed with bands of green-and-white-checked gingham, or tan linen trimmed with bands of brown effect smart possibilities for making this a house frock of unusual service and style.

The uneven hemline has many adherents this season. Especially is the scalloped hem thought well of.

An advocate of this mode is the frock whose raglan-sleeved jumper is stitched on to the skirt without any fullness and whose sleeves imitate the scalloped outline of the hem.

Of white cotton crepe, trimmed with orange bands put on in scalloped fashion, or of white linen trimmed with jade green, tomato red or Chinese yellow this frock would meet many a summer need.

The bottom of the jumper and the raglan-cut armhole can be stitched in darning stitch of worsted, with whatever color you choose to trim the frock.

Fashion on Parade

Lace is the dominant note in most of the smart new tea gowns. One elaborate model has a foundation of cloth of gold veiled in black net patterned in gold. The net hangs from a straight Florentine neckline and is gathered into a train which is weighted with a huge orange velvet flower.

Among the recent French imports is a tea gown with a long and sweeping skirt of soft satin and a tunic of georgette which resembles the robe of a choir boy.

An elaborate evening cape designed by a large French house is made of black velvet embroidered in gold. Two plain bands of velvet run down the front over which hang cords of velvet weighted with gold ornaments.

An attractive afternoon frock seen in a restaurant the other day was made of mauve changeable taffeta. There was a tight little bodice and a full skirt trimmed with tiny frills of the taffeta. A rosette and streamers of old rose ribbon were fastened at the waist.

There is much originality in the patterns of the gingham for spring. Many of them suggest figured or striped linens rather than gingham. One especially charming gingham frock plaided in rose and black, is designed in coat style with a gilet of organdie.

Cotton Crepe, Ratine, Linene, Chambray and Gingham are the Fabrics to Choose for These Easy-to-Iron Garments

TABLES HAVE TURNED TO NEW WAYS

ALTHO color invaded the fixings of every other room, for a long time it was not admitted into the dining room. In curtains, yes, but not in covers. It seemed distasteful to imagine one's dining table laid with anything but a shiny white damask cloth.

The high cost of linens may have had something to do with it, or it may be that the skill of the interior decorators persuaded us that after all color might be beautifully treated on the dining table. At any rate the fact remains that it happened; "the tables were turned" and color entered the dining room. Now, except in very formal households, damask cloths are not used for informal occasions.

Color must be rightly treated. Otherwise it can hardly be excused on the dining table, whose tradition has been so different for decades back.

The covers shown in the sketch are designed for such fabrics as cotton crepe dress linen, dish toweling and cotton holland.

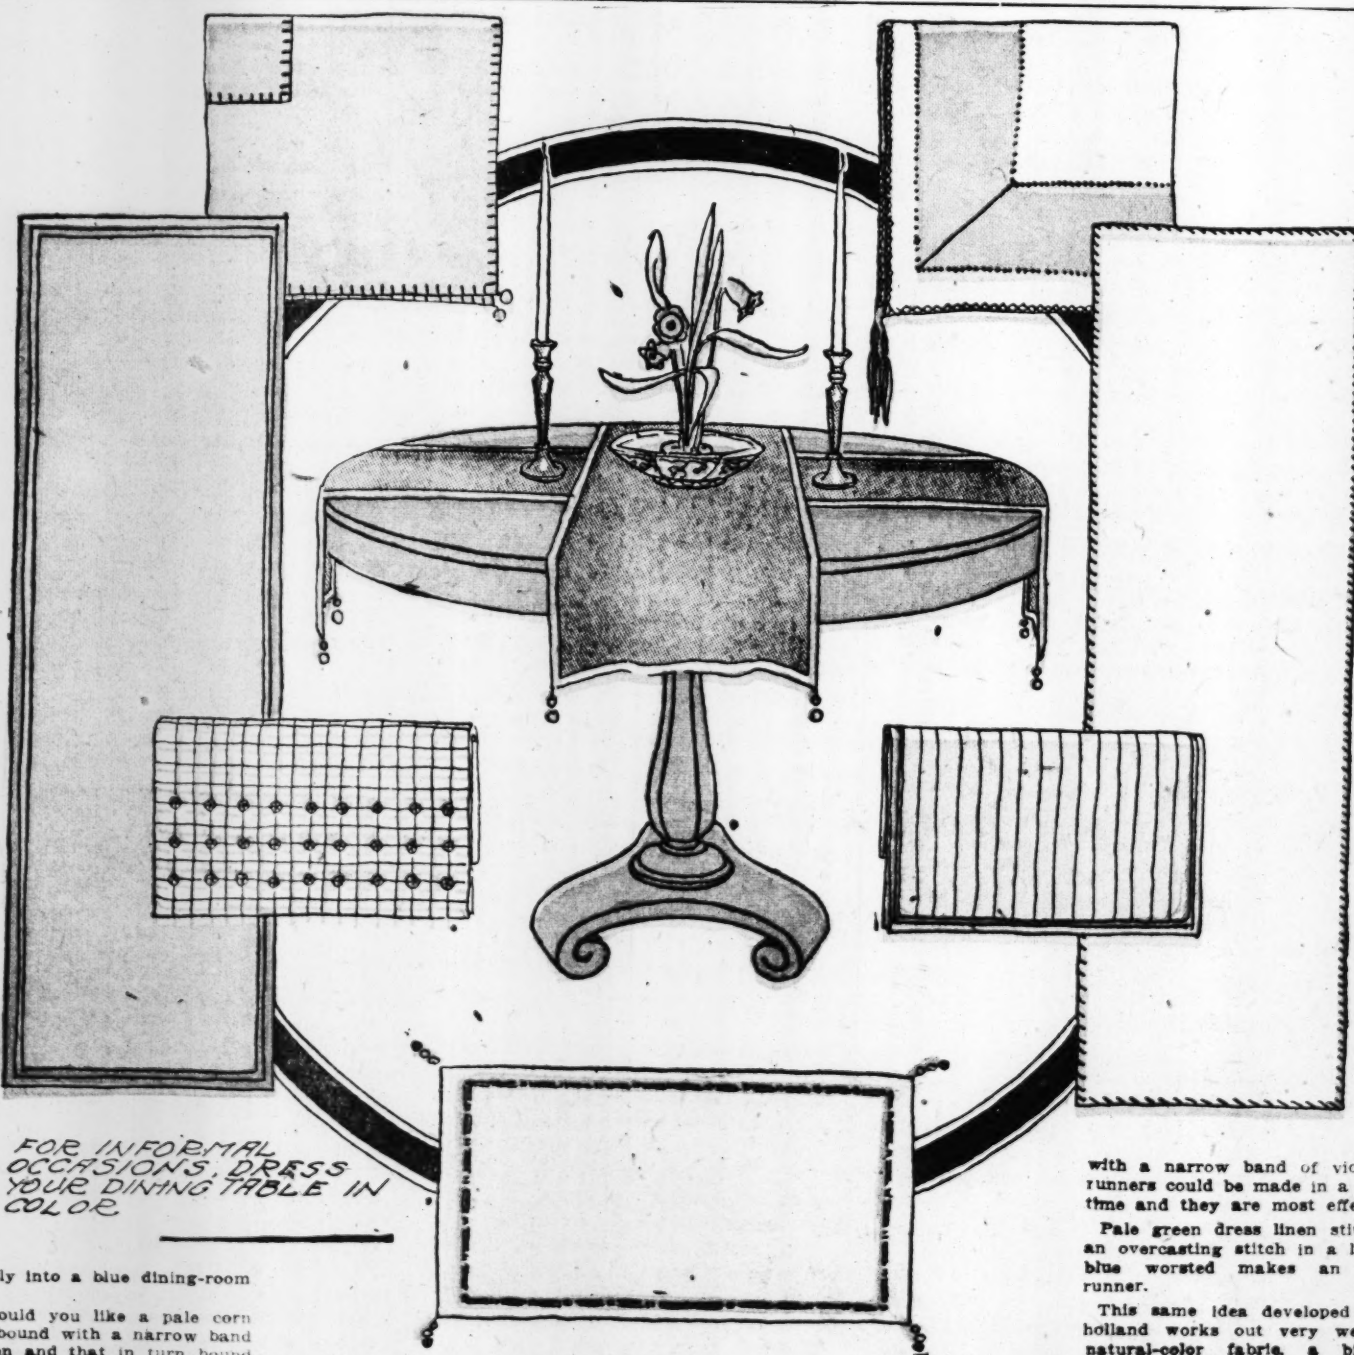

Square covers are effective when trimmed with bands of contrasting color. The cover shown in the upper right hand of the sketch uses a deep band of color with mitered corners, a couple of inches from the edge. This cloth could very successfully be developed in yellow cotton crepe, using violet for the border. Cat-stitch in the hem and make for the corners tassels of yellow worsted with violet beads. For a breakfast cloth, especially in a yellow room, such a development will be so attractive that it will give to many who see it that little "happy feeling" which persons sensitive to color can appreciate.

In a blue dining room, a tea, breakfast or luncheon cloth which will be very lovely, the inexpensive, is a copen blue cotton crepe cloth trimmed with violet. Blanket-stitch the hem and also a square near the center of the cloth, allowing for as large a "centerpiece" as personal taste may dictate. Blanket-stitching in the outline of a square centerpiece makes unnecessary an additional dolly in the center. Violet worsted on the soft, open blue with violet wooden beads fastened to the corners by means of worsted will be altogether charming.

As for table runners, one can do ever so many things with them. How would you like a blue-and-white-barred dish toweling with cross stitches done in orange mercerized floss working out a pattern three rows deep on either end? This type of runner would fit very nicely into a blue dining-room scheme.

Or how would you like a pale corn dress linen bound with a narrow band of jade green and that in turn bound with a narrow band of violet? Such runners could be made in a very short time and they are most effective.

Pale green dress linen stitched with an overcasting stitch in a light coped blue worsted makes an attractive runner.

This same idea developed in cotton holland works out very well. On a natural-color fabric, a binding of orange linen, with that binding in turn bound with a jade green linen, is really lovely.

Pale green dress linen, with the hem stitched in with overcasting stitches of light coped worsted, makes another attractive idea for runners and matching covers for the buffet, tea wagon, etc.

Likewise, pale gray linen or cotton crepe bound with jade green and given tassels of orange worsted and wooden beads offers another attractive scheme. On such runners, a Japanese flower bowl, one of the kind lined with jade green, you know, would be quite irrefutable. To heighten the colors used in any of these runners, always be sure that your bowl in the center repeats at least one of the color notes used in the runners or covers.

If you are one of the women who prefers having nothing but a centerpiece upon her dining table when not in use, then avail yourself of the suggestion offered in the small oblong cover shown in the bottom of the sketch. Of lemon yellow, it should be given an inch hem, which is the guide for some clever little stitches. Use three horizontal stitches and then two vertical ones and continue thus. Use orange worsted or mercerized, whichever you prefer, for the former and black for the latter. Make your four tassels effects of three orange wooden beads strung one on top of the other.

After you have used any one of these covers, you will learn for yourself how practical they are and how much they change the whole atmosphere of your dining room. They make it a far more sunshiny place.

The Traveling Costume

FOR traveling garb the practical costume is the most elegant. Elegance this season consists chiefly in simplicity. A tailleur of some very serviceable material worn with a blouse of wash silk, with hat and veil and shoes to match, will win the approval of women who know how to dress.

One smart tailleur from the house of a French designer is made of navy serge and trimmed with a bit of embroidery in white. The coat is enhanced by narrow red and green stripes and the sleeves, of three-quarter length, are lined with white velveteen. A lighter but equally effective tailleur is made of sand-colored gabardine. The coat is short and ends in the back in a belt which in its turn fastens under the loose-front basque. This coat is lined with a material striped in red, black and yellow.

No traveling costume is complete without a coat of thick plain material or of Scotch plaid for chilly days and evenings. One very attractive model of brown duvetyne is made with a square cape which is worked into the sleeves. A large and comfy traveling wrap of French design chooses gray whitycord as its material. There is a gay lining of material striped in yellow, gray and black. The lining fabric is used for the collar and as a trimming for the sleeves.

For the traveler's hat, nothing could be smarter than a three-cornered model of tan straw. The three-cornered effect of this hat is emphasized by two large black quills which are stuck in the front of the hat.

Another smart millinery model is a small toque of red lisle. There is a trimming of coq feathers which are gummed together to form two up-standing quills in the front.

Smart Costumes Make Much of Ribbon

THIS is a ribbon year, says Paris, and every smart frock, in foundation or finish, should have its touch of ribbon. Ribbons are found in a great variety of designs suited for every possible use, but the smartest of them will invariably be the circle or varnished variety.

Certain smart spring frocks boast of panels of ribbon. There are broad ribbon panels at the sides and narrow floating panels in front. In some cases the panels are caught under the hem at the bottom of the skirt.

A smart variation of a georgette model has a vest-like bodice made of wide brocade ribbon. Shirrings of a very narrow width head the skirt and outline a flounce.

Girdles, of course, will make the most of ribbons. A unique sash girdle, straight from Paris, is made of wide crepe de chine ribbon printed in an oriental design. The ribbon encircles the waist twice and ties at the left side with a short loop above the waistline and a long one below. The end, longer than either of the loops, is thrown over the top.

A rather narrow girdle of purple and gold ribbon has a wreath of flowers made of ribbon in pastel shades combined with wheat heads.

Black satin ribbon makes a very modish and becoming ruff. The ends of ribbon are wider toward the back where it is finished by streamer ends. Naturally one would expect to find bags of ribbon designed to be carried with ribbon costumes. There are many of them and all are beautiful. One attractive bag of brown taffeta ribbon is made with four panels. At the top of the bag are overlapping panels edged with pleated satin ribbon.
